BIG FOUR MUST GO TO JAIL.

The Court of Appeals Decides Against the Guttenburg Magnates.

Trenton, N. J., May 14.—The court of errors and appeals has affirmed by a unanimous vote the action of the supreme court in sustaining the verdict and sentence against the Guttenburg big four, namely: Dennis McLaughlin, Gottfried Walbaum, Nicholas Crusius and John H. Carr. These men were convicted of keeping a disorderly house by maintaining a winter race track at Gutzenburg. They were sentence to a year in the penitentiary and to pay a fine of $1,000 each. Their only hope now lies in the favorable action of the court of pardons. It is not generally beleived, however, that the court will let them go free.

Herr Ugren Makes an Attack on Premier Banffy.

Herr Ugren concluded his speech by demanding that Banffy should say whether or not he had resigned his office. Baron Banffy made no reply to the attack, which provoked a great uproar in the chamber.

Physicians

prescribe Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil and Hypophosphites because they find their patients can tolerate it for a long time, as it does not upset the stomach nor derange the digestion like the plain oil.

Scott's Emulsion is as much easier to digest than the plain oil as milk is easier to digest than butter. Besides, the fish-fat taste is taken out of the oil, and it is almost palatable. The way sickly children, emaciated, anæmic and consumptive adults, gain flesh on Scott's Emulsion is very remarkable.

Don't be persuaded to accept a substitute.

GRAPE CROP RUINED

Chautauqua Belt Vineyards a Blackened Waste.

Loss Estimated at Between $1,500,000 and $2,000,000—The Crop Would Have Been Bigger This Year Than Last—Some Growers Returning to Old Style Farming.

Dunkirk, N. Y., May 14.—Frost has ruined the entire grape crop of the Chautauqua grape belt. The loss is at least one and one-half million dollars. That figure was the value of last year's crop, and by reason of new acreage coming into bearing the crop this year would have been much larger. The Chautauqua grape belt extends through Erie county, westward to Erie. It occupies a strip from five to eight miles in width along the southern shores of Lake Erie.

35,000 Acres of Blackened Ruins.

The number of acres bearing grapes last year was 26,000. This year 35,000 acres would have been bearing. The vines were loaded down with [illegible] buds Sunday and to-day from one end of the belt to the other the vineyards are nothing but blackened ruins and have the appearance of having been visited by fire. Three thousand six hundred freight cars were loaded from the belt last season. The total number of baskets reached 10,800,000. To this number 3,000,000 might safely be added for increased acreage this year.

Everything Destroyed.

Here at Dunkirk the thermometer fell to 25 degrees. Every vine is destroyed. Silver Creek last year shipped 2,200 cars. This place is remarkably well sheltered. Everything is destroyed. At Forestville every farmer has planted every available acre to grapes, and the frost last night ruined every vine. Other fruit suffered nearly as much. There will be no cherries. At Ripley last year they shipped 400 cars. This year it will not have one basket of grapes. The grape growers are demoralized and do not know what they will do. The thermometer fell to 4 degrees below freezing.

Will Return to Old Style Farming.

At Westfield the vines are entirely cut down. Some growers will plow up their vineyards and return to the old style of general farming. Brockton, generally known as the centre of the Chautauqua grape belt, is in mourning to-day. Nothing is raised there but grapes, and the frost last night cut them all down. Gerry Rickman, the millionaire grape grower and wine manufacturer, says the loss in the belt by reason of the destruction done to the grape will reach at least $2,000,000. His own loss he estimates at $250,000. At Fredonia nothing of the grape crop can be saved. Had fire gone through the vineyards it could not have been more thorough in its effects.

PRATT CITY SWEPT BY FIRE.

Thirty Dwellings, Hotel, City Hall and a Church Destroyed.

Birmingham, Ala., May 14.—Fire broke out yesterday afternoon in a small dwelling house at Pratt City, three miles from here, and with a strong gale blowing soon spread until thirty dwellings, the hotel, city hall and Northern Methodist church were burned. Dynamite was finally resorted to and several houses blown up, thereby stopping the onward march of the fiery elements. No lives were lost.

TERROR AT CRIPPLE CREEK.

Two Desperate Mine Leaders Shot Down by a Marshal.

Cripple Creek, May 14.—Jack Smith, the famous leader of the Bull Hill miners, was shot and killed by marshal Jack Kelly of Altman, last night. The marshal also shot George Popst, a desperate miner who was with Smith. The shooting has caused a reign of terror in the gold camp. The miners threaten to avenge the death of their war captain and all saloons have been closed in Victor and Altman. Acts of violence are expected at any money. Sunday night Jack Smith shot out all the lights in Dan Foley's saloon in Victor. Yesterday morning he was arrested and placed under bonds. As soon as he was released he went to Altman, the miners' camp, and proceeded to terrorize the inhabitants. Marshal Kelly ordered him out of town; Smith opened fire and Popst stood by him. Kelly returned the fire and shot down both men, escaping injury himself.

NO PAY SINCE MARCH.

U. S. Court Officials in New York in a State of Great Agitation.

New York, May 14.—Deputy United States marshals in the federal building were to-day in a state of agitation and excitement bordering on anarchy. They have not received any pay since March, and had been notified that they would not receive any further remuneration for services rendered, or to be rendered, until after August 1, and then only for such services as shall have been rendered during the month of July, on the first day of which month the new fiscal year will begin. The judges' expenses, expenses of courts, witness and jurors' fees have not yet been paid for April. From all that could be learned to-day it was made clear that the same financial condition prevailed here which, a week ago, caused United States District Judge Coxe to close his court in Utica, N. Y.

JACKSON SEES CLEVELAND.

The Justice Calls at the White House by Appointment.

Washington, May 14.—Justice Jackson of the United States supreme court was yesterday in conference with President Cleveland at the white house. The president came in from Woodley, and the meeting with the justice was evidently by appointment. Considerable interest was shown in the occurrence. At the white house Private Secretary Thurber said that Justice Jackson's call upon the president had no special significance; that he simply called to pay his respects and have a few words with the president before starting homeward. Thurber said the income tax was not mentioned during the interview, the conversation being about crops in the south and general topics.

MISS DODGE IS COMFORTABLE.

Hitt and Coggswell No Better; Almy and Gresham Improving.

Washington, May 14.—Miss Abigail Dodge (Gail Hamilton) spent a comfortable night and her physician now has no doubt as to her ultimate recovery. Representative Robert Hitt is still very ill but is, if anything, a trifle better than this time last week. Representative Coggswell, of Massachusetts, is no better than he was yesterday. The cool weather of yesterday had a beneficial effect upon Admiral Almy, whose condition was greatly improved during the past forty-eight hours. Secretary Gresham is apparently recovering from the illness which has confined him to his apartment for the past fortnight. His physician reports him as being "decidedly better" this morning.

MOORE BAKER ASSAULTED.

Sandbagged Near His Home at New Brunswick, New Jersey.

New Brunswick, N. J., May 14.—Moore Baker, of Franklin Park, who last year killed two negroes after they had brained his wife and child after attempting to burglarize his home, was set upon by three negroes and sandbagged on Saturday night last at a lonely spot between New Brunswick and his home and seriously injured. It is believed that the motive for the assault was revenge for the part Baker took in last year's tragedy. Since then relatives of the dead negroes have sworn vengeance on Baker, and only one week ago he was attacked by some unknown parties, but managed to escape. Baker will recover, but will be disfigured for life. There is no clue to his assailants.

MAY BENEFIT BUCHANAN

Dr. Scheele's Tests of Morphine and Alkaloid.

Chemical Results at the Trial of Buchanan Proven To Be Unreliable—Experiments Made on Rabbits. Creation of a State Medical Office Advocated.

New York, May 14.—Dr. Walter T. Scheele lectured at Tower hall yesterday afternoon before several physicians, and made tests of morphine and animal alkaloids obtained from two dead rabbits which gave the same reactions. He held, accordingly that in the case of Mrs. Buchanan, for whose death death Dr. Buchanan was sentenced to be electrocuted, the chemical tests for morphine found in the dead woman's stomach were not conclusive evidence that her death had been caused by morphine.

Called the Trial a Farce.

"I do not wish to criticize," said Dr. Scheele, "anybody who testified in the case, but it is a mistake in the first place not to have produced the morphine which it had been claimed was found in Mrs. Buchanan's body." Dr. Scheele called the Buchanan trial a farce of seven weeks' expert testimony. Such a farce, he added, could not have happened in Europe, where they had made laws for just such cases. Dr. Scheele advocated the creation of a state chemist office, such an officer to be simply called as a witness and not as an expert for the prosecution whose testimony the defense would try to controvert.

Effect Against Morphine Poisoning.

Dr. George Wheelock Grover followed Dr. Scheele in a few remarks, in the course of which he said that no man living could have accurately determined what caused the death of Mrs. Buchanan. From the evidence of the doctors attending Mrs. Buchanan shortly before death he felt that she could hardly have been poisoned by morphine. Dr. Scheele produced a letter he had received from Prof. Victor C. Vaughn, dean of Ann Arbor university, in which he says: "The chemical evidence of the existence of these poisons (morphine and atropine) as given by experts for the prosecution at the time of the trial were, in my opinion, wholly inadequate."

May Be Resentenced This Week.

Sing Sing, N. Y., May 14.—Warden Sage has not yet made up his mind when he will have Dr. Buchanan, the wife murderer, taken to New York for resentence. He is waiting for instructions from District Attorney Fellows. If the papers are ready this week Buchanan will be taken to New York by State Detective Jackson.

She was a steerage passenger, and to an acquaintance she had made on the steamer she said her mother died several years ago and that her father died on May 1 of last year. She was seen in tears a number of times, and when her friend attempted to console her she would reply by saying that it would be all right on May 1.

TOWN AND HOME FAVORITE.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., MAY 14, 1895.

Col. Moore will be a loss to the New York Street Cleaning Department, but The Press is confident that New York will place him higher in recognition of his ability and worth.

All honest pensioners, and all loyal subjects of the Government, will find food for reflection in the matter today made public by The Press in the case of Wm. H. Ludlow. Commissioner Murphy shows that Ludlow lost what he was enjoying, only through his own eagerness to get more. The attack on the honesty of the administration is effectually refuted, and it is shown that full justice was done. Anyone doubting the authenticity of the documents, may examine them in the office of The Daily Press, in whose custody they have been left.

SKETCHES OF LINCOLN.

Beginning Life on His Own Account.

SECOND TRIP TO NEW ORLEANS.

Early Superstitions—Another Visitation of the "Milk Sick"—Abe Attains His Majority—His Business Ability and Physical Prowess—Clerk In a Store.

[From "The Life of Lincoln" by William H. Herndon and Jesse W. Weik. Copyright, 1888, by Jesse W. Weik. Copyright, 1892, by D. Appleton & Co.]

V.

Although gay, prosperous and light hearted, these people were brimming over with superstition. It was at once their food and drink. They believed in the baneful influence of witches, pinned their faith to the curative power of wizards in dealing with sick animals and shot the image of a witch with a silver ball to break the spell she was supposed to have over human beings. They followed with religious minuteness the directions of the water wizard, with his magic divining rod, and the faith doctor who wrought miraculous cures by strange sounds and signals to some mysterious agency. The flight of a bird in at the window, the breath of a horse on a child's head, the crossing by a dog of a hunter's path, all betokened evil luck in store for some one. The moon exercised greater influence on the actions of the people and the growth of vegetation than the sun and all the planetary system combined. Fence rails could only be cut in the light of the moon and potatoes planted in the dark of the moon. Trees and plants which bore their fruit above ground could be planted when the moon shone full. Soap could only be made in the light of the moon, and it must only be stirred in one way and by one person. They had the horror of Friday which with many exists to this day. Nothing was to be begun on that unlucky day, for if the rule were violated an endless train of disasters was sure to follow.

Surrounded by people who believed in these things, Lincoln grew to manhood. With them he walked, talked and labored, and from them he also absorbed whatever of superstition showed itself in him thereafter. His early Baptist training made him a fatalist up to the day of his death, and listening in boyish wonder to the legends of some toothless old dame led him to believe in the significance of dreams and visions. His surroundings helped to create that unique character which in the eyes of a great portion of the American people was only less curious and amusing than it was august and noble.

The winter of 1829 was marked by another visitation of that dreaded disease, "the milk sick." It was making the usual ravages among the cattle. Human victims were falling before it every day, and it caused the usual stampede in southern Indiana. Dennis Hanks, discouraged by the prospect and grieving over the loss of his stock, proposed a move further westward. Returning emigrants had brought encouraging news of the newly developed state of Illinois. Vast stretches of rich alluvial lands were to be had there on the easiest of terms.

His land groaned under the weight of a long neglected encumbrance, and, like many of his neighbors, he was ready for another change. Having disposed of his land to James Gentry, and his grain and stock to young David Turnham, he loaded his household effects into a wagon drawn by two yoke of oxen, and in March, 1830, started for Illinois. The two daughters of Mrs. Lincoln had meanwhile married Dennis Hanks and Levi Hall, and with these additions the party numbered 13 in all. Abe had just passed his twenty-first birthday.

After a fortnight of rough and fatiguing travel the colony of Indiana emigrants reached a point in Illinois five miles northwest of the town of Decatur, in Macon county. John Hanks, son of that Joseph Hanks in whose shop at Elizabethtown Thomas Lincoln had learned what he knew of the carpenter's art, met and sheltered them until they were safely housed on a piece of land which he had selected for them five miles farther westward. He had preceded them over a year and had in the meantime hewed out a few timbers to be used in the construction of their cabin. With the aid of the oxen and a plow John and Abe broke up 15 acres of sod, and "Abe and myself," observes Hanks in a matter of fact way, "split rails enough to fence the place in." As they swung their axes or with wedge and maul split out the rails how strange to them the thought would have seemed that those selfsame rails were destined to make one of them immortal! If such a vision flashed before the mind of either, he made no sign of it, but each kept steadily on in his simple, unromantic task.

Beginning Life on His Own Account.

Abe had now attained his majority and began to throw from his shoulders the vexations of parental restraint. He had done his duty to his father and felt able to begin life on his own account. As he steps out into the broad and inviting world we take him up for consideration as a man.

For a long time after beginning life on his own account Abe remained in sight of the parental abode. He worked at odd jobs in the neighborhood or wherever the demand for his services called him. As late as 1831 he was still in the same parts, and John Hanks is authority for the statement that he "made 3,000 rails for Major Warnick," walking daily three miles to his work. During the intervals of leisure he read the few books obtainable and continued the practice of extemporaneous speaking to the usual audience of undemonstrative stumps and voiceless trees. His first attempt at public speaking after landing in Illinois is thus described to me by John Hanks, whose language I incorporate: "After Abe got to Decatur, or rather to Macon county, a man by the name of Posey came into our neighborhood and made a speech. It was a bad one, and I said Abe could beat it. I turned down a box, and Abe made his speech. The other man was a candidate. Abe wasn't. Abe beat him to death, his subject being the navigation of the Sangamon river. The man, after Abe's speech was through, took him aside and asked him where he had learned so much and how he could do so well. Abe replied, stating his manner and method of reading and what he had read. The man encouraged him to persevere."

For the first time we are now favored with the appearance on the scene of a very important personage—one destined to exert no little influence in shaping Lincoln's fortunes. It is Denton Offut, a brisk and venturesome business man, whose operations extended up and down the Sangamon river for many miles. Having heard glowing reports of John Hank's successful experience as a boatman in Kentucky, he had come down the river to engage the latter's services to take a boatload of stock and provisions to New Orleans. "He wanted me to go badly," observes Hanks, "but I waited awhile before answering. I hunted up Abe, and I introduced him and John Johnston, his stepbrother, to Offut. After some talk we at last made an engagement with Offut at $60 cents a day and $60 to make the trip to New Orleans.

Having loaded the vessel with pork in barrels, corn and hogs, these sturdy boatmen swung out into the stream. On April 19 they reached the town of New Salem, a place destined to be an important spot in the career of Lincoln. There they met with their first serious delay. The boat stranded on Rutledge's milldam and hung helplessly over it a day and a night. "We unloaded the boat," narrated one of the crew to explain how they obtained relief from their embarrassing situation—"that is, we transferred the goods from our boat to a borrowed one. We then rolled the barrels forward. Lincoln bored a hole in the end projecting over the dam. The water which had leaked in ran out, and we slid over." Offut was profoundly impressed with this exhibition of Lincoln's ingenuity. In his enthusiasm he declared to the crowd who covered the hill and who had been watching Lincoln's operation that he would build a steamboat to plow up and down the Sangamon, and that Lincoln should be her captain. She would have rollers for shoals and dams, runners for ice, and, with Lincoln in charge, "By thunder, she'd have to go!"

After release from their embarrassing, not to say perilous, position the boat and her crew floated away. Early in May they reached New Orleans, where they lingered a month, disposing of their cargo and viewing the sights which the Crescent City afforded.

In June the entire party, including Offut, boarded a steamboat going up the river. At St. Louis they disembarked, Offut remaining behind, while Lincoln, Hanks and Johnston started across Illinois on foot. At Edwardsville they separated, Hanks going to Springfield, while Lincoln and his stepbrother followed the road to Coles county, to which point old Thomas Lincoln had meanwhile removed. Here Abe did not tarry long, probably not over a month, but long enough to dispose most effectually of one Daniel Needham, a famous wrestler who had challenged the returned boatman to a test of strength. The contest took place at a locality known as Wabash Point. Abe threw his antagonist twice with comparative ease and thereby demonstrated such marked strength and agility as to render him forever popular with the boys of that neighborhood.

Fond of Leisure.

Lincoln's return to New Salem in August, 1831, was, within a few days, contemporaneous with the reappearance of Offut, who made the gratifying announcement that he had purchased a stock of goods which were to follow him from Beardstown. He had again retained the services of Lincoln to assist him when his merchandise should come to hand. The tall stranger—destined to be a stranger in New Salem no longer—pending the arrival of his employer's goods, lounged about the village with nothing to do. Leisure never sat heavily on him. To him there was nothing uncongenial in it, and he might properly have been dubbed at the time a "loafer." He assured those with whom he came in contact that he was a piece of floating driftwood; that after the winter of deep snow he had come down the river with the freshet. Borne along by the swelling waters and aimlessly floating about, he had accidentally lodged at New Salem. Looking back over his history, we are forced to conclude that Providence or chance, or whatever power is responsible for it, could not have assigned him to a more favorable refuge.

His introduction to the citizens of New Salem, as Mentor Graham, the schoolteacher, tells us, was in the capacity of clerk of an election board. Graham furnishes ample testimony of the facility, fairness and honesty which characterized the new clerk's work, and both teacher and clerk were soon bound together by the warmest of ties.

A few days after the election Lincoln found employment with one Dr. Nelson, who, after the style of dignitaries of later days, started with his family and effects in his "private" conveyance—which in this instance was a flatboat—for Texas. Lincoln was hired to pilot the vessel through to the Illinois river. Arriving at Beardstown, the pilot was discharged and returned on foot across the sand and hills to New Salem. In the meantime Offut's long expected goods had arrived, and Lincoln was placed in charge. Offut relied in no slight degree on the business capacity of his clerk. In his effusive way he praised him beyond reason. He boasted of his skill as a business man and his wonderful intellectual acquirements. As for physical strength and fearlessness of danger, he challenged New Salem and the entire world to produce his equal.

A Domestic Scene.

A lady relative who lived for two years with the Lincolns told me that Mr. Lincoln was in the habit of lying on the floor with the back of a chair for a pillow when he read. One evening, when in this position in the hall, a knock was heard at the front door, and although in his shirt sleeves he answered the call. Two ladies were at the door, whom he invited into the parlor, notifying them in his open, familiar way that he would "first get the women folks out." Mrs. Lincoln, from an adjoining room, witnessed the ladies' entrance and overheard her husband's jocose expression. Her indignation was so instantaneous she made the situation exceedingly interesting for him, and he was glad to retreat from the mansion. He did not return till very late at night and then slipped quietly in at a rear door.

WHY DOUGLASS FLED.

He Didn't Care to Stand Trial in Virginia in the John Brown Raid Case.

Col. Anson S. Wood, Deputy Secretary of New York State under Secretary Carr, speaking of the late Frederick Douglass's supposed complicity in the John Brown raid at Harper's Ferry, said:

"It was my good fortune, by the merest chance, to escort Douglass to Canada when he made his hurried flight following Brown's seizure of the arsenal. I was then conducting a law business at Lyons, N. Y., when the interest of a client called me suddenly to Detroit. I left late at night, and in Rochester saw in an evening paper the first startling, unverified rumors of trouble at the Ferry. At Lockport I had to change cars, and going upon the train discovered every car filled to overflowing, excepting the one next to the baggage car, which was darkened, locked and apparently empty. I tried the door, determined to enter, and had a warm discussion with the conductor, who was just as determined that I should go into a rear car. While we were arguing I was greatly surprised to see a face appear at the window of the car, and tapping upon the glass, the man within beckoned for the conductor, a moment later asking that I be admitted. After some parley this was done, and I found myself inside in the semi-darkness, facing and grasping the hand of Fred Douglass, whom I knew well.

"We remained together till Clifton, Ont., was reached early the following morning. Douglass explained that his flight was due to the knowledge that Brown must inevitably be captured, and that he would surely be arrested for complicity in the plot, which had been hatched while Brown was his guest at Rochester.

"Douglass told me that he had early known of the plot; but most emphatically denied having had any part in so hare-brained a scheme. On the contrary, he assured me that he had used every argment in his power to get Brown to give up the raid, assuring him of its certain failure; but that no arguments had any effect on the stout hearted old monomaniac. Douglass stated further that he was not at all afraid of trial by a New York State court and jury, but that his friends,—who had been hurriedly called together that very afternoon—had united in the belief that he would certainly be dragged to Virginia, where conviction would be equally certain to follow. Acting upon their advice, he had reluctantly decided to seek safety in Canada.

"We parted company once upon British soil, the much relieved conductor releasing us as soon as we were fairly upon the Suspension Bridge. Douglass had been placed in his care by high officials of the New York Central Road, who were among the friends summoned to the conclave at the former's house. The conductor stated then that he was a badly frightened man when he saw that I was so determined to enter the car, as he feared that I was a detective who had obtained some inkling of the flight, and that in fancy he already saw himself in prison for abetting high treason. I understand that he was subsequently richly rewarded for his part in the affair, and I can testify to his faithfulness."

The term "Black Giant," formerly so often used in speaking of Douglass, was once coined by the colored orator, and was first used. Col. Wood says, by himself at Doulgass's request, in introducing the latter as lecturer at Lyons in February, 1858. Douglass conceived it as a contrast to Stephen A. Doulgass' pet name, "The Little Giant."

Loyal To His State

Kentuckians are always proud of their State in whatever department of human labor they may hold place. Not long ago a widow went to see a marble cutter to get a tombstone for her late husband. She selected a plain one from his stock and gave him an inscription to put on it.

"Can't do that, ma'am," he said, politely when he had read it.

"Why not," she asked in surprise. "I'm paying for it."

"Yes'm; but I can't put that on. I stretch my conscience a good many times in what I put on a tombstone, but I ain't going to tell a plain lie when I know it."

The widow was greatly shocked and insisted on his explaining what he meant.

"Well ma'am," he said, you've got here 'gone to a better land,' and that ain't so, ma'am. There ain't any better land than Kentucky."

Rudeness Spelled.

The English are not noted for their wit, but when one does make a sarcastic remark the American can usually return it with interest. The Duchess was in a rather bad humor when in the course of a conversation she said to a woman of our town: "Why, is it, Mrs. X., that Americans from the Southern States are so much more refined and courteous than those from the northern part of your country?"

"I don't know, I am sure," replied Mrs. X., "unless it is that the North was settled by the English and the South by other nationalities."

ROMANCE OF A NUN.

Her Northern Lover Shot as a Spy by His Southern Rival.

"One day I was strolling through the orange fields of a place on the gulf of Mexico," said M. P. Corcoran of New Orleans, "with Father Bally when we suddenly approached the figure of a nun. She was tall and shapely, and though her face was perfectly white her beauty was such that I paused involuntarily and exclaimed, 'There is a picture for an artist.'

"Father Bally returned dryly that hers was not physical beauty, but beauty of the soul. I replied that I could well believe that, having looked for a moment into her dark, soulful eyes. I saw her frequently thereafter and had no difficulty in learning of her past, for every one seemed to be acquainted with her romantic career.

"Before the war she was the only daughter of an extremely wealthy planter and lived in one of the large, handsome homesteads which then were so often seen in the land of Dixie. She had been educated in Paris and had acquired all the graces which are supposed to accompany a perfect education in the fine arts. As she was an heiress she had many admirers, one of whom was a southerner, while another lived in the north, having met the accomplished girl in Paris. There was a hot race for her hand, but her heart evidently inclined to the latter suitor, who was graceful and talented and altogether a worthy young fellow. The southerner witnessed his rival's success with much chagrin, and when the announcement of the engagement was made he was heard to remark that he would kill his hated rival at the altar. However, the wedding bells did not ring, for war troubles were imminent. The lovers took a sorrowful farewell, vowing to be loyal to each other, though he perforce was going to join the ranks of the enemy of the south and assist in putting down the Confederacy.

"The denouement to the story was sad and startling. One day a man, worn out and travel stained, sought refuge at the house and was admitted into the young woman's presence. She gave a cry of rapture, for it was her northern lover, and then exclaimed with consternation:

"'How did you get here?'

"'By crossing the line.'

"'But if you are found here they will kill you.'

"'I could not resist seeing you.'

"Then, in an agitated manner, she informed him that a detachment of southern soldiers was encamped beyond the small wood and that the officer in command was his former rival.

"At this moment the door was burst open, and a number of soldiers entered the room.

"'Ah, here is the spy!' said a voice. It was the southern rival.

"The young woman threw herself before the southerner.

"'You know he is no spy!' she exclaimed.

"'Well, he will be shot as one.'

"'Have you no mercy?'

"'What mercy have you had for me? He shall die like a dog!'

"'See,' she implored. 'I beg on my knees. Could you not withdraw your men or so arrange it that he may return?'

"'Possibly I could.'

"'And you will?'

"'On one condition.'

"'Name it!'

"He bent over her and whispered in her ear.

"'Never!' she exclaimed.

"'Then he shall die.'

"'Not as a spy!' exclaimed the northerner, rushing for the window. There was a sharp report. The northerner staggered, placed his hands to his breast, and then fell to the floor, dead, shot by his rival before the eyes of the young woman who had been the occasion of the bitter vendetta. She became a nurse and after the war retired to a convent, where doubtless she still cherishes the memory of her lover.

Catarrh starts in the nasal passages, affecting eyes, ears and throat, and is, in fact, the great enemy of the mucous membrane. Neglected colds in the head almost invariably precede catarrh, causing an excessive flow of mucous, and if the mucous discharge becomes interrupted the disagreeable results of catarrh will follow, such as bad breath, severe pain across forehead and about the eyes, a roaring and buzzing sound in the ears and oftentimes a very offensive discharge. Ely's Cream Balm is the acknowledged cure for these troubles.

PIERRE RAISES SPIDERS.

Sells Them to Wine Merchants. They Make a New Wine Bottle Look Old.

There is but one spider farm in the United States. As far as the writer can learn there are only two in the world. Entomologists have collected and raised spiders for purposes of scientific observation and investigation, just as bacilli and other unpleasant animals are nurtured. Here and there a spider has been made a pet of by some lonely prisoner of Chillon or the Tombs, but spider farming as a money making industry is yet in its infancy. What in the world is done with a crop of spiders? you ask. One has only to go four miles from Philadelphia on the old Lancaster pike and ask for the farm of Pierre Grantaire to see what can be found nowhere else in this country, and abroad only in a little French village in the Department of the Loire.

Pierre Grantaire furnishes spiders at so much per hundred for distribution in the wine vaults of the merchant and the nouveaux riche. His trade is chiefly with the wholesale merchant, who is able to stock a cellar with new, shining, freshly labeled bottles and in three months see them veiled in filmy cobwebs, so that the effect of twenty years of storage is secured at a small cost. The effect upon a customer can be imagined and is hardly to be measured in dollars and cents. It is a trifling matter to cover the bins with dust. That effect is easy to the veriest tyro in the wine trade. But cobwebs—that is a different matter—cobwebs spun from cork to cork, cobwebs that drape the slender neck like delicate lace when the flask is brought to the light, the seal of years of slow mellowing and fruition.

How the Price of Meat is Controlled.

New developments are coming to light daily showing the manner in which the consumer of meat is robbed. There are in the United States controlled by the Beef Trust over 1,200 retail shops. Seven-eighths of these are owned by the members of the trust. Every morning each one receives a telegram or circular from the Beef Trust, informing its manager as to what prices he shall charge that day for the meat he has on hand. Armour & Co., alone, at the Chicago Stock Yards, employ a force of between 25 and 35 men whose sole duty it is to decipher, write and telegraph messages to these firms and to the wholesale dealers throughout the country who are under the denomination of the trust.

A great deal has been said by the wholesale dealers and their masters, the trust, in an effort to make it appear that the middlemen—that is, the retail butchers—are the ones who are responsible for the increase, out of all proportion to the decrease in cattle, in the prices of meat to their customers. As a matter of fact, the trust itself fixes these prices. It determines not only what the retail dealer shall pay to the wholesaler for his meats, but absolutely fixes the price at which the retailer shall sell his steak or chop to the consumer. The method of doing this is in consonance with every other trick of the trust.

If a small dealer determines that a profit of 15 per cent. on his meats is all he needs to make a fair profit out of his business, and therefore sells steaks at 18 cents a pound for which the retail shop owned by the trust on the next corner is charging 20 cents a pound, he will probably do business until the trust discovers that he is not robbing the public enough. Then he is not only undersold by the trust shop on the corner, but is also told when he goes to buy his beef from the wholesaler that the price to him has risen from 5 to 10 and sometimes in extreme cases 25 per cent.

Every Cause for Precaution.

"No, he's taking home a porterhouse steak."—Chicago Record.

"No, sir," replied Meandering Mike. "I'm a firm believer in the principle that the officer should seek the man, not the man the officer."—Washington Star.

HEAD OF THE MEAT TRUST.

Phil. D. Armours Modest Beginning as a Farmer Boy.

Philip D. Armour's first great operation in provisions was in New York City in the spring of 1865. Born in Northern New York in 1832, he was apprenticed to a farmer. He went to California during the height of the gold excitement, in 1852, and accumulated a modest income. In 1858 he went to Milwaukee and, with John Plankinton, formed the partnership of Plankinton & Armour, in the pork packing business.

In 1865 he and his partner thought the rebellion was about over. Pork was selling at $40 a barrel and the New York operators, who thought the rebellion was nowhere near an end, were buying all that was offered, spot and future, believing that it would go up to $60. Carefully arranging his plans, Armour came to New York and began selling pork short.

His advent caused a sensation, but the sharpers here thought they had a soft thing and bought all the pork that Armour could sell. He was so persistent that he broke the market. In a short time came the news of the fall of Petersburg, then of Richmond and then of the surrender of Lee, and Armour bought in the pork he had sold at $40 at $18 a barrel.

His success in this one deal made him a millionaire. His operations expanded, too, and from the small packer he became the largest pork and beef dealer in the world. He established packing houses in Chicago and Kansas City, and in 1875 went to Chicago to live.

He revolutionized the beef packing and cattle buying business there, and now in his various establishments throughout the country, employs more than 12,000 men. The yearly distributive sales of his Chicago house alone are in excess of the gross annual receipts of any railroad in the world. The value of his business annually is estimated to be somewhere in the neighborhood of $120,000,000.

He has had few setbacks in his business operations, though he has dealt in grain as well as provisions and has engineered several big deals. In 1878 it appeared to many that there would be an enormous supply of pork, and that the product was likely to become very cheap. Operators in the Chicago Board of Trade thought it a good time to make money and began selling pork. It happened that Armour was manufacturing more pork than ever and was forced by the speculators to support the market. It took more than $2,000,000 for him to keep the price up, and in the spring of 1879 he had effected a deal with other packers by means of which, though there was still plenty of hogs, the manufactured product became scarce.

How this was done Mr. Armour knows only, but the fact remains that the price of pork began to climb and kept steadily rising until Armour had recovered all his losses and made two or three million dollars besides.

Many of the small fry speculators who were on the side of the bear combination were ruined, and the big operators and other packers conceived a respect for Armour's ability which has since never been lessened, nor permitted them to attempt to do anything with beef or pork which was not in line with his always well known interests.

His wealth is put down at $40,000,000. He is a most affable man in business affairs, and popular socially. He is an indefatigable worker, being engaged in his office daily from 7 A. M. to 6 P. M. He is also a very charitable man, giving away thousands of dollars annually to deserving charities.

He has two sons, Philip D. Armour, Jr., and Jonathan Ogden Armour. They are both partners in their father's business, and are fully as shrewd and capable business men.

The Secret of His Success.

A lady once crossed a street where a little boy was busily sweeping the crossing. She noticed with pleasure the care with which he did his work and smiled as she said to him, "Yours is the cleanest crossing I pass." He lifted his cap with a gallant air and quickly said, "I am doing my best."

All day the words rang in her ears, and for many days afterward; and when a friend, a rich, influential man, inquired for a boy to do errands and general work for him she told him of the little fellow at the crossing. "A boy who would do his best at a street crossing is worth a trial with me," said the man, and he found the boy, engaged him for a month, and at the end of that time was so pleased with him that he sent him to school and fitted him for a high position, which he filled with honor. "Doing my best at the street crossing made a successful man of me," he was wont to say in after years."—Home.

Getting Real Comfort.

"I owe more comfort," said Mr. Johnson, "to my shoemaker than I do to any other man."

"Why, how is that," said Mr. Billings, "when you are always complaining about tight shoes?"

"Well, every evening when I take off my shoes and put on my slippers the comfort I feel is simply intense!"—Youth's Companion.

MUNYON PRAYED FOR.

A Prominent Divine Invokes God's Blessings on the Eminent Professor.—He Declares the Remedies are Worth Their Weight in Gold.

Rev. W. E. Andrews, of Westfield, Mass., writes:

"I wish to add my testimony in favor of Munyon's Homœopathic Home Remedies to the mass that has already been published. I have use the Cold Cure, Dyspepsia Cure, Nerve Cure and Headach Cure in my family with perfect satisfaction. These remedies are worth their weight in gold. In my family they have cured the worst cases of cold in one day, and dyspepsia of seven years' standing was cured with three vials of the Dyspepsia Cure. I have had very severe headaches, which were driven away in half an hour by the Headache Cure. My wife suffered greatly from sleeplessness, and one vial of Nerve Cure gave her perfect relief. I sincerely pray God's blessing upon the proprietors of such valuable remedies."

Munyon's Stomach and Dyspepsia Cure cures all forms of indigestion and stomach troubles such as constipation, rising of food, distress after eating, bloating of the stomach, palpitation of the heart, shortness of breath and all affections of the heart cause by indigestion. It soothes, heals, and invigorates stomachs that have been weakened by over-eating, or where the lining of the stomach has been impaired by physic and other injurious medicines. Price 25 cents.

Munyon's Homœopathic Home Remedy Company, of Philadelphia, put up specifics for nearly every disease, which are sold by all druggists, mostly for 25 cents a bottle.

Those who are in doubt as to the nature of their disease should address Professor Munyon, 1505 Arch street, Philadelphia, giving full symptoms of their disease. Professor Munyon will carefully diagnose the case and give you the benefit of his advice absolutely free of all charge. The Remedies will be sent to any address on receipt of retail price.

SKETCHES OF LINCOLN.

Nancy Hanks Passes Over the Dark River.

LITTLE ABE'S DISMAL EXPERIENCE.

Thomas Lincoln's Brief Widowerhood—He Marries Sally Bush Johnston—Two Sets of Children in the Lincoln Household. Abe at Dorsey's School.

[From "The Life of Lincoln" by William H. Herndon and Jesse W. Weik. Copyright, 1888, by Jesse W. Weik. Copyright, 1892, by D. Appleton & Co.]

III.

In the fall of 1818 the scantily settled region in the vicinity of Pigeon creek, where the Lincolns were then living, suffered a visitation of that dread disease common in the west in early days and known in the vernacular of the frontier as "the milk sick." It hovered like a specter over the Pigeon creek settlement for over ten years, and its fatal visitation and inroads among the Lincolns, Hankses and Sparrows finally drove that contingent into Illinois. To this day the medical profession have never agreed upon any definite cause for the malady, or have they in all their scientific wranglings determined exactly what the disease itself is.

Early in October of the year 1818 Thomas and Betsy Sparrow fell ill of the disease and died within a few days of each other. Thomas Lincoln performed the services of undertaker. With his whipsaw he cut out the lumber and with commendable promptness nailed together the rudest of coffins to inclose the forms of the dead. The bodies were borne to a scantily cleared knoll in the midst of the forest, and there, without ceremony, quietly let down into the grave. Meanwhile Abe's father had also fallen a victim to the pestilentious disease. Her sufferings, however, were destined to be of brief duration. Within a week she, too, rested from her labors.

"She struggled on day by day," says one of the household, "a good Christian woman, and died on the seventh day after she was taken sick. Abe and his sister Sarah waited on their mother and did the little jobs and errands required of them. There was no physician nearer than 35 miles. The mother knew she was going to die and called the children to her bedside. She was very weak, and the children leaned over while she gave her last message. Placing her feeble hand on little Abe's head, she told him to be kind and good to his father and sister. To both she said, 'Be good to one another,' expressing a hope that they might live, as they had been taught by her, to love their kindred and worship God." Amid the miserable surroundings of a home in the wilderness Nancy Hanks passed across the dark river. Though of lowly birth, the victim of poverty and hard usage, she takes a place in history as the mother of a son who liberated a race of men. At her side stands another mother whose Son performed a similar service for all mankind 1,800 years before.

After the death of their mother little Abe and his sister Sarah began a dreary life—indeed one more cheerless and less inviting seldom falls to the lot of any child. In a log cabin without a floor, scantily protected from the severities of the weather, deprived of the comfort of a mother's love, they passed through a winter the most dismal either one ever experienced.

A Matter of Fact Courtship.

Thomas Lincoln's widowerhood was brief. He had scarcely mourned the death of his first wife a year until he reappeared in Kentucky at Elizabethtown in search of another. His admiration had centered for a second time on Sally Bush, the widow of Daniel Johnston, the jailer of Hardin county, who had died several years before of a disease known as the "cold plague." The tradition still kept alive in the Kentucky neighborhood is that Lincoln had been a suitor for the hand of the lady before his marriage to Nancy Hanks, but that she had rejected him for the hand of the more fortunate Johnston. However that may have been, it is certain that he began his campaign in earnest this time, and after a brief siege won her heart. He made a very short courtship," wrote Samuel Haycraft to me in a letter on Dec. 7, 1866. "He came to see her on the 1st day of December, 1819, and in a straightforward manner told her that they had known each other from childhood. 'Miss Johnston,' said he, 'I have no wife and you no husband. I came a purpose to marry you. I knowed you from a gal, and you knowed me from a boy. I've no time to lose, and if you're willin let it be done straight off.' She replied that she could not marry him right off, as she had some little debts which she wanted to pay first. He replied, 'Give me a list of them.' He got the list and paid them that evening. Next morning I issued the license, and they were married within 60 yards of my house."

In the eyes of her spouse she could not be regarded as a poor widow. She was the owner of a goodly stock of furniture and household goods, bringing with her among other things a walnut bureau valued at $50. What effect the new family, their collection of furniture, cooking utensils and comfortable bedding must have had on the astonished and motherless pair who from the door of Thomas Lincoln's forlorn cabin watched the well filled wagon as it came creaking through the woods can better be imagined than described. Surely Sarah and Abe, as the stores of supplies were rolled in through the doorless doorways, must have believed that a golden future awaited them. The presence and smile of a motherly face in the cheerless cabin radiated sunshine into every neglected corner. If the Lincoln mansion did not in every respect correspond to the representations made by its owner to the new Mrs. Lincoln before marriage, the latter gave no expression of disappointment or even surprise. With true womanly courage and zeal she set resolutely to work to make right that which seemed wrong. Her husband was made to put a floor in the cabin, as well as to supply doors and windows. The cracks between the logs were plastered up. A clothespress filled the space between the chimney jamb and the wall, and the mat of corn husks and leaves on which the children had slept gave way to the comfortable luxuriance of a feather bed. She washed the two orphans and fitted them out in clothes taken from the stores of her own. The work of renovation in and around the cabin continued until even Thomas Lincoln himself, under the general stimulus of the new wife's presence, caught the inspiration and developed signs of interest activity. The advent of Sarah Bush was certainly a red letter day for the Lincolns. She was not only industrious and thrifty, but gentle and affectionate, and her newly adopted children, for the first time perhaps, realized the benign influence of a mother's love. Of young Abe she was especially fond, and we have her testimony that her kindness and care for him were warmly and bountifully returned.

The two sets of children in the Lincoln household—to their credit be it said—lived together in perfect accord. Abe was in his tenth year, and his stepmother, awake to the importance of an education, made a way for him to attend school. To her he seemed full of promise, and although not so quick of comprehension as other boys, yet she believed in encouraging his every effort. He had had a few weeks of schooling under Riney and Hazel in Kentucky, but it is hardly probable that he could read. He certainly could not write.

Hazel Dorsey was Abe's first teacher in Indiana. He held forth a mile and a half from the Lincoln farm. The schoolhouse was built of round logs and was just high enough for a man to stand erect under the loft. The floor was of split logs, or what were called puncheons. The chimney was made of poles and clay, and the windows were made by cutting out parts of two logs, placing pieces of split boards a proper distance apart, and over the aperture thus formed pasting pieces of greased paper to admit light.

Abraham at School.

"He was always at school early," writes Grigsby, "and attended to his studies. He was always at the head of his class and passed us rapidly in his studies. He lost no time at home, and when he was not at work was at his books. He kept up his studies on Sunday and carried his books with him to work so that he might read when he rested from labor." Now and then, the family exchequer running low, it would be found necessary for the young rail splitter to stop school and either work with his father on the farm or render like service for the neighbors. These periods of work occurred so often and continued so long that all his school days added together would not make a year in the aggregate. When he attended school, his sister usually accompanied him. "Sally was a quick minded young woman," is the testimony of a schoolmate. "She was more industrious than Abe in my opinion. I can hear her good humored laugh now. Like her brother, she could greet you kindly and put you at ease. She was really an intelligent woman.

At Dorsey's school Abe was 10 years old. At the next one, Andrew Crawford's, he was about 14, and at Swaney's he was in his seventeenth year. The last school required a walk of over four miles, and on account of the distance his attendance was not only irregular, but brief. Schoolmaster Crawford introduced a new feature in his school, and we can imagine its effect on his pupils, whose training had been limited to the social requirements of the backwoods settlement. It was instruction in manners. One scholar was required to go outside and re-enter the room as a lady or gentleman would enter a drawing room or parlor. Another scholar would receive the first party at the door and escort him or her about the room, making polite introductions to each person in the room. How the gaunt and clumsy Abe went through with this performance we shall probably never know. If his awkward movements gave rise to any amusement, his schoolmates never revealed it.

He was now over 6 feet high and was growing at a tremendous rate, for he added two inches more before the close of his seventeenth year, thus reaching the limit of his stature. He weighed in the region of 160 pounds, was wiry, vigorous and strong. His feet and hands were large, arms and legs long and in striking contrast with his slender trunk and small head. "His skin was shriveled and yellow," declares one of the girls who attended Crawford's school. "His shoes, when he had any, were low. He wore buckskin breeches, linsey woolsey shirt and a cap made of the skin of a squirrel or coon. His breeches were baggy and lacked by several inches meeting the tops of his shoes, thereby exposing his shinbone—sharp, blue and narrow." In one branch of school learning he was a great success—that was spelling. We are indebted to Kate Roby, a pretty miss of 15, for an incident which illustrates alike his proficiency in orthography and his natural inclination to help another out of the mire. The word "defied" had been given out by Schoolmaster Crawford, but had been misspelled several times when it came Miss Roby's turn. "Abe stood on the opposite side of the room," related Miss Roby to me in 1865, "and was watching me. I began d-e-f, and then I stopped, hesitating whether to proceed with an 'i' or a 'y.' Looking up, I beheld Abe, a grin covering his face and pointing with his index finger to his eye. I took the hint, spelled the word with an 'i,' and it went through all right."

There was more or less of an attachment between Miss Roby and Abe, although the lady took pains to assure me that they were never in love. She described with self evident pleasure, however, the delightful experience of an evening's stroll down to the river with him, where they were wont to sit on the bank and watch the moon as it slowly rose over the neighboring hills. Dangling their youthful feet in the water, they gazed on the pale orb of night, as many a fond pair before them had done and will continue to do until the end of the world. One evening when thus engaged their conversation and thoughts turned on the movement of the planets. "I did not suppose that Abe, who had seen so little of the world, would know anything about it, but he proved to my satisfaction that the moon did not go down at all; that it only seemed to; that the earth, revolving from west to east, carried us under, as it were. 'We do the sinking,' he explained, 'while to us the moon is comparatively still. The moon's sinking is only an illusion.' I at once dubbed him a fool, but later developments convinced me that I was the fool, not he. He was well acquainted with the general laws of astronomy and the movements of the heavenly bodies, but where he could have learned so much or how to put it so plainly I never could understand."

Absalom Roby is authority for the statement that even at that early day Abe was a patient reader of a Louisville newspaper, which some one at Gentryville kindly furnished him. Among the books he read were the Bible, "Æsop's Fables," "Robinson Crusoe," Bunyan's "Pilgrim's Progress," a "History of the United States" and Weems' "Life of Washington." A little circumstance attended the reading of the last named book which only within recent years found its way into public print. The book was borrowed from a close fisted neighbor, Josiah Crawford, and one night, while lying on a little shelf near a crack between two logs in the Lincoln cabin during a storm, the covers were damaged by rain. Crawford—not the schoolmaster, but old "Blue Nose," as Abe and others called him—assessed the damage to his book at 75 cents, and the unfortunate borrower was required to pull fodder for three days at 25 cents a day in settlement of the account.

SKETCHES OF LINCOLN.

Remarkable Stories of His Boyhood Days.

HE READS HIS FIRST LAWBOOK.

A Terrible Backwoods Battle—A Wedding Song—Going to Mill—Restless Under Home Rule—The Trip to New Orleans and Encounter With Marauding Negroes.

[From the "Life of Lincoln" by William H. Herndon and Jesse W. Weik. Copyright, 1888, by Jesse W. Weik. Copyright, 1892, by D. Appleton & Co.]

IV.

Although imbued with a marked dislike for manual labor, it cannot be truthfully said that Lincoln was indolent. From a mental standpoint he was one of the most energetic young men of his day. He dwelt altogether in the land of thought. His deep meditation and abstraction easily induced the belief among his horny handed companions that he was lazy. In fact, a neighbor, John Romine, makes that charge. "He worked for me," testifies the latter, "but was always reading and thinking. I used to get mad at him for it. I say he was awfully lazy. He would laugh and talk, crack jokes and tell stories all the time—didn't love work half as much as his pay. He said to me one day that his father taught him to work, but he never taught him to love it." Verily there was but one Abraham Lincoln.

His chief delight during the day, if unmolested, was to lie down under the shade of some inviting tree to read and study. At night, lying on his stomach in front of the open fireplace, with a piece of charcoal he would cipher on a broad wooden shovel. When the latter was covered over on both sides, he would take his father's drawing knife or plane and shave it off clean, ready for a fresh supply of inscriptions the next day. He often moved about the cabin with a piece of chalk, writing and ciphering on boards and the flat sides of hewed logs. When every bare wooden surface had been filled with his letters and ciphers, he would erase them and begin anew.

The first lawbook Lincoln ever read was "The Statutes of Indiana." He obtained the volume from his friend David Turnham, who testifies that he fairly devoured the book in his eager efforts to abstract the store of knowledge that lay between the lids. No doubt, as Turnham insists, the study of the statutes at this early day led Abe to think of the law as his calling in maturer years. At any rate, he now began to evince no little zeal in the matter of public speaking—in compliance with the old notion, no doubt, that a lawyer can never succeed unless he has the elements of the orator or advocate in his construction—and even when at work in the field he could not resist the temptation to mount the nearest stump and practice on his fellow laborers.

ABRAHAM'S STEPMOTHER.

With all his peaceful propensities Abe was not averse to a contest of strength, either for sport or in settlement—as in one memorable case—of grievances. Personal encounters were of frequent occurrence in Gentryville in those days, and the prestige of having thrashed an opponent gave the victor marked social distinction. Green B. Taylor, with whom Abe worked the greater part of one winter on a farm, furnished me with an account of the noted fight between John Johnson, Abe's stepbrother, and William Grigsby, in which stirring drama Abe himself played an important role before the curtain was rung down. Taylor's father was the second for Johnson, and William Whitten officiated in a similar capacity for Grigsby.

"They had a terrible fight," relates Taylor, "and it soon became apparent that Grigsby was too much for Lincoln's man, Johnston. After they had fought a long time without interference, it having been agreed not to break the ring, Abe burst through, caught Grigsby, threw him off and some feet away. There he stood, proud as Lucifer, and swinging a bottle of liquor over his head swore he was 'the big buck of the lick.' 'If any one doubts it,' he shouted, 'he has only to come on and whet his horns.'" A general engagement followed his challenge, but at the end of hostilities the field was cleared, and the wounded retired amid the exultant shouts of their victors.

Keeping Close to History.

Much of the latter end of Abe's boyhood would have been lost in the midst of tradition but for the store of information and recollections I was fortunate enough to secure from an interesting old lady whom I met in Indiana in 1865. She was the wife of Josiah Crawford—"Blue Nose," as Abe had named him—and possessed rare accomplishments for a woman reared in the backwoods of Indiana. She was not only impressed with Abe's early efforts, but expressed great admiration for his sister Sarah, whom she often had with her at her own hospitable home and whom she described as a modest, industrious and sensible sister of a humorous and equally sensible brother. From Mrs. Crawford I obtained the few specimens of Abe's early literary efforts and much of the matter that follows in this chapter. The introduction here of the literary feature as affording us a glimpse of Lincoln's boyhood days may to a certain extent grate harshly on overrefined ears, but still no apology is necessary, for, as intimated at the outset, I intend to keep close to Lincoln all the way through. Some writers would probably omit these songs and backwoods recitals as savoring too strongly of the bacchanalian nature, but that would be a narrow view to take of history. If we expect to know Lincoln thoroughly, we must be prepared to take him as he really was.

In 1826 Abe's sister Sarah was married to Aaron Grigsby, and at the wedding the Lincoln family sang a song composed in honor of the event by Abe himself. It is a tiresome doggerel and full of painful rhymes. I reproduce it here from the manuscript furnished me by Mrs. Crawford. The author and composer called it "Adam and Eve's Wedding Song:"

When Adam was created,
He dwelt in Eden's shade,
As Moses has recorded,
And soon a bride was made.

The Lord then was not willing
That man should be alone,
But caused a sleep upon him,
And from him took a bone.

And closed the flesh instead thereof,
And then he took the same
And of it made a woman
And brought her to the man.

Then Adam he rejoiced
To see his loving bride
A part of his own body,
The product of his side.

The woman was not taken
From Adam's feet, we see,
So he must not abuse her,
The meaning seems to be.

The woman was not taken
From Adam's head, we know,
To show she must not rule him—
'Tis evidently so.

The woman she was taken
From under Adam's arm,
So she must be protected
From injuries and harm.

Poor Sarah, at whose wedding this song was sung, never lived to see the glory nor share in the honor that afterward fell to the lot of her tall and angular brother. Within two years after her marriage she died in childbirth.

No feature of his backwoods life pleased Abe so well as going to mill. It released him from a day's work in the woods, besides affording him a much desired opportunity to watch the movement of the mill's primitive and cumbersome machinery. It was on many of these trips that David Turnham accompanied him. In later years Mr. Lincoln related the following reminiscence of his experience as a miller in Indiana: One day, taking a bag of corn he mounted the old flea bitten gray mare and rode leisurely to Gordon's mill. Arriving somewhat late, his turn did not come till almost sundown. In obedience to the custom requiring each man to furnish his own power, he hitched the old mare to the arm, and as the animal moved round the machinery responded with equal speed. Abe was mounted on the arm, and at frequent intervals made use of his whip to urge the animal on to better speed. With a careless "Gee up, you old hussy!" he applied the lash at each revolution of the arm. In the midst of the exclamation, or just as half of it had escaped through his teeth, the old jade, resenting the continued use of the goad, elevated her shoeless hoof, and striking the young engineer in the forehead sent him sprawling to the earth. Miller Gordon hurried in, picked up the bleeding, senseless boy, whom he took for dead, and at once sent for his father. Old Thomas Lincoln came—came as soon as embodied listlessness could move—loaded the lifeless boy in a wagon and drove home. Abe lay unconscious all night, but toward break of day the attendants noticed signs of returning consciousness.

His Physical Prowess.

By the time he had reached his seventeenth year he had attained the physical proportions of a full grown man. He was employed to assist James Taylor in the management of a ferryboat across the Ohio river near the mouth of Anderson's creek, but was not allowed a man's wages for the work. He received 37 cents a day for what he afterward told me was the roughest work a man could be made to do. In the midst of whatever work he was engaged on he still found time to utilize his pen. He prepared a composition on the American government, calling attention to the necessity of preserving the constitution and perpetuating the Union, which, with characteristic modesty, he turned over to his friend and patron, William Wood, for safekeeping and perusal. Through the instrumentality of Woods it attracted the attention of many persons, among them one Pitcher, a lawyer at Rockport, who with faintly concealed enthusiasm declared "the world couldn't beat it."

An article on temperance was shown under similar circumstances to Aaron Farmer, a Baptist preacher of local renown, and by him furnished to an Ohio newspaper for publication. The thing, however, which gave him such prominence—a prominence, too, which could have been attained in no other way—was his remarkable physical strength, for he was becoming not only one of the longest but one of the strongest men around Gentryville. He enjoyed the brief distinction his exhibitions of strength gave him more than the admiration of his friends for his literary or forensic efforts. Some of the feats attributed to him almost surpass belief. One witness declares he was equal to three men, having on a certain occasion carried a load of 600 pounds. At another time he walked away with a pair of logs which three robust men were skeptical of their ability to carry. "He could strike with a maul a heavier blow, could sink an ax deeper into wood than any man I ever saw," is the testimony of another witness.

After he had passed his nineteenth year and was nearing his majority he began to chafe and grow restless under the restraints of home rule. Seeing no prospect of betterment in his condition, so long as his fortune was interwoven with that of his father, he at last endeavored to strike out into the broad world for himself. Having great faith in the judgment and influence of his fast friend Wood, he solicited from him a recommendation to the officers of some one of the boats plying up and down the river, hoping thereby to obtain employment more congenial than dull, fatiguing work of the farm. To this project the judicious Wood was much opposed and therefore suggested to the would be boatman the moral duty that rested on him to remain with his father till the law released him from that obligation. With deep regret he retraced his steps to the paternal mansion, seriously determined not to evade the claim from which in a few weary months he would be finally released. Meanwhile occurred his first opportunity to see the world.

In March, 1828, James Gentry, for whom he had been at work, had fitted out a boat with a stock of grain and meat for a trading expedition to New Orleans and placed his son Allen in charge of the cargo for the voyage. Abe's desire to make a river trip was at last satisfied, and he accompanied the proprietor's son, serving as "bow hand." His pay was $8 a month and board. In due course of time the navigators returned from their expedition with the evidence of profitable results to gladden the heart of the owner. The only occurrence of interest they could relate of the voyage was the encounter with a party of marauding negroes at the plantation of Mme. Duchesne, a few miles below Baton Rouge. Abe and Gentry, having tied up for the night, were fast asleep on their boat when aroused by the arrival of a crowd of negroes bent on plunder. They set to work with clubs and not only drove off the intruders, but pursued them inland; then, hastily returning to their quarters, they cut loose their craft and floated down stream till daylight.

HELD BY THE KING.

Conan Doyle's Latest and Best Story to Be Published in The Daily Press.

On May 15 The Daily Press will begin publication of another tale of adventure from the pen of A. Conan Doyle. It tells how the Brigadier Gerard escaped from the old English prison at Dartmoor, and of many remarkable adventures which follow his escape, and which lead to a climax as pleasing as it is unexpected.

Dr. Doyle considers these adventures of Brigadier Gerard the best work of his life so far, and we hope that our readers will agree with him. We shall continue to publish the adventures of the dashing Brigadier through the Summer.

"How the King Held the Brigadier" will be published in daily instalments and will continue five days.

Mr. D. Wiley, ex-postmaster, Black Breek, N. C., was so badly afflicted with rheumatism that he was only able to hobble around with canes, and even then it caused him great pain. After using Chamberlain's Pain Balm he was so much improved that he threw away his canes. He says this liniment did him more good than all other medicine and treatment put together. For sale at 50 cents per bottle at Reynolds's Pharmacy.

Bad Pipe Thrown Out.

The supervising engineers have rejected considerable poor quality pipe which had been sent here to Contractor Honan for use on the new sewers.

A Remarkable Cure of Rheumatism.

From the Groton Connecticut Review.—"David Lewis, who has been afflicted all winter by rheumatism, is out again and all due to one of the medicines advertised in our columns. After trying everything possible, he used Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which has relieved him of all pain, from which he was a constant sufferer and promises to make him fit for duty soon. We know David has been a great sufferer and are glad to see him around again." For sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy.

Plainfield Voters Have to Pay.

A Plainfield man was released from the county jail a day or two ago on the payment of his poll tax, for which delinquency he was incarcerated by Justice Nash. The finances of the city treasurer have been increased materially in the last few weeks by Justice Nash's activity in that direction.

It Did the Business.

Mr. J. H. Cobb, publisher of the Mirror, at Brockton, N. Y., says: "For nearly two years the Mirror has been publishing the advertisements of Chamberlain's Remedies. A few days ago the writer was suffering from a bowel trouble and resorted to an old remedy which did not prove efficacious; finally he tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and two doses did the business, checking it completely. For sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy.

An established feature of The Daily Press is its copyrighted serials, fresh from the pens of the best living authors. These stories are all confined to six or less issues of The Press, thus guarding against the tiresomeness of being long-drawn-out. The Case of Laker", now running, is excellent, and is to be succeeded by the following gems:

May 15 to 20, "How the King Held the Brigadier", by A. Conan Doyle.

May 21 and 22, "The Eye of Beatrice".

May 23 and 24, "A Fraudulent Claim", by Howard Fielding.

Agreeably Surprised.

"I had a very severe cold on my lungs that caused much soreness and gave me considerable uneasiness in regard to the result," says Mr. T. E. Smith, of Billerica, Mass. "A local druggist called my attention to Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and on his recommendation I gave the remedy a careful trial. The result surprised me; I recovered entirely in three days." 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy.

MOORE TOOK HIS TIME.

Waring Demanded His Resignation Two Days Before It Was Given.

Commissioner Waring made public yesterday some of the correspondence between himself and his deputy, Charles K. Moore, relating to the latter's resignation. He did so, he said, because "an effort had been made to find ground for sensation in the matter, in which an absurd interest had been expressed". This is Col. Waring's letter:

Charles K. Moore, Esq., Deputy Commissioner.

Dear Sir:—You will please send me your resignation by the first mail tomorrow morning. I want it by 9 o'clock. This time there must be no delay. Respectfully,

George E. Waring, Commissioner.

New York, May 10.

Mr. Moore's letter of the next day in reply to this, in which he said unpleasant things about the Commissioner and about the authority assumed by Mrs. Carre, the Colonel's private secretary, was not given out. Mr. Moore's letter of two days later was as follows:

Col. George E. Waring, Jr., Commissioner of Street Cleaning, New York city.

My Dear Sir:—In pursuance of our conversation of Jan. 4, 1895, supplemented by your communication of May 10, instant, I hereby tender you my resignation as Deputy Commissioner, to take effect, in accordance with your expressed wish, June 1, 1895.

New York, May 13. Chas. K. Moore.

Mr. Moore said yesterday that he was not at liberty to make public the other letter, but that he was perfectly willing that Col. Waring should do so.

"There was an agreement between us"—he said—"that none of the correspondence should be given out. Col. Waring has broken faith with me in giving out as much as he has. I shall keep to my word and not make anything public as long as I am a subordinate in the department. I shall remain till June 1."

Held to Keep the Peace.

The case of Cramer against Aleck was tried before Justice Crosley this morning. The complaint made was that Mrs. Aleck had used abusive language and ill treated Mrs. Cramer on several occasions, and that not being able to stand the abuse had brought the matter in court. Mrs. Cramer told her story in a most pathetic manner. She and Mrs. Aleck live in a double house at 2 Steiner place, owned by Mr. Gavin, and apparently without any cause Mrs. Aleck threw water on the complainant and had chased her with a knife, threatening to kill her.

Mrs. Joseph Haurand, who lives at 11 Steiner place, was placed on the stand, and stated that she had seen Mrs. Aleck throw the water.

When Mrs. Aleck was sworn she admitted throwing water, but said that she did not commence using abusive language.

Mrs. Aleck repeated in a graphic style the language which she claimed was used.

Justice Crosley held the defendant under $50 bond for six months to keep the peace.

Increased the Amount.

In the Circuit Court in Elizabeth this morning the jury in the case of Ross, administrator of Henry Papenberg, against the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, brought in a verdict of $12,720 for the plaintiff. Papenberg was killed at Rahway in 1892 by a mail bag thrown from a Pennsylvania train. The case was tried last year and the railroad company mulcted for $7,100. The company secured a new trial and the amount is increased $5,000. R. V. Lindabury of Elizabeth represented the plaintiff and Attorney Strong of New York the defendant.

Unity's Fraternity.

Unity Lodge, Knights of Pythias, will have a big time at their meeting this evening, when six candidates will be raised to the third rank with the assistance of the officers of Crescent Division, Uniformed Rank. Grand Chancellor Ralph Donath of Jersey City will be present, as will also a large number of visiting brethren from Perseverance and Goodwill lodges.

On the Bowery.

Captain March of the Salvation Army, who has been a resident of this city for some time, has been assigned to have charge of Corps No. 9 on the Bowery in New York. A part of her duties will be to conduct the large mass meeting held in Cooper Union every Sunday evening.

Successful Operation.

A difficult operation was performed on Mary Manning of East Third street in the Muhlenberg Hospital, by a New York specialist, assisted by the hospital staff, yesterday afternoon.

Elizabeth Hears Our Band.

Guttmann's band went to Elizabeth this morning to accompany the Jackson Hook and Ladder Company in the parade of the State Exempt Firemen's Association.

EVERYBODY LIKES IT.

Warm Admiration for The Press New Dress.

STYLISH AND A THING OF BEAUTY.

Praise from All Over the State for Model Plainfield and Its Model Newspaper—New Jersey's Leading Journals Call It Handsome, Up to Date, and Possessing a Big American Heart.

The Daily Press has been overwhelmed with praises on its recent improvements, and compliments have poured in so profusely that it has not room to print them all. Here are a few representative opinions:

James E. Martine, representative now of agriculture, and representative some day yet in Congress, said: "It's very handsome; and the clear, generous face of the type is a great relief to overstrained eyes."

Counselor W. K. McClure, representative of the Bar, says: "I am well pleased with the new Press. It is very neat and substantial."

Rev. Dr. C. R. Barnes, representative of the clergy, said: "I want to congratulate you on the improved appearance of The Press. It is highly creditable."

Edward White: "Your new paper looks very nice indeed."

Curtis M. Thorpe: "Your paper looks wonderfully better."

Counselor W. W. Pearson:—"Items published in The Daily Press travel very fast, and its new birthday gift is a 'Corkiolo', as Howard says, and doncherfergit it; and is handsome and up to date."

New Brunswick Fredonian:—The Plainfield Daily Press is a wideawake newspaper, and well deserves the handsome new dress it donned last week.

Westfield Standard:—The Plainfield Press comes out in a brand-new suit that fits like a glove. But the best we can say for The Press is that it has a big, warm American heart.

Newark Sunday Times-Standard:—The Plainfield Press appeared in a new dress last Friday, the occasion being its eighth birthday anniversary. The Press is a bright daily of eight years.

Bergen County Daily Herald:—The Plainfield Press is out in a new dress and is very much improved in looks and otherwise. We wish we could put on our new bonnet, but we are too ambitious. We are not a year old yet.

Passaic Daily News:—We extend hearty congratulations to the Plainfield Daily Press. Its new dress and its well-filled columns suggest fertility of intellect and financial soundness. Plainfield is one of the best governed and prettiest cities in the State, and The Press reflects its character admirably.

Der Somerset Bote, Bound Brook [Translation]: The Plainfield Press on Friday commenced its ninth year. Under the management of the capable journalist, Walter Irving Clarke, The Plainfield Press has become an indispensable daily journal for Plainfield's citizens. Here is to its further success!

Bound Brook Town Talk:—The Plainfield Daily Press—now entering upon the ninth year of its career—came out yesterday in a brand-new dress of brevier type in honor of its eighth birthday. Under the managing editorship of Walter Irving Clarke it may now well be regarded as the handsomest daily in Union County. May it be as successful in the future as it has been in the past.

Elizabeth Daily Journal:—The Plainfield Daily Press celebrates its eighth anniversary by coming out in a full new dress, stylish, handsome, with "puff" sleeves and all the newest features. This is evidence of successful enterprise, and proves that The Press is taking a new lease of action and vigorous life with each succeeding year. Plainfield seems to be an excellent field for newspapers.

Paterson Daily Press:—The Plainfield Daily Press yesterday celebrated the eighth anniversary of its birth by appearing in a beautiful new dress. Our Plainfield namesake is one of the best papers on our exchange list and is distinctly up to date. The Press tenders it congratulations and the hope that the prosperity which manifestly attends it may increase with every year that passes over its head.

Cranford Chronicle:—To The Daily Press of Plainfield The Chronicle desires to extend and give the warmest kind of a typographical shake. Our congratulations are based on the improved appearance of our neighbor, which has discarded the dress it had worn continually for eight years, and come out decked in all that brand-new printing material, judiciously selected, can give a daily newspaper. The Press has more than mere appearance to recommend it. It confers a positive benefit upon Plainfield and its citizens every day. It benefits the city by upholding constantly the advantages of Plainfield as a town in which business men find business profitable and residents find life enjoyable. It benefits the citizens by keeping them fully informed of local, State and national news. Again, we say to our neighbor, "shake!"

MORRIS COUNTY CHRONICLE.
MORRISTOWN, N. J., May 11, 1895.
Walter Irving Clarke, Plainfield, N. J.

DEAR SIR:—A copy of The Daily Press in its new dress has been received; it looks very handsome and shows artistic mechanical work. We congratulate you upon the success of The Press.

PETER SCOTT TALKS.

He Has Been Five Years Among the Africans.

Warren Chapel was well filled last night by Christian Endeavorers to listen to the address of Peter Scott, a missionary who recently returned from five years of work in Africa. He is a very earnest talker and carried the attention of the audience with him.

In the first part of his talk he spoke of the significance and meaning of the Endeavor pledge, and added that by faithfully observing it the world could be evangelized within the present century. But the great trouble was that too few realized what the pledge meant.

Some thought that the missionary life was somewhat of a romance, but, he said, it is found to be a stern reality when one finds himself among a tribe of savages with whom it is impossible to converse.

He found that the most successful mission work could be accomplished among children. By establishing schools they could be gradually educated for work among their own people.

The Africans among whom he had been engaged were not anxious to hear the Gospel, but when they once realize its teachings they become very fervent believers. One of the greatest difficulties encountered in reaching them was to overcome their superstition and devotion to idols.

WANTED FOR FORGERY.

Joseph Milligan Alleged to Have Signed the Name of D. C. Ivins & Co., to a Release Without Authority.

Justice Nash this morning issued a warrant for the arrest of Joseph Milligan, a mason contractor living on North avenue, on the charge of forging the firm name of D. C. Ivins & Co., to two releases of liens on a house which was recently built for John G. Bicknell on South avenue. The contractors were Pope Brothers, who sublet the mason work to Milligan. Ivins & Co. has furnished a portion of the material amounting to about $70, and it was for the release of this claim that he committted the forgery. Milligan has left town.

The County Fair.

Blue-and-white polka dot are the colors that Tim, the tanner, will wear when riding Abby's colt, Cold Molasses, in "The County Fair" sweepstakes in Music Hall Friday night, and much interest is expected over this exciting episode.

"The County Fair", as the majority of theatre-goers are aware, has been the perennial attraction at the Union Square Theatre, New York, for three years. Charles Barnard, who wrote the comedy, struck a soft, responsive chord in the public's bosom when he played upon their equine affections.

Looking for the Sharpers.

Chief Grant is in Somerville today looking for the shell-game sharper with the Wild West Show, who worked innocent Eugene Sullivan for $40 Monday night when the show appeared in this city, the particulars of which were reported in The Daily Press of yesterday.

Park Club Election.

Of the 12 members of the Board of Governors of the Park Club, six were elected last night as follows, to serve five years: H. G. Runkle, J. B. Dumont, Howard Fleming, F. C. Kirchoff, H. A. Streuli, E. H. Booth.

—The Boys Club will be entertained Friday evening by L. B. C. Josephs of Newark, who will give a series of readings that will be interesting to the youngsters.

—"Demonstration and Intensification" will be the subject of a lecture which will be delivered by Harold Serrell before the Camera Club next Tuesday evening in their rooms in the Babcock Building.

N. G. S. N. J. IN CAMP.

New Arrangements for the Annual Outing at Seagirt.

A change will be made this Summer in the arrangements for the encampment of the First Brigade, N.G.S.N.J. at Seagirt. The entire brigade will not go into camp at the same time, as has been the custom heretofore. This is a change that has been advocated by Brig.-Gen. Wanser, and it was approved yesterday by Gov. Werts. It is said that the State will save $10,000 by the new arrangement.

There are three regiments in the brigade, the First of Newark, the Second of Paterson, and the Fourth of Jersey City. The New York plan of having only one regiment at a time in camp has been adopted. The Fourth regiment will go into camp July 20 and remain a week. It will be followed in turn by the First and the Second, each of which will remain a week. Each regiment will have target practice during its week of the encampment.

Heretofore the practice has been for the brigade to continue the target practice from the time of the encampment to October, and the State had to pay all the extra transportation.

Sewer Work.

Honan & Son have thus far completed 2,319 feet of sewers on their 17-mile contract. They are now employing about seventy-five men, divided into two gangs. Their progess is delayed, however, by the slow arrival of pipe, much of which is rejected on account of the inferior quality.

Work on the Front street sewers will progress much more rapidly now that Madison avenue has been passed, owing to the fact that the trenches will be three feet less in depth than those between Madison and Central avenues. Between Madison and Park avenues there is a grade of three feet. By steady work the contractors will be able to escape their $10-a-day forfeiture, which will be enforced after the first of June.

A Good Horse Gone.

"Orcutt", the horse valued at $2,500 and owned by Banker Arkell of Westfield, which was taken sick in Quinn's blacksmith shop on East Fourth street two weeks ago, died this morning. Mr. Arkell gave up all hopes of the recovery of the animal, and a few days ago told Dr. Pocock that if he would pull him through to good health he could have the horse. Dr. Pocock accepted the gift, and a day or two after was offered $500 for the horse just as he lay, but refused the proposition, as the steed appeared to be gaining. However, he had a sinking spell last night, and this morning expired.

Not His Fowls.

The suit of Henry Clay Randolph against Thomas Hyland was dismissed by Justice Nash yesterday afternoon. The action was brought by Randolph to recover damages for the destruction of crops by Hyland's chickens, which the plaintiff alleged trespassed upon his property, the two contestants being adjoining farmers on the Rahway road. However, from the evidence presented it was learned that the poultry belonged to Quinn's son, and on these grounds the case was dismissed.

Bowling at Dunellen.

The following are the bowlers who will play in the two-men tournament at Dunellen tomorrow evening: Sandford and Waring against Krewson and Kiely; Theirs and Matthews against Krewson and Kiely; Sandford and Waring against Shaw and Brown; Lindslay and Giles against Shaw and Brown; Theirs and Brown against Taylor and Giles; Theirs and Matthews against Shaw and Brown; Sandford and Waring against Taylor and Giles. The tournament will close May 23.

How Many in Plainfield?

The census enumerators received their final instructions from Assessor Hubbard last night, and this morning commenced enumerating the inhabitants of the districts to which they have been assigned.

Got Free Lodging.

Patrick Walsh and Hiram Closky were arrested last night by Policeman Frederickson for loitering about the station. Judge Coddington ordered them to leave town this morning.

Bunworth Released.

John Bunworth has been released from custody, it having been decided by the police that an examination into his sanity was unnecessary, and a needless expense to the city.

Their Sexton Goes Ahead.

Peter Sexton, in advance of the Howard Stock Company, was in town yesterday, making arrangements for the appearance of the troupe in Music Hall.

CLOSE OF THE CHORAL.

Final Concert of the Season a Great Success.

TWO MASTERPIECES RENDERED.

Superb Production of Mendelssohn's "Hymn of Praise" and Rossini's "Stabat Mater"—It Was Pronounced the Best Concert Ever Given by the Society, and Its Repetition Tonight Would Fill the House.

In its production of Mendelssohn's "Hymn of Praise" and Rossini's "Stabat Mater" the Plainfield Choral Society last night reached the highest pinnacle of success ever attained by a local association of vocalists. Of the "Hymn of Praise" that said, which was nothing but encouraging approbation, marks the seal of approval set by the audience. Its rendition was a process of introduction to the masterpiece which followed. The songs of praise were sung by voices whose intonations amplified the sentiment of Mendelssohn's choicest harmony. But the grandeur of the "Stabat Mater" as it was sung last night seemed to remove from immediate consideration the less inspiring yet wholly beautiful music which opened the programme of the last concert for the present season of the Plainfield Choral Society.

Seldom except in the grand opera are Plainfielders accorded an opportunity of hearing such a magnificent voice as that which carried the bass solos last evening. Eric F. Bushnell captured the audience by storm for it is but fair to say that his full rich tones received instant recognition. As much to him alone as to any other may the splendid success of the Stabat Mater production be assigned. Without his support the quartette would have been enjoyable, not perfect. The quality of Mr. Bushnell's voice could be accurately guaged, because his score ranged widely; and yet he never faltered in tone nor failed in expression. His solos were rare bits of harmony that swept intact to the farthermost corners of the opera house; and in the four-part pieces his excellent support enhanced the effect of the other voices materially.

Mr. Bushnell was not alone in making the better impression in the latter half of the programme. The other soloists also seemed to be retaining their vocal power for the crowning work of the society. Miss Eleanor Meredith, soprano, was particularly acceptable in Rossini's wonderful work, and Mrs. Carl Alves appeared to much better advantage in that than she did in the less familiar "Hymn of Praise".

Probably H. Evans Williams, tenor, was more annoyed at his treacherous throat than were his hearers. It was as easy to see that Mr. Williams was tortured with a cold as it was to recognize the fact that he ordinarily must be possessed of a beautifully clear and sweet voice of no mean range. It was very disappointing to everyone, who realized that Mr. Williams was straining every nerve to acquit himself creditably, when he failed to reach the one note in his score that always marks the successful culmination of the tenor's solo part.

The Society's portion of the evening's programme was carried through with marked zest. It is to be expected that the closing concert in the Choral's course is always the best. Under Mr. Fitzhugh's leadership any other circumstance would be impossible. Careful training by him, and receptive study on the part of the society members, combined last night in making possible the most excellent concert produced in this city since Mr. Fitzhugh began his labors. The most marked improvement was noticeable in the volume and quality of the bass voices. That balance was needed in the bass support was urged in The Press criticism of the last concert, and the admonition was heeded, another remedy applied in a most satisfactory manner. It is doubtful if a better male chorus ever sang under Mr. Fitzhugh, than that which last night formed the groundwork of a beautiful production. To the bass voices belong the credit of making the greatest advance in the local society's work this season.

The orchestral introduction to the "Hymn of Praise", of a full half hour's duration, was seemingly perfect. The New York Philharmonic Society members may be depended upon always to give a finished performance, there being no exception, so far as their appearances in this city are concerned, to prove the rule. Their work last evening was unusually exacting, but in no way disappointing, and it is to be anticipated that next season they will be retained for support in every concert instead of the first and last, as has been the custom heretofore.

VETERANS AND SONS.

Plainfield and Somerville Unite in an Enjoyable Campfire.

A large audience, consisting of members of General Wadsworth Post, G. A. R., and Sons of Veterans, of Somerville, and John Hand Camp, No. 28, S. of V., of this city, together with friends, gathered in Arcanum Hall, Somerville, last evening, to enjoy a campfire.

The affair was arranged by Judge Advocate J. R. Dungan and Sergeant of Guard Walter Vanderhoff of Camp 40, and First Sergeant H. J. Martin and Camp Council Frank Clarkson of Camp 28, and was eminently successful in every respect. After the singing of the opening ode, J. R. Dungan took charge, and announced a recitation by Miss Murith Houston, which was admirably rendered.

The next number was a vocal solo by William Reiusswig, accompanied by Mrs. William Quick. His singing was enjoyed exceedingly, and as an encore he gave "Out on the Deep".

Hon. J. D. Martine was then introduced, and gave one of the best and most patriotic addresses ever listened to. It inspired the hearts of all who heard him to fully realize the privileges of American citizenship. Among other things he said that the people of the old world had been living under restraint so long that they had learned to love it, while we on the other hand had enjoyed our liberty and freedom in a like measure, and likewise had learned to love it. He traced in a most interesting way the history of liberty and freedom, and told what it cost to possess it. Frequently during his remarks the enthusiasm of the audience broke forth in hearty applause.

Miss Minnie Carkhuff followed with an impressive recitation, "Lady Maude's Oath", and Horace J. Martin rendered two vocal solos that were heartily received.

One of the best numbers was the recitation, "Caleb's Courtship", by Miss Ollie Klotz, which was received with loud applause.

A finely rendered instrumental solo by Mrs. Wm. Quick was followed by a soul-stirring recitation by Alvah Noll, entitled "Stars and Stripes".

H. S. Thatcher was introduced, and gave a touching recitation, "My Old Canteen", that brought fond memories to the veterans present. As an encore, "Barbara Fretchie" was given, by request.

Two excellent cornet solos by Benjamin J. LaVere, accompanied by George Rogers on the piano, were thoroughly appreciated.

Recitations by Miss Lucy Smith and Miss Jessie Gardner, were given hearty applause, for their meritorious rendition.

George Jenkins and Arthur Demaray rendered two very fine banjo duets that were enjoyed.

Col. James E. Pierson, Commander of the New Jersey Division, was introduced, and made a few remarks that were excellent and very appropriate. He related an interesting incident of how he mustered a Ladies Aid Society at Riverside. It started in with 40 members and the first night the Judge Advocate informed him that there were ninety-seven opinions rendered in regard to the society.

John H. Carney was the last on the programme, but not the least by any means, for Jack struck the humorous side of all the leading topics of the day, and the audience was kept in a state of laughter continually. His German sayings were original and pointed, and one had only to look at him to be convinced of his ability to produce all that was funny in the German. His representation of a soldier on parade was amusing in the extreme. Of course, Jack was given an encore, and he still continued to cause merriment, and even after the affair was over and the people were going home they were still laughing.

After the singing of the closing ode, the G. A. R. women served excellent refreshments in abundance, and thus was brought to a close the first joint campfire, which was genuinely successful.

Hazel Kirke Tonight.

"Hazel Kirke" is no doubt the most remarkable play ever produced; it has survived all others, and has been played oftener than many other successful plays combined. It is a play full of human interest that appeals to both young and old. The production of this famous play in Music Hall tonight promises to be one of the events of the season.

Funeral of Aaron Clark.

The funeral of Aaron Clark who was killed on the Central tracks early Sunday morning will take place tomorrow afternoon from his parents residence on Terrill road. The interment will be at Westfield.

HATED HIS SUPERIOR

Dr. Kirshner Attacked Admiral Meade.

The Medical Director's Strong Letter Read in Court—Said He Would as Soon See the Devil as the Admiral. The Accused Takes the Stand in His Own Defense.

Brooklyn, N. Y., May 15.—A private letter, dated Kingston, Jamaica, April 7, from Medical Director Kershner of the navy, to Surgeon-General Tyrone, was read at the trial of the former, on the charge of perjury, now being conducted at the navy yard here and created a sensation. Dr. Kershner in the letter said:

Would as Soon See the Devil.

"They had a court of inquiry yesterday on that attack against me and I had to say that I sent you a copy of the proceedings. I hope it will not get you into trouble because you got it into the papers. Anyhow you must have informed the secretary that you had a copy. They did not ask me and so I did not tell them that I had sent D. B. a copy. I did not, however, send him a complete copy. I merely sent him extracts. I can't tell you how much I appreciate your affectionate friendship. This is about the only thing that has saved me from going overboard after what I have suffered. Such vile, baseless, crazy and foolish words from a man who is unfit for the position of admiral. I would as soon see the devil. I never go on deck for fear of seeing him. I hate him as I never hated any man from head to foot, and sometimes I think he will make me as crazy as himself. I hear that his ship goes to Kiel and leaves him there, and that he will soon go on the retired list. At least he says he will."

Kershner on the Stand.

After the reading of the above letter Dr. Kershner took the stand in his own defense. He testified that he was on the Cumberland in her memorable action with the Merrimac, and his bravery at that time was mentioned by Capt. Morris. The report was offered in evidence. Mr. Hinsdale then made the witness go over his whole record up to date. Among other things he had served, he said, at the smalpoxl hospital during a period when the doctors had to bury the dead because the men could not be persuaded to touch them. He had had many cholera cases, especially on the Asiatic station. The witness was questioned in regard to his fitting up the sick bay with the proper instruments. He could not obtain certain apparatus for the testing of water, and the air apparatus was not allowed at all.

ADMIRAL MEADE'S CASE.

A Statement Given Out by the Navy Department.

Washington, May 15.—In regard to the case of Admiral Meade, the navy department has given out the following statement: "The navy department addressed a letter to Admiral Meade stating that it desired to know if he was willing to answer whether he had given, or had authorized, what purported to be an interview with him published in a New York paper, and Admiral Meade replied, acknowledging receipt of the letter, but declining to answer the questions."

Was Probably Too Hasty.

Secretary Herbert then explains the matter of the docking of the Cincinnati. Admiral Meade made a request that the vessel be docked at the New York yard. Upon recommendation of the chief constructor, who desired that work, which was scarce, should be equalized, the Cincinnati was ordered to the Norfolk yard. Before her arrival there a second request was received from Admiral Meade that the vessel be sent to New York. Secretary Herbert gave the matter further consideration and decided to comply with the admiral's request. He accordingly prepared orders to intercept the ship at Hampton Roads and order her to New York. He also prepared orders to Admiral Meade notifying him of the change. Before they could be forwarded a letter came from the admiral asking to be detached from the squadron, which request was granted.

Acted Impetuously.

The sole object of the statement it is understood is to show that Admiral Meade has acted inpetuously in his dealings with the department, first as stated, in asking to be detached because his request for the Cincinnati to come to New York was not as promptly granted as he wished and by implication that he spoke hastily in the interview which caused so much surprise.

Can Do Nothing in the Matter.

As the admiral declined to incriminate himself when called upon in the matter of the interview, the department is met with the embarrassing situation that it would be unable to prove anything against the admiral if resort were had to court martial proceedings.

Her Name Still Unknown.

Milwaukee, Wis., May 15.—The vessel which farmers say they saw capsize in the storm Monday between here and Racine is not known yet, but it may be the City of Grand Rapids, which answers the descriptions of the farmers in rig and color. No sign of wreckage has been found by the life saving crew.

MGR. SATOLLI'S REPLY.

Says the Archbishop of St. Louis Must Deal with the Phelan Case.

Asbury Park, N. J., May 15.—The Rev. J. P. Dawson, pastor of the Westminster Presbyterian church, is in receipt of a communication from Mgr. Satolli acknowledging the petition sent him by the Christain Endeavor societies of Asbury Park and Ocean Grove, asking for the removal of the Rev. Father Phelan, of St. Louis, for his recent utterances against the society. Dr. Dawson showed a copy of the letter, which is as follows:

The Archbishop's Affair.

"Dear Sir: I received some days ago your letter with which you sent me the protest of the Christain Endeavorers against the attack made by the Rev. Father Phelan in his paper on the practices of that association. I regret exceedingly that a question of this kind should have arisen, but after a long and careful consideration of the whole matter I feel that it is one which belongs to the most reverend archbishop of St. Louis rather than to me. With sentiments of sincere esteem, I remain most faithfully yours in Christ. SATOLLI."

Will Go Higher, if Necessary.

Dr. Dawson says he will obtain another copy of the petition and forward it to the archbishop of St. Louis, together with a copy of Mgr. Satolli's letter. In case the archbishop pays no attention to the petition, Dr. Dawson says he will go up still higher.

TARIFF ACT CASE.

Hearing Involving the Time the Law Took Effect To Begin on Monday.

Washington, May 15.—Chief Justice Fuller of the United States supreme court, on the request of Attorney General Olney has set Monday next for the trial of Burr vs. Hardwick, appealed from the United States court for the southern district of New York. This case involves the question whether the new tariff law took effect on August 28, 1894, the day it was allowed to become law by the president, or on August 1, 1894, as stated in the enacting clause of the tariff act. The question involved is of great importance, as if the decision is adverse to the government it will necessitate the reliquidation of all entries made between August 1 and August 18, 1894. To do this would require all the clerical force in the treasury that could be put on this class of work and would throw back current work two months. United States District Attorney McFarlane of New York will appear for the United States in the case.

SAVANNAH'S MAY WEEK.

The Festivities Inaugurated Yesterday with Many Visitors Present.

Savannah, Ga., May 15.—Savannah's annual May Week festivities were inaugurated yesterday. The city is filled with visitors from Georgia, Florida and South Carolina. The public buildings and business houses are gaily decorated and the people have given themselves up to amusement. The opening event was the "drummers' parade," which always opened the May festivals. The cruisers Atlanta and Raleigh, which arrived in the mouth of the Savannah river Monday and were expected to come up to Fort Oglethorpe, about four miles below the city, yesterday, were unable to catch the tide and will remain at Tybee until to-day. The officers of the vessels are being entertained at the clubs and by the citizens. Governor Atkinson will review the troops to-day.

HUSBAND NO. 2 SENT AWAY.

Husband No. 1 Returns After Five Years and Resumes Command.

Lawrence, Mass., May 15.—Benjamin Ordway, who disappeared from here about five years ago, returned yesterday and found his wife had married and was living in South Lawrence. A child had been born by the second husband, and Ordway's three children were living with their grand parents on their mother's side. The second husband is John Thompson, a North Andover machinist. Ordway went at once to the home of Mrs. Ordway-Thompson, where he was received. When Thompson returned from work he was sent to the home of relatives, and Ordway again became master of the household. The woman is about 36 years of age and Ordway about the same.

WILL HE SUCCEED LAMONT?

Ohio Is Saying That Outhwaite Will Be Secretary of War.

Columbus, O., May 15.—There is a hint here that amounts to a conviction to many that before this year expires ex-congressman Joseph H. Outhwaite is to be made secretary of war. The story is not denied, nor is it admitted in confidential Outhwaite circles. Mr. Outhwaite is en route to Europe to return July 1. The president, Mr. Outhwaite and Mr. Lamont are known to be very close friends. The talk at this end of the line has been sub rosa, but was printed in full yesterday, so far as it could be without violating confidence.

POLICE BILL KILLED.

But the Greater New York Bill Survived in the Albany House.

Albany, May 15.—While the police reorganization bill fell by the wayside in the senate yesterday, the Greater New York measure survived in the house. The vote announced in the senate on the final passage of the New York city police reorganization bill was: Ayes, 16; nays, 16. The bill was declared lost, seventeen votes being necessary to pass it. A motion to reconsider the vote was tabled.

"Notwithstanding the existing contracts between the Carnegie Steel company, limited, and its employes, fixing the rates of wages for 1895 this association has decided that the present business outlook will justify higher rates, and accordingly takes pleasure in notifying its employes at the Edgar Thomson furnaces, Edgar Thomson Steel works, Duquesne Steel works, Homestead Steel works, Lucy furnaces, Keystone Bridge works, Upper Union mills, Lower Union mills and Beaver Falls mills, that from June 1, 1895, and until further notice, the scale rates paid to all tonnage, day and turn men will be increased 10 per cent., this without prejudice to the 1895 wages contracts still in force. St. John's, N. F., May 15.—It is openly admitted to-day that confederation is a dead issue. Canada has refused to assume the full Newfoundland debt of $15,000,000, and Great Britain has declined to interfere while Newfoundland is a self-governing colony. The Whitewayites are despondent. [SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

Never in the history of medicine has the demand for one particular remedy for female diseases equalled that attained by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and never in the history of Mrs. Pinkham's wonderful Compound has the demand for it been so great as it is today. From Maine to California, from the Gulf to the St. Lawrence, come the glad tidings of woman's suffering relieved by it; and thousands upon thousands of letters are pouring in from grateful women, saying that it WILL and does positively cure those painful

Ailments of Women.

It will cure the worst forms of female complaints, all ovarian troubles, inflammation and ulceration, falling and displacements of the womb, and consequent spinal weakness, and is peculiarly adapted to the change of life.

Every time it will cure

Backache.

It has cured more cases of leucorrhœa by removing the cause, than any remedy the world has ever known; it is almost infallible in such cases. It dissolves and expels tumors from the uterus in an early stage of development, and checks any tendency to cancerous humors.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Liver Pills work in unison with the Compound, and are a sure cure for constipation and sick-headache. Mrs. Pinkham's Sanative Wash is frequently found of great value for local application. Correspondence is freely solicited by the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., and the strictest confidence assured. All druggists sell the Pinkham's remedies. The Vegetable Compound in three forms, — Liquid, Pills, and Lozenges.

FOR ACCEPTING BRIBES

Three Assemblymen Said To Have Been Indicted.

Three Thousand Dollars Alleged To Have Been Paid at Albany To Have Certain Measures Regulating the Cutting of Ice on the Hudson River Defeated.

Albany, May 15.—A morning paper here publishes the following news item regarding the indictments alleged to have been found by the Albany grand jury against several members of the state legislature for bribery in connection with the introduction in the legislature of bills having for their object the regulation of ice cutting in the Hudson river near cities and towns:

Three Members Bribed.

It is understood that as a result of complaint made by a very high official, the grand jury has found indictments against three assemblymen. The specific charge is that they forced the Castleton ice dealers to pay three thousand dollars to have the ice bill killed. The actual transaction took place in Albany, in the street outside the doors of a bank, where the cash was obtained by an officer of a Castleton bank.

Decided To Accept $3,000.

The bill prohibited the cutting of ice near a town. It would have stopped all the ice cutting between Albany and Troy and at other points along the Hudson. The Ice Dealers association conferred with the friends of the introducer of the bill, with the result that it was agreed to kill the bill for $3,000.

Bank Cashier Refused.

A leading member of the Ice Dealers' association called at the bank with one of the Assemblymen and asked the bank to cash his check. He told the cashier what the money was for. The cashier would not cash his check and the officer of the Castleton bank was sent for. The money was then obtained and paid to the assemblyman on the street outside the bank.

How the Matter Reached the Courts.

The bill was then abandoned. The news of this reached a number of prominent citizens and by them it was laid before a high state official, who laid the matter and evidence before the officers of the law yesterday.

In Danger of Being Ruined.

It is said that there are several ice dealers who have been in straightened circumstances through poor speculations, and that they have been carried on in business by a certain bank. If the bill would pass, it would not only utterly ruin the ice dealers, but it would possibly cause the bank to suspend. The ice dealers were at their wits' ends, as were the bank directors, and it was to their interest to have the bill buried in committee, and with this end in view, it is said, that money was raised.

CAN'T RESENTENCE LAMBERT.

Mandate from the U. S. Supreme Court Strangely Missing.

Camden N. J., May 15.—The mandate sent down by the United States supreme court in Lambert's case is either strayed, lost or stolen. Prosecutor of the pleas William H. Jenkins of Camden expected to get the mandate last Wednesday, but though he has been in communication with the supreme court clerk at Washington, Judge Dalke of this city and Judge Green, of Trenton, he has heard nothing from the records yet. Until these records are sent down Theodore Lambert, the murderer of baker William Keierer, cannot be resentenced.

BY AN ERROR IN TIME.

A Man on Trial for Murder Acquitted.

Lexington, Ky., May 15.—By an error in time William M. Shipp, jr., who was on trial here for the murder of Sam Brown, at Midway, was acquitted. The jury returning a verdict of not guilty. The tragedy occurred April 7, but the commonwealth attorney in filing out the blank charged that the murder was committed on March 13.

INDIANS CAUSING TROUBLE.

Cavalry Troops in Pursuit of a Band of Cattle and Horse Thieves.

Denver, May 15.—Col. Captain Pitcher's troop of the First cavalry from Fort Bayard, which was sent out, is close on their trail. Apache Kid is leader of the band.

IN MEMORY OF HER HUSBAND.

Dedication of the Church Erected by Mrs. Elliot F. Shepard.

Sing Sing, N. Y., May 15.—The dedication at Scarborough, Westchester county, of the Presbyterian church erected to the memory of the late Elliot F. Shepard by his wife, took place yesterday afternoon. The exercises were very imposing. Among those present were: Mrs. E. F. Shepard, and daughters, A. D. Shepard and family, Chauncey Depew, Cornelius Vanderbilt, F. K. Vanderbilt, William Vanderbilt, Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Sloane, Miss Adele Sloane, of New York; James Burden, jr.; Mrs. James Burden of Troy; Mr. and Mrs. H. Walter Webb and Dr. and Mrs. Seward Webb, of New York. The church is built of granite rubble with Indiana limestone trimming. The granite is of pinkish color and the limestone greyish, which harmonizes well. The cross on the tower is 120 from the ground. The granite used in the construction of the church is from Mrs. Shepard's place. The main entrance of the church faces the Hudson river, and directly over the inside door is a marble slab, about four feet long, on which is the following in gold: "The Scarborough Presbyterian church, erected to the glory of God, in loving memory of Elliot F. Shepard, by his wife, Margaret Louise Vanderbilt Shepard, in the year of our Lord eighteen hundred and ninety-three. Let us meet in the house of God within the temple.—Nehemiah, vi-x."

BAKER'S WOUND SEVERE.

An Intense Feeling Against the Colored People of Franklin Park.

New Brunswick, N. J., May 15.—Moore Baker is still confined to his home at Franklin Park by the injuries inflicted on him by some mysterious assailant on Saturday night. A physician's examination shows that Baker was struck with some blunt weapon, for the wound is a severe one. It is rumored that the authorities of Somerset county, in which Franklin Park is located, will put several of the negro relatives of Baker and Thompson under arrest, although all claim to be able to prove alibis. Soon after the tragedy of March, 1894, the farmers and other residents of Franklin Park organized the Franklin Park Vigilance league, with the avowed intention of driving the negroes from the village. The league held a number of meetings, but never did anything besides passing motions and adopting resolutions. The assault upon Moore Baker has revived an intense feeling against the colored population of the park, and there is talk of reorganizing the league and expelling the colored people.

G. A. R. ENCAMPMENT.

Work Transacted by the Veterans at Saratoga.

Saratoga, N. Y., May 15.—At the opening of the business session of the twenty-ninth annual encampment of the state G. A. R., in Convention hall, Commander-in-Chief Lawler addressed a few words to the veterans and extended to them an invitation to visit the national encampment, which will be held at Louisville, Ky., in September. Post Commander Mack of the Ohio department scored the New York post for declaring that the usefulness of the G. A. R. was over. Commander Lawler, Corporal Tanner and John Palmer, in their addresses, all scored George E. Waring, jr., New York city's street cleaning commissioner, in an indirect manner, but without using any names. Several anti-Waring resolutions were submitted, all of which were referred to the committee on resolutions of which John Palmer is chairman.

MORRISON WILL BROKEN.

Gen. Harrison Wins the Famous Case for the Plaintiffs.

Richmond, Ind., May 15.—The jury in the Morrison will case, on trial since January 14, returned a verdict for the plaintiffs, after being out over ninety hours. By this verdict the will of James L. Morrison to an estate valued at $650,000 will be broken and it will be redivided by the law. The plaintiffs to the suit were James and Bertha Morrison, grand children of the testator. The cost of the trial is estimated at $100,000, and the fee paid General Harrison by the plaintiffs is said to have been $15,000. The verdict rendered was based wholly on the unsoundness of James L. Morrison's mind and the allegation of undue influence was taken into consideration.

Gresham resigned to accept a United States circuit court judgeship, is now lying critically ill at his Maryland home, some ten miles from this city. Mr. McCulloch is not suffering from any particular disease but from a general breaking down of the system. His daughter, who has been traveling in Europe, has been summoned home.

Considerable Damage to Fruit, Berries and Tender Vegetables and Plants in Many Parts of the Country—Grain and Corn Not Generally Injured.

Pennsylvania Crops Escape Injury.

Pennsylvania—All crops and fruit in fine condition; Erie grape belt and a few other sections report considerably damage by frost, but full extent not yet determined.

Maryland—Peaches and other kinds of fruit reported considerably injured by rain; frost on the 13th in sections west of the Chesapeake not reported killing, except in Garrett county, no damage done so far as known.

Great Damage in Illinois.

Illinois—Frost damage slight in southern portion, but in northern counties corn, fruit and garden truck greatly damaged; rainfall plentiful in north and west half, but much needed in southern portion.

Damage Insignificant.

Omaha, May 15.—The railway headquarters and all other sources of information have been conducting an exhaustive search for damages done by Monday night's frost and the damage is found to be insignificant. It is chiefly confined to orchards and garden stuff.

NOTHING DONE WITH HIS CASE.

Generally Believed That Haselton Will Have To Get Out.

Washington, May 15.—Nothing was done with the case of Senaca Haselton, United States minister to Venezuela, yesterday, it being cabinet day. Bradley B. Smalley, whose recommendation was chiefly instrumental in securing Haselton's appointment, did not visit the state department to-day, and, it is now understood will not do so in this matter. One of the explanations given of Hazelton's physical condition is that it is the result of "sunstroke," resulting from taking a sea bath and walking three miles afterwards in the open air under a tropical sun. In any case it seems to be a determined fact that Haselton will be retired either by resignation or removal, and that another appointment to that mission will shortly be made.

WILL MEET AT ATLANTIC CITY.

The Gathering of Elks at Buffalo Only the Dissatisfied Members.

Washington, May 15.—Referring to the dispatch from Omaha in regard to the coming meeting of the Elks, E. B. Hay, of this city, grand exalted ruler of the order, said: "The grand lodge of Elks will meet at Atlantic City, July 9 to 11. There will be delegates from 300 lodges present, representing in all 21,000 Elks. The meeting at Buffalo will simply be a voluntary meeting of dissatisfied Elks."

TOWN AND HOME FAVORITE.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., MAY 15, 1895.

Conan Doyle's new story begins today.

The fact that the Orange Mountain Cable Company has gone to smash, is losing money, and will discontinue operating its road, will deter capitalists from attempting a similar enterprise to convey passengers up the face of the mountain to Washington Rock. The true way to reach the Rock is by electric railway through the Notch and over the Washington Valley road. The time is about ripe for the consummation of such a project.

Circuses are in disfavor with Plainfield authorities. The Mayor is always averse to granting license for traveling tent shows, and since the experience of Monday, when the tough Wild West, with its attendant gang of swindlers, gave so much trouble, it is not likely that even the "best" circuses can secure a license in Plainfield this season. Circuses are n't much good to a town like Plainfield. They take away a good deal of money that might better be spent locally.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Miss Palmer and daughter of Brooklyn are visiting Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Haynes on North avenue.

Hugh McCulloch, formerly Secretary of the Treasury, and brother of Mrs. Lawrence Myers, is still critically ill.

Mrs. William H. Lyons has returned to Orange after spending several days with Mr. and Mrs. George B. Vanderhoff of East Front street.

A large number of Plainfield people went to Morristown this afternoon to attend the wedding of Rev. G. Kennedy Newell of Hope Chapel to Miss Katharine Erdman.

A. E. Stover, one of F. C. Lounsbury's employes in the Hastings Card Company, 28 Beekman street, New York, is ill at his home 248 East Ninth street, this city.

Dr. Helen Cooley, sister of Dr. J. H. Cooley of North Plainfield, was graduated yesterday with the highest honors ever given by the New York Medical College and Hospital for Women.

A farewell communion service will be held in Dr. Harsha's church, 123d street and Lenox avenue, New York, this evening, at which Evangelist Wright will be present, and an invitation is extended to Mr. Wright's friends in Plainfield to be present.

W. H. Sebring and Dr. D. C. Adams of this city and R. H. Dungan of Somerville were in Trenton yesterday attending the Grand Commandery, Knights Templar of New Jersey, as representatives of Trinity Commandery of this city. Messrs. Sebring and Adams are also attending the Grand Chapter today.

REJOICE, KRANKS!

The Y. M. C. A. Athletes at Last Determined to Have a Permanent Ball Team.

After much delay dallying the Y. M. C. A. athletics have at last got down to business and are, making a determined effort to put a permanent and first-class baseball team in the field. This was accomplished last night at a meeting of the enthusiasts when T. H. Bogert, C. J. Miller and R. Schuyler were made a committee to arrange a schedule of games, and C. Thorn, R. Davis, and S. B. Egan a committee to look after subscriptions to procure uniforms, which will cost $70. The team will be made up the same as that published in The Daily Press Monday, with the exception of John McLaughlin, who is to play with Somerville. The Crescent Oval grounds will be used for playing.

Saltzman Again Honored.

The following Plainfielders are in Elizabeth today attending the annual convention of the State Exempt Firemen's Association: D. W. Littell, William A. Woodruff, E. M. Laing, J. E. Flannery, Samuel J. Robinson, A. Saltzman, G. Thorn and T. O Doane.

Charles W. Bowles of Trenton was elected president, and A. Saltzman of Plainfield vice-president. The next convention will be held in Hackensack.

A CLEAN REFORMER.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, PRESIDENT OF THE NEW YORK POLICE BOARD

A Thorough Partisan, But One Who Can Be Trusted to Carry Out Non-Partisan Principles. Student, Politician, Hunter and Author.

Persons who are acquainted with the many sided personality of ex-Civil Service Commissioner Theodore Roosevelt give Mayor Strong credit for sagacity in selecting him to aid in reorganizing the Police Department of New York upon a non-partisan basis.

I the galaxy of younger Republicans in the country there is none better fitted by birth, education, training or other qualifications to undertake the work.

Despite the fact that he is only 37 years old, he has already left the impress upon the politics of this city so strongly that Tammany Hall has never been able to eliminate it, especially his act in forever removing from the Board of Aldermen the power of vetoing appointments made by the Mayor.

As an athlete at Harvard College he won a reputation which was only enhanced by his residence among the rough ranchmen of the West, where he earned the fear and respect of the most desperate by his muscular arms and particularly straight shooting.

In literature his success has been won largely by his remarkable energy. He has labored in spare moments between political duties, and his name is envied by every writer, professional or otherwise, in the country.

His individuality is made up of a dozen decided contrasts, each strong in itself, but all so blended that even his most intimate friends cannot tell where one characteristic begins and the other ends. He has a large fortune, is descended from one of the oldest Knickerbocker families, and is thoroughly at home whether in Fifth avenue drawing rooms, legislative halls or in the cow punchers' huts in Montana and Idaho.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

"I naturally disapprove of the half conscious spread eagle Americanism which is ever exerting itself at the wrong time," said Mr. Roosevelt recently. "I dislike it, of course, when it is put forward as a plea to excuse moral shortcomings of a kind usually connected with public affairs. Nevertheless, in spite of this common abuse, I am sure that no man can well play his part in our life who is not honestly American in heart, belief and instinct."

Mr. Roosevelt has invariably lived up to this sentiment, from the time he was graduated from Harvard College, in 1880. He began his political career in 1882, when he was elected to the Assembly, where he retained his seat until 1884. From the first he made himself felt by his bold stand on the principles of right and wrong, and soon became a terror to promoters of unclean jobs. On his re-election, when only 25 years old and three years out of college, he became the leader of the Republican minority and was his party's candidate for Speaker. Failing to attain that honor, he secured the chairmanship of the Committee on Cities.

His efforts to impeach Judge Westbrook are well remembered, and Tammany is still groaning over the fact that he took away the Aldermanic veto. From the Legislature Mr. Roosevelt went to the Republican National Convention and earned fresh laurels. When the "third term" men under the leadership of Roscoe Conkling, tried to force the nomination of General Grant upon the party, Mr. Roosevelt contested every point with the imperious Senator, who in the end was defeated in the fight.

Next came one of the most complex political junctures in the history of city elections. This was the three cornered contest between ex-Mayor Hewitt, Henry George and Mr. Roosevelt. Of course, Mr. Roosevelt was badly beaten, but he took defeat philosophically. When Mr. Harrison was elected President, Mr. Roosevelt was appointed a Civil Service Commissioner, which place he has just resigned.

This is but a brief outline of the struggles in which he has taken part. His active opposition to spoilsmen of all classes have kept him in a continual conflict with them. But in all the turmoil he has found time to spend several months of the year clad in a flannel shirt, slouch hat and big boots, with his trousers tucked inside, on his ranch out West, and to write dozens of short stories and essays, and to do much serious literary work.

He has written several of the volumes in Mr. Freeman's "Historic Town Series," and two historical volumes on "The Winning of the West." He is still at work upon this last named subject.

When not in Washington he lives near Oyster Bay, L. I., at a beautiful place surrounded on three sides by water, and called "Sagamore Hill." It is there he has his hunting trophies on the walls, and where most of his literary work is done.—New York Advertiser.

THE PRINCE'S VISIT.

HIS LAST AND ONLY TRIP TO AMERICA WAS IN 1860.

He Was Then 19 Years Old. If He Comes to the Yacht Races President Cleveland Will Adopt Buchanan's Precedent and Entertain Him at the White House.

The Prince of Wales is to visit America to witness the yacht races in the fall, and if Mr. Cleveland follows precedent he will have to invite the Prince to be his guest at the White House. That is what President Buchanan did when the Prince, then a youth of 19, visited America in 1860.

The Prince's first visit was intended particularly as a tour of investigation of the British possessions in Canada. President Buchanan did not wait for an official confirmation of the report that the Prince was to come to this country. He acted on the publications in the newspapers, and on the 4th of June, 1860, he addressed a personal letter to the Queen of England, which was presented by Mr. Dallas, then our Minister at the Court of St. James.

The reply of the Queen is one of the official documents on file in the State Department, where there are many specimens of the correspondence of many kings, queens and emperors.

Before coming to Washington the Prince had visited Detroit, Chicago, St. Louis, Cincinnati, Pittsburg, Altoona and Harrisburg, and had been entertained in each of these cities. He had had a shooting excursion and a ride down the Allegheny Mountains on a Pennsylvania Railroad locomotive. Everywhere the representative of royalty had been received with the greatest enthusiasm.

The Secretary of State, Mr. Cass, accompanied by two nephews of the President, met the Prince at the railroad station, and he was escorted immediately to the Executive Mansion. The members of his suite accompanied him.

The President would have liked to entertain the whole of the Prince's party, but there is no Windsor Castle or Buckingham Palace in Washington. And surely it was enough that the President of the United States should have given up his own bedroom to a stranger. There are only five bedrooms in the White House.

The Prince of Wales occupied the room on the south side of the mansion next the library. This was President Harrison's bedroom during the last administration, but it is now the playroom of the Cleveland children. The Duke of Newcastle occupied the bedroom adjoining—the room in which President Garfield lay sick and in which Mrs. Harrison died. The other official guest, Major General Bruce, was lodged in the apartment opposite the library. The President had a bedroom improvised for himself in the executive offices.

On Thursday, October 4, the Prince and his suite visited the Capitol, where there was very little to see beyond the architectural features of the building, because Congress was not in session.

On the next day the Prince went to Mount Vernon. The excursion was then a rather serious business. It was not merely a day's pleasure down the Potomac; nor was the sightseeing at the historic home of Washington reduced to the order which now prevails. The mansion was there and the tomb, but the place had not been restored to the condition in which Washington left it. Only four years before the Mount Vernon Association had been chartered by the State of Virginia, and two years after that Edward Everett had raised the first $10,000 toward paying for the restoration of the mansion.

The Prince accompanied the President and the members of his Cabinet down the river on a government boat—the Harriet Lane. The Marine band had preceded the party. From the wharf the President and the Prince went to the mansion and thence to the tomb. When the Prince stood at the tomb with uncovered head the Marine band, concealed in the shrubbery close at hand, played a dirge composed for the occasion. The Prince was much moved by the solemnity of the occasion, and he directed on his return to England that the annual medal for the encouragement of English poetry should be awarded to the poet who would treat most successfully the subject, "The Prince of Wales at the Tomb of Washington."

Before leaving Mount Vernon the Prince planted a tree to add to the historic group already started there.

The visit to Mount Vernon closed the incidents of the Prince's official reception in Washington. When he left there he went to Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York, West Point, Boston and Portland. He sailed from Portland to England.

The Black Man and White Trash.

"There's nothing in the world that surpasses the contempt of a negro for a poor white man," said Col. McLendon. "I suppose it is inherited. A white man who didn't own slaves in the old times was considered beneath the notice of a respectable negro, and the feeling has grown more pronounced since emancipation. Then, again, the plantation overseers were usually poor whites. The negroes all hated them, and they may have taken some satisfaction in a contempt for the whole class they represented.

"The other day I was walking along the street when a colored man came by driving before a wagon the most forlorn specimen of a cow I have ever seen. She was an animated skeleton, and half her hide was bare where she had rubbed off the hair. One horn was gone and the other drooped as if it were falling out. She was just able to creep and drag the wagon along after her, but the old darky who was driving beat the poor beast with a stick and cursed me:

"'G'long dar, now, you poor white trash!'"—Chicago Record.

CYCLING COMMENT.

The Alva Wheelmen of New York will run to Plainfield next Sunday.

Albert Woltmann of West Seventh street is now riding a new Cleveland Swell Special wheel.

The tickets for the Memorial Day meet of the Crescent Wheelmen have been placed on sale, and are finding many advance purchasers.

The Eldridge Bicycle Company report the following sales: Columbia to Mrs. D. W. Pond; Crawford to V. Christhofferson, and a Hartford No. 1 to Ed Schenck.

The Y. M. C. A. Bicycle Club will have a run to the Millburn road race Memorial Day morning. The following Saturday they will run to New Brunswick.

Another bicycle was picked up by Policeman Frederickson last night at the corner of Park avenue and Second street, and there are now two awaiting claimants at the police station.

Many people are complaining of the careless manner in which the surplus dirt from the sewer trenches are loaded upon wagons so that a great deal of it slides into the streets over which they pass, and especially the small stones which form a part of the excavations. These, left in the road, constantly endanger the safety of bicyclists.

—The New Brunswick Tally-Ho Club paid A. D. Findley a visit today enroute to the Firemen's Convention.

—A new horse blanket was stolen from G. O. Stevens at 5:30 this morning. Jesse Hetfield saw the thief scale the fence.

—Frank Freehill, indicted for the murder of Alfred E. Jewell of Rahway, today pleaded not guilty, and June 17 was set for trial.

Incentive to Merit Among Animals.

The existence of a cat show in New York moves the Tribune to remark: It seems such a pity that the animals that take prizes in shows never know that they take them. When a horse is racing he knows that he is trying to get ahead of some other horse. When he has got ahead of the other horse he knows that he has got ahead of him, and when he has won the race who shall say that he does not know that he has won it, or that he does not feel the same pride and satisfaction in it as his owner and his jockey? But when a horse or a dog or a cat is put in a row with a hundred other horses or dogs or cats at the Madison Square Garden, what does he care whether there is a red ticket or a blue ticket nailed to the back of his box? There may be one compensation—if the animals that take prizes feel no satisfaction, those that fail to take them feel no disappointment.

Given a Chance to Fatten.

Thomas P. Wall, who wanted to be a sweeper in the New York Street Cleaning Department, but was rejected by the examining physician because he didn't weigh enough, appealed to erratic Col. Waring.

"I used to weigh 145 pounds," he said, "but for several months I have been out of work and I haven't had enough to eat. Now I weigh only 119."

"Well," said Waring, "I'll appoint you, and let you earn enough money to fatten yourself up. But if you don't reach the proper condition within a reasonable time I'll have to lay you off, and you cannot complain if I do."

Wall promised to do his best.

A Worthy Monument.

The decision of the Rumford Historical Society of Woburn, Mass., to erect a monument on the farm where the Baldwin apple was discovered, nearly a hundred years ago, is in every way commendable. The estate which, through the medium of a sturdy native seedling cross fertilization by a beneficent bumblebee, gave birth to a new and superior apple is worthy of a monument.

A Visitor's Experience.

C. W. Lyon of Pittsfield, Mass., who is in town for a few days, met with a peculiar accident Sunday. Together with some friends he went to Tier's ice-cream place at the lake house. While walking about the yard, he stepped on a board, which gave way, and he fell into a large hole half full of water, which had formerly been used as a well. With the assistance of friends, he was helped out of the excavation, and though there was no serious damage Mr. Lyons sustained a severe shock.

OUR MISTAKES.

We make 'em as well as other people. Sometimes it's in marking goods. For instance—Customer came in yesterday to see the Summer Underwear we were advertising. "Very good, but have you no better?" she said. Told her no, and she went out, but came back and said the other fellows wanted 75c for what we asked 33c for. No doubt the other fellow's were as good as ours, but it only goes to show that sometimes we mark goods too low, but we are still

THE EXPLOITS OF BRIGADIER GERARD,

HOW THE KING HELD THE BRIGADIER

By A. Conan Doyle

(Copyright, 1895, by Bacheller, Johnson & Bacheller.)

Murat was undoubtedly an excellent cavalry officer, but he had too much swagger, which spoils many a good soldier. Lasalle, too, was a very dashing leader, but he ruined himself with wine and folly. Now I, Etienne Gerard, was always totally devoid of swagger, and at the same time I was very abstemious, except, maybe, at the end of a campaign, or when I met an old comrade-in-arms. For these reasons I might, perhaps, had it not been for a certain diffidence, have claimed to be the most valuable officer in my own branch of the service. It is true that I never rose to be more than a chief of brigade, but then, as every one knows, no one had a chance of rising to the top unless he had the good fortune to be with the Emperor in his early campaigns. Except Lasalle and Lobau and Drouet, I can hardly remember any one of the generals who had not already made his name before the Egyptian business. Even I, with all my brilliant qualities, could only attain the head of my brigade, and also the special medal of honor, which I received from the Emperor himself, and which I keep at home in a leather pouch. But though I never rose higher than this, my qualities were very well known by those who had served with me and also by the English. After they had captured me in the way which I described to you the other night, they kept a very good guard over me at Oporto, and I promise you that they did not give such a formidable opponent a chance of slipping through their fingers. It was on the 10th of August that I was escorted on board the transport which was to take us to England, and behold me before the end of the month in the great prison which had beeen built for us at Dartmoor! "L'hotel Francais, et Pension," we used to call it, for you understand that we were all brave men there, and that we did not lose our spirits because we were in adversity.

It was only those officers who refused to give their parole who were confined at Dartmoor, and most of the prisoners were seamen, or from the ranks. You ask me, perhaps, why it was that I did not give this parole, and so enjoy the same treatment as most of my brother officers. Well, I had two reasons, and both of them were sufficiently strong.

In the first place, I had so much confidence in myself that I was quite convinced that I could escape. In the second, my family, though of good repute, has never been wealthy, and I could not bring myself to take anything from the small income of my mother. On the other hand, it would never do for a man like me to be outshone by the bourgeois society of an English country town, or to be without the means of showing courtesies and attentions to those ladies whom I should attract. It was for these reasons that I preferred to be buried in the dreadful prison of Dartmoor. I wish now to tell you of my adventures in England, and of how far Milor Wellington's words were true when he said that his king would hold me.

And first of all I may say that if it were not that I have set off to tell you about what befell myself, I could keep you here until morning with my stories about Dartmoor itself, and about the singular things which occurred there. It was one of the very strangest places in the whole world, for there, in the middle of that great desolate waste, were herded together seven or eight thousand men—warriors, you understand, men of experience and courage. Around there were a double wall, and a ditch, and warders and soldiers, but, my faith! you could not coop men like that up like rabbits in a hutch! They would escape by twos and tens and twenties, and then the cannon would boom, and the search parties run, and we, who were left behind, would laugh and dance and shout "Vive l'Empereur," until the warders would turn their muskets upon us in their passion. And then we would have our little mutinies, too, and up would come the infantry and the guns from Plymouth, and that would set us yelling "Vive l'Empereur" once more, as though we wished them to hear us in Paris. We had lively moments at Dartmoor, and we contrived that those who were about us should be lively also.

You must know that the prisoners there had their own courts of justice, in which they tried their own cases, and inflicted their own punishments. Stealing and quarreling were punished—but most of all treachery. When I came there first there was a man, Meunier, from Rheims, who had given information of some plot to escape. Well, that night, owing to some form or other which had to be gone through, they did not take him out from among the other prisoners, and though he wept and screamed, and groveled upon the ground, they left him there among the comrades whom he had betrayed. That night there was a trial with a whispered accusation and a whispered defense, a gagged prisoner, and a judge whom none could see. In the morning when they came for their man with papers for his release, there was not as much of him left as you could put upon your thumb nail. They were ingenious people, these prisoners, and they had their own way of managing.

We officers, however, lived in a separate wing, and a very singular group we represented there, and some had been there from the time when Junot was beaten at Vimiera. We had chasseurs in their green tunics, and hussars, like myself, and blue-coated dragoons, and white-fronted lancers, and voltigeurs, and grenadiers, and men of the artillery and engineers. But the greater part were naval officers, for the English had had the better of us upon the seas. I could never understand this until I journeyed myself from Oporto to Plymouth, when I lay for seven days upon my back, and could not have stirred had I seen the eagle of the regiment carried before my eyes. It was in perfidious weather like this that Nelson took advantage of us.

I had no sooner got into Dartmoor than I began to plan to get out again.

THEN WITH ONE GOOD WRENCH IT CAME OFF IN MY HAND.

and you can readily believe that with wits sharpened by twelve years of warfare, it was not very long before I saw my way.

You must know, in the first place, that I had a very great advantage in having some knowledge of the English language. I learned it during the months that I spent before Danzig, from Adjutant Obriant, of the Regiment Irlandais, who was sprung from the ancient kings of the country. I was quickly able to speak it with some facility, for I do not take long to master anything to which I set my mind. In three months I could not only express my meaning, but I could use the idioms of the people. It was Obriant who taught me to say "Be jabers," just as we might say "Ma foi;" and also "The curse of Crummle!" which means "Ventre Blue!" Many a time I have seen the English smile with pleasure when they have heard me speak so much like one of themselves.

We officers were put two in a cell, which was very little to my taste, for my roommate was a tall, silent man named Beaumont, of the Flying Artillery, who had been taken by the English cavalry at Astorga.

It is seldom I meet a man of whom I cannot make a friend, for my disposition and manners are—as you know them. But this fellow had never a smile for my jests, nor an ear for my sorrows, but would sit looking at me with his sullen eyes, until sometimes I thought that his two years of captivity had driven him crazy. Ah, how I longed that old Bouvet, or any of my comrades of the hussars, was there, instead of this mummy of a man. But such as he was I had to make the best of him, and it was very evident that no escape could be made unless he were my partner in it, for what could I possibly do without his observing me? I hinted at it, therefore, and then by degrees I spoke more plainly, until it seemed to me that I had prevailed upon him to share my lot.

I tried the walls, and I tried the floor, and I tried the ceiling, but though I tapped and probed, they all appeared to be very thick and solid. The door was of iron, shutting with a spring lock, and provided with a small grating, through which a warder looked twice in every night. Within there were two beds, two stools, two washstands—nothing more. It was enough for my wants, for when had I had as much during those twelve years spent in camps? But how was I to get out? Night after night I thought of my five hundred hussars, and had dreadful nightmares, in which I fancied that the whole regiment needed shoeing, or that my horses were all bloated with green fodder, or that they were foundered from bogland, or that six squadrons were clubbed in the presence of the Emperor. Then I would awake in a cold sweat, and set to work picking and tapping at the walls once more: for I knew very well that there is no difficulty which cannot be overcome by a ready brain and a pair of cunning hands.

There was a single window in our cell, which was too small to admit a child. It was further defended by a thick iron bar in the centre. It was not a very promising point of escape, as you will allow, but I became more and more convinced that our efforts must be directed toward it. To make matters worse, it only led out into the exercise yard, which was surrounded by two high walls. Still, as I said to my sullen comrade, it is time to talk of the Vistula when you are over the Rhine. I got a small piece of iron, therefore, from the fittings of my bed, and I set to work to loosen the plaster at the top and the bottom of the bar. Three hours I would work, and then leap into my bed upon the sound of the warder's step. Then another three hours, and then very often another yet, for I found that Beaumont was so slow and clumsy at it that it was on myself only that I could rely. I pictured to myself my Third of Hussars waiting just outside that window, with kettledrums and standards and leopard-skin shabraques all complete. Then I would work and work like a madman, until my iron was crusted with my blood, as if with rust. And so, night by night, I loosened that stony plaster, and hid it away in the stuffing of my pillow, until the hour came when the iron shook; and then with one good wrench it came off in my hand, and my first step had been made toward freedom.

You will ask me what better off I was, since, as I have said, a child could not have fitted through the opening. I will tell you. I had gained two things—a tool and a weapon. With the one I might loosen the stone which fastened the window. With the other and picked with the sharpened end of my bar until I had worked out the mortar all round. You understand, of course, that during the day I replaced everything in its position, and that the warder was never permitted to see a speck upon the floor. At the end of three weeks I had separated the stone, and had the rapture of drawing it through, and seeing a hole left with ten stars shining through it, where there had been but four before. All was ready for us now, and I replaced the stone, smearing the edges of it round with a little fat and soot, so as to hide the cracks where the mortar should have been. In three nights the moon would be gone, and that seemed the best time for our attempt.

A GREAT AGREEMENT.

25,000 Physicians of One Mind.

Food for Strength First.—Medicine for Cure Second.—The Least Food that will give Most Nourishment, the Kind.

In this enlightened age, the old theory held by physicians — to get as much medicine in the least possible time into the system of a patient, even at the expense of stomach, blood, brains, nerves, and often, in the end, life itself — has been abandoned.

The old way was to "dose." If the patient had a tremendous constitution he sometimes "pulled through;" if not, which was more often the case, that special disease was considered more dangerous, as it had claimed another for its own.

But this is all changed now. All prominent physicians agree on one subject, any way. It is this — build the patient up first, give him new blood and strength, add flesh to his bones. He's then ready to receive the benefit of proper medical treatment.

To do this effectually, that must be given which will, in the least quantity, produce the greatest amount of vitality, — not a stimulant which quickly reacts disastrously, but a genuine food, a muscle, bone and blood maker. Such a food was long sought for, and at last discovered in that original and only raw food extract — Bovinine.

By the use of this wonderful life-generating preparation, every organ of the body becoming strengthened by nourishment, naturally begins to perform its ordinary functions, and at once the patient is on the road to recovery.

It is this result, obtained in hundreds of cases where Bovinine has been used, that has caused its indorsement by 25,000 prominent physicians in America.

In addition, thousands who have been benefited can vouch for the wonderful results obtained by the use of Bovinine for invalids, the old, convalescents, the over-worked, or, in fact, all who have found it necessary to maintain strength, flesh, and vigor.

SKETCHES OF LINCOLN.

Career as a Soldier In the Black Hawk War.

HIS FIRST OFFICIAL POSITION.

Another Wrestling Match—A Maiden Political Effort—Trouble at a Political Meeting—How He Inaugurated His Campaign—His Only Defeat Before the People.

[From "The Life of Lincoln" by William H. Herndon and Jesse W. Weik. Copyright, 1888, by Jesse W. Weik. Copyright, 1892, by D. Appleton & Co.]

VI.

In the neighborhood of the village, or rather a few miles to the southwest, lay a strip of timber called Clary's grove. The boys who lived there were a terror to the entire region, seemingly a necessary product of frontier civilization. They conceded leadership to one Jack Armstrong, a hardy, strong and well developed specimen of physical manhood, and under him they were in the habit of "cleaning out" New Salem whenever his order went forth to do so. Offut and Bill Clary, the latter skeptical of Lincoln's strength and agility, ended a heated discussion in the store one day over the new clerk's ability to meet the tactics of Clary's grove by a bet of $10 that Jack Armstrong was, in the language of the day, "a better man than Lincoln." The new clerk strongly opposed this sort of an introduction, but after much entreaty from Offut at last consented to make his bow to the social lions of the town in this unusual way. He was now 6 feet 4 inches high and weighed, as his friend and confidant, William Greene, tells us with impressive precision, "214 pounds." The contest was to be a friendly one and fairly conducted. All New Salem adjourned to the scene of the wrestle. Money, whisky, knives and all manner of property were staked on the result. It is unnecessary to go into the details of the encounter. Every one knows how it ended; how at last the tall and angular rail splitter, enraged at the suspicion of foul tactics and profiting by his height and the length of his arms, fairly lifted the great bully by the throat and shook him like a rag; how by this act he established himself solidly in the esteem of all New Salem and secured the restpectful admiration and friendship of the very man whom he had so thoroughly vanquished. From this time forward Jack Armstrong, his wife Hannah and all the other Armstrongs became his warm and trusted friends. None stood readier than they to rally to his support, none more willing to lend a helping hand. Lincoln appreciated their friendship and support and in after years proved his gratitude by saving one member of the family from the gallows.

The Black Hawk War.

The great Indian chief, Black Hawk, who on the 30th of June, 1831, had entered into an agreement, having all the solemnity of a treaty, with Governor Reynolds and General Gaines that none of his tribe should ever cross the Mississippi "to their usual place of residence, nor any part of their old hunting grounds east of the Mississippi, without permission of the president of the United States or the governor of the state of Illinois," had openly broken the compact. On the 6th of April, 1832, he recrossed the Mississippi and marched up Rock river valley, accompanied by about 500 warriors on horseback, while his women and children went up the river in canoes. The great chief was now 67 years old and believed that his plots were all ripe and his allies fast and true. Although warned by General Atkinson, then in command of Fort Armstrong, against this aggression and ordered to return, he proudly refused, claiming that he had "come to plant corn."

On being informed of the movement of Black Hawk, Governor Reynolds called for 1,000 mounted volunteers to co-operate with the United States forces under command of General Atkinson and drive the wily Indian back across the Mississippi. The response to the governor's call was prompt and energetic. In the company from Sangamon county Lincoln enlisted, and now for the first time entered on the vicissitudinous and dangerous life of a soldier. That he, in fact, regarded the campaign after the Indians as a sort of holiday affair and chicken stealing expedition is clearly shown in a speech he afterward made in congress in exposure of the military pretensions of General Cass. However, in grim, soldierly severity he marched with the Sangamon county contingent to Rushville, in Schuyler county, where, much to his surprise, he was elected captain of the company over William Kirkpatrick. A recital of the campaign that followed, in the effort to drive the treacherous Indians back, or a description of the few engagements—none of which reached the dignity of a battle—which took place, have in nowise been overlooked by the historians of Illinois and of the Black Hawk war. With the exception of those things which relate to Lincoln alone, I presume it would be needless to attempt to add anything to what has so thoroughly and truthfully been told.

A Valued Distinction.

On being elected captain, Lincoln replied in a brief response of modest and thankful acceptance. It was the first official trust ever turned over to his keeping, and he prized it and the distinction it gave him more than any which in after years fell to his lot. His company savored strongly of the Clary's grove order, and though daring enough in the presence of danger were difficult to bring down to the inflexibilities of military discipline. Each one seemed perfectly able and willing to care for himself, and, while the captain's authority was respectfully observed, yet, as some have said, they were none the less a crowd of "generous ruffians." I heard Mr. Lincoln say once, on the subject of his career as captain in this company and the discipline he exercised over his men, that to the first order given one of them he received the response, "Go to the devil, sir!"

Notwithstanding the interchange of many such unsoldierlike civilities between the officer and his men, a strong bond of affection united them together, and if a contest had arisen over the conflict of orders between the United States authorities and those emanating from Captain Lincoln or some other Illinois officer, as at one time was threatened, we need not be told to which side the Sangamon county company to a man would have gone. A general order forbidding the discharge of firearms within 50 yards of the camp was disobeyed by Captain Lincoln himself. For this violation of rule he was placed under arrest and deprived of his sword for a day. But this and other punishments in no way humiliated him in the esteem of his men. If anything, they only clung the closer, and when Clary's grove friendship asserted itself it meant that firm and generous attachment found alone on the frontier—that bond, closer than the affinity of blood, which becomes stronger as danger approaches death.

Lincoln's famous wrestling match with the redoubtable Thompson, a soldier from Union county, who managed to throw him twice in succession, caused no diminution in the admiration and pride his men felt in their captain's muscle and prowess. They declared that unfair advantage had been taken of their champion, that Thompson had been guilty of foul tactics, and that, in the language of the sporting arena, it was a "dog fall." Lincoln's magnanimous action, however, in according his opponent credit for fair dealing in the face of the widespread and adverse criticism that prevailed, only strengthened him in the esteem of all.

The term for which the volunteers had enlisted had now expired, and the majority, tiring of the service, the novelty of which had worn off, and longing for the comforts and good cheer of their homes, refused either to re-enlist or render further service. They turned their faces homeward, each with his appetite for military glory well satiated. But the war was not over, and the mighty Black Hawk was still east of the Mississippi. A few remained and re-enlisted. Among them was Lincoln. This time, eschewing the responsibility of a captaincy and to avoid the possible embarrassment of dragging about camp a wooden sword, he entered the company of Elijah Iles as a dignified private.

It has pleased some of Mr. Lincoln's biographers to attribute this re enlistment to pure patriotism on his part and a conscientious desire to serve his country. From the standpoint of sentiment that is a comfortable view to take of it, but I have strong reason to believe that Mr. Lincoln never entertained such serious notions of the campaign. In fact, I may say that my information comes from the best authority to be had in the matter—the soldier himself. Mr. Lincoln had no home. He had cut loose from his parents, from the Hankses and the Johnstons; he left behind him no anxious wife and children, and no chair before a warm fireside remained vacant for him. "I was out of work," he said to me once, "and there being no danger of more fighting I could do nothing better than enlist again."

Return to New Salem.

After his discharge from this last and brief period of service, along with the remainder of the Sangamon county soldiers, he departed from the scenes of recent hostilities for New Salem again. His soldier days had ended, and he returned now to enter upon a far different career. However much in later years he may have pretended to ridicule the disasters of the Black Hawk war or the part he took in it, yet I believe he was rather proud of it, after all. When congress, along in the fifties, granted him a land warrant, he was greatly pleased. He located it on some land in Iowa and declared to me one day that he would die seized of that land, and although the tract never yielded him anything he never, so far as my knowledge extends, parted with its ownership.

The return of the Black Hawk warriors to New Salem occurred in the month of August but a short time before the general election. A new legislature was to be chosen, and as Lincoln had declared to his comrades in the army he would, and in obedience to the effusive declaration of principles which he had issued over his signature in March, before he went to the war, he presented himself to the people of his newly adopted county as a candidate for the legislature.

The handbill or circular alluded to announcing his candidacy was a sort of literary fulmination, but on account of its length I deem it unnecessary to insert it here.

On the Stump.

The election being near at hand, only a few days remained for his canvass. One who was with him at the time, describing his appearance, says: "He wore a mixed jeans coat, claw hammer style, short in the sleeves and bobtail—in fact, it was so short in the tail he could not sit on it—flax and tow linen pantaloons and a straw hat. I think he wore a vest, but do not remember how it looked. He wore pot metal boots." His maiden effort on the stump was a speech on the occasion of a public sale at Pappsville, a village 11 miles west of Springfield. After the sale was over and speechmaking had begun a fight—a "general fight," as one of the bystanders relates—ensued, and Lincoln, noticing one of his friends about to succumb to the energetic attack of an infuriated ruffian, interposed to prevent it. He did so most effectually. Hastily descending from the rude platform, he edged his way through the crowd, and seizing the bully by the neck and seat of his trousers threw him by means of his strength and long arms, as one witness stoutly insists, "12 feet away." Returning to the stand and throwing aside his hat, he inaugurated his campaign with the following brief but juicy declaration:

"Fellow citizens, I presume you all know who I am. I am humble Abraham Lincoln. I have been solicited by many friends to become a candidate for the legislature. My politics are short and sweet, like the old woman's dance. I am in favor of a national bank. I am in favor of the internal improvement system and a high protective tariff. These are my sentiments and political principles. If elected, I shall be thankful; if not, it will be all the same."

Home Indorsement.

The election, as he had predicted, resulted in his defeat—the only defeat, as he himself afterward stated, that he ever suffered at the hands of the people. But there was little defeat in it, after all. Out of the eight unsuccessful candidates he stood third from the head of the list, receiving 657 votes. Five others received less. The most gratifying feature of it all was the hearty support of his neighbors at New Salem. Of the entire 208 votes in the precinct he received every one save three.

It may not be amiss to explain the cause of this remarkable indorsement of Lincoln by the voters in New Salem. It arose chiefly from his advocacy of the improvement of the Sangamon river. He proposed the digging of a canal a few miles east of the point where the Sangamon enters the Illinois river, thereby giving the former two mouths. This, he explained to the farmers, would prevent the accumulation of backwater and consequent overflow of their rich alluvial bottom lands in the spring. It would also avert the sickness and evil results of stagnant pools, which formed in low places after the high waters receded. His scheme—that is the name by which it would be known today—commended itself to the judgment of his neighbors, and the flattering vote he received shows how they indorsed it.

Not In Style.

Lincoln confessed that for once he was greatly abashed over his personal appearance, and that was when he made his famous speech at Cooper Union, New York.

MR. BIRD AS CUPID.

"No, no, sir; absurd, preposterous!" Her father was too polite to add, "And you are far from an eligible young man."

Tom himself was modest about the latter claim, but having had Dorothy's approval he fancied that he was at least two-thirds eligible. Dorothy had beautiful blue eyes, and when she was in earnest her manner had a certain dignity and her voice became nearly tragic in its intonation. So in her very best manner she declared emphatically.

"Tom, I would rather die than give you up."

Dorothy naturally cried the color out of her blue eyes, and Tom was put on his mettle. What was the difference if he hadn't a sou, while Sylvester, pere, was so many times a millionaire that the mind grew weary counting his wealth. Sylvester, pere, had been once.

As merrily as the proverbial marriage bell the plan was arranged. Dorothy came to New York, April 30. Tom found a church, engaged the clergyman and had the witnesses ready. On the morning of May 1 Miss Dorothy started out for a walk, which was to end at the church door. Tom put on a tall hat and a frock coat, and felt in his waistcoat pocket to make sure of the ring, and he also started out.

Turning from his door into Madison square, he saw across the square a little old gentleman hurrying madly up the avenue. And by all the bad luck a man ever had, the old gentleman was Sylvester, pere, who ought to have been at that moment in Chicago, but who evidently was hurrying up the avenue in the most excited haste with a full knowledge, Tom supposed, of the whole affair. And the church was open, and the clergyman and the witnesses were waiting.

Tom's heart went down into his boots. But he plucked up courage and found a friend in the hour of need. Looking up the street he saw Mr. Jack Bird, immaculately dressed and bowling along leisurely in a hansom.

"Jack!" he hailed him, and that worthy drew up to the curb.

"Jack," Tom went on excitedly, "this is a time if ever to prove your friendship. I am on my way to church to be married. There's her father over there, Sylvester, pere, about to stop us. Jack, for Heaven's sake, head him off, as you value my happiness."

In this melodramatic fashion Mr. Van Brule went on, while his friend's eyes bulged. Mr. Bird has prominent gray eyes which, when he is astonished, look like great diamonds. Was Tom mad? What the Dickens!

He looked at the figure of Sylvester, pere, at Tom standing there, the bridegroom arrayed for an elopment. And then, with the quick decision that might have turned a battle in the moment of defeat, he cried to Tom: "Go on; I will make myself responsible for him."

Ordering the cabby to overtake the excited old gentleman, who was almost out of sight, Jack decided that the part of boldness was the only one.

"Mr. Sylvester," he cried, drawing up to the curb.

"No time!—an important matter!"

"I know it, sir. Miss Dorothy is running away."

Now what Mr. Sylvester answered may be rendered ——, because, as he is a most respectable old gentleman, well esteemed in a Chicago church, it would not be fair to be more explicit.

"I cannot see this happen, sir," said Jack. "Jump in, and we'll be just in time to stop it."

"Young man, young man, do you know where they have gone?"

"The very place. We'll get there in time if you hurry."

Sylvester, pere, jumped in. Mr. Bird told the cabby to drive like mad to St. Thomas's, as if an elopement could occur in St. Thomas's; and like mad, because the cabby knew Mr. Bird to be a gentleman of large tips, they bowled up the avenue.

And Sylvester, pere, poured out his heart to Bird, and said Tom was a villain, and Bird agreed with him.

"Tell the fellow to drive faster—faster, I say!" fumed Sylvester, pere.

Of course St. Thomas was as mute as a church can be with doors closed, like a priest denying absolution to a sinner.

Here Bird appeared confused. He admitted that he had mistaken the church. Sylvester, pere, nearly had apoplexy at his disappointment, and in all conscience the only thing Bird could do was to continue the search.

At last both returned crestfallen to Mrs. Fielding's on Madison avenue, where Dorothy had been stopping.

Now Mrs. Fielding wasa very charming and admirable woman. But as Dorothy had been intrusted to her by Sylvester, pere, she had felt it incumbent on her to let him know of her discovery regarding Dorothy's and Tom Van Brule's proposed elopment. But Sylvester, pere, had reached the house just as Miss Dorothy left. Rushing about wildly, looking for his daughter, Sylvestea, pere, had fallen into Mr. Bird's hands.

As the cab drew near Mrs. Fielding's Sylvester, pere's eyes began to bulge, for there on the doorstep stood the fugitives, Dorothy and Tom Van Brule.

"We're married, papa," said Dorothy, demurely, "and Mr. Bird, I never—never can forgive you for helping papa to thwart us."

"How could you have done it?" demanded Tom, in apparent high dudgeon.

Nor does Sylvester, pere, know to this day Mr. Bird's subterfuge. He regards him as a most exemplary young man, fit to pose as "an old head on young shoulders."

Of course Mr. and Mrs. Van Brule were forgiven at last.

It is enough to add that owing to Mr. Bird's interference the Van Brules live happily ever after—at least they have lived happily up to date. Mrs. Van Brule rides a bicycle and presides at the most charming pink teas.

Thirteen Years Experience.

Miller's Fall, Mass.—"At different time during the past thirteen years," said Mr. W. A. Johnson of this place, "my wife has been sick from kidney and liver complaint and ulceration of the stomach. At each time she has taken Dr. David Kenned's Favorite Remedy, and it cured her. It is a family remedy with us and many of our neighbors.

It Did the Business.

Mr. J. H. Cobb, publisher of the Mirror, at Brockton, N. Y., says: "For nearly two years the Mirror has been publishing the advertisements of Chamberlain's Remedies. A few days ago the writer was suffering from a bowel trouble and resorted to an old remedy which did not prove efficacious; finally he tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and two doses did the business, checking it completely. For sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy.

Free Pills.

Send your address to Bucklen & Co., Chicago, and get a free sample box of Dr. King's New Life Pills. A trial will convince you of their merits. These pills are easy in action and are particularly effective in the cure of constipation and sick headache. For malaria and liver troubles they have been proved invaluable. They are guaranteed to be perfectly free from every deleterious substance and to be purely vegetable. They do not weaken by their action, but by giving tone to stomach and bowels greatly invigorate the system. Regular size 25c per box. Sold by L. W. Randolph, druggist.

Mr. D. Wiley, ex-postmaster, Black Breek, N. C., was so badly afflicted with rheumatism that he was only able to hobble around with canes, and even then it caused him great pain. After using Chamberlain's Pain Balm he was so much improved that he threw away his canes. He says this liniment did him more good than all other medicine and treatment put together. For sale at 50 cents per bottle at Reynolds's Pharmacy.

A Remarkable Cure of Rheumatism.

From the Groton Connecticut Review.—"David Lewis, who has been afflicted all winter by rheumatism, is out again and all due to one of the medicines advertised in our columns. After trying everything possible, he used Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which has relieved him of all pain, from which he was a constant sufferer and promises to make him fit for duty soon. We know David has been a great sufferer and are glad to see him around again." For sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy.

Agreeably Surprised.

"I had a very severe cold on my lungs that caused much soreness and gave me considerable uneasiness in regard to the result," says Mr. T. E. Smith, of Billerica, Mass. "A local druggist called my attention to Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and on his recommendation I gave the remedy a careful trial. The result surprised me; I recovered entirely in three days." 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy.

HYMENEAL.

Pearson—Hoff.

The wedding of Charles O. Pearson to Miss Minnie E. Hoff took place May 15, last evening. Owing to the fact that Rev. C. E. Herring, pastor of the bride, had an engagement in New York, Rev. Cornelius Schenck performed the ceremony which made husband and wife. The bride was attired in white brilliantine and tulle with white sateen trimmings, and carried a bouquet of white roses and pinks. Miss Ada Wagner was the bridemaid and was attired in white china silk with pale blue trimmings, and carried a bouquet of pink roses and pinks. The bridemaid was assisted in her duties by the pretty little four-year-old niece of the groom, Miss Ethel Villers Pearson, who was attired in white china silk, trimmed with point-degene lace. Isaac Squiers was the best man.

A few friends, after the ceremony, greeted the happy couple at the residence of the groom's parents. The couple left on the 9:20 train for New York, and as the carriage left the house they were greeted with showers of rice, old slippers and laughter. They were the recipients of a number of very handsome and valuable presents.

The groom is the son of the well-known citizen W. W. Pearson, and is employed at the Potter Press Works. On their return from their wedding tour they will make Plainfield their home. The wedding was a quiet affair owing to a recent death in the family of the bride.

Newell—Erdman.

In the South Second Street Presbyterian Church in Morristown yesterday afternoon took place the marriage of Miss Katharine Erdman to Rev. G. Kennedy Newell, pastor of Hope Chapel of this city. A large number of Plainfield people were in attendance at the happy event, many of them driving to Morristown. A stage load of young people from Hope Chapel witnessed the ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. Newell will return to Plainfield early in June, after a bridal tour, at which time a reception will be tendered them.

TWO BALL TEAMS.

Plainfield's Y. M. C. A. Hustling Sporting Matters.

Another meeting of those interested in baseball will be held in the Y.M.C.A. Building this evening, when the committee having charge of the matter of raising a subscription for the purpurchase of uniforms will report what progress has been made. There seems to be little question that the necessary $70 will be raised, and the uniforms will probably be ordered immediately. They will be of gray material, with "Y. M. C. A." lettered in red on the breast.

Arrangements have been made for a game between the Y. M. C. A. and Arlington teams on the Crescent grounds at 3:30 next Saturday. The former team will be the same as that of last Saturday, when Westfield was defeated, with the exception of John McLaughlin, who has signed with Somerville, and will be succeeded by A.C. Wyckoff, who will play first base. Harry Bogert will become the regular pitcher. It is the intention of Physical Director MacPhie, as soon as the uniforms are received, to arrange a game with the Princeton Browns, one of the crack college teams, and thereafter provide a good game once a week, charging an admission fee to the grounds and running stages for the accommodation of the patrons, of which there will be a great many.

A second Y. M. C. A. team will also probably be organized to play with the local teams who feel that the regular team is too strong for them.

Before the end of the season Mr. MacPhie hopes to arrange a game with the Indian nine of the Onondago reservation, whose playing is not only first-class, but also adds an element of novelty for the kranks who attend.

The only regret that can be entertained concerning the permanent organization of the Y. M. C. A. team is that it came so late, by reason of which the Somerville club secured the services of John and Robert McLaughlin, the crack battery, who would have played with the local team had the permanent organization come a little earlier. But as it is the city has a bangup aggregation, and let the rooters turn out in swarms and root for them to win not only by talk but by financial aid.

Change of Labor.

J. T. Vegiard and A. McGuiness, who have been capable employes in the Scott Printing Machine Works, have accepted positions in the Campbell Press Works in Brooklyn, and assumed their new duties.

Rare Books Bestowed.

The N. J. Historical Society has recently received as gifts from Dr. J. Ackerman Coles of Scotch Plains the two following rare and valuable works from the library of his father, the late Dr. Abraham Coles, viz.: "The History of the Chinese Empire, containing a general description of its country, cities, villages, market-towns, seaports, government, religion, arts, animals, birds, insects, reptiles, fishes, trees, plants, fruits, seeds, etc., by Srs. Pierre de Goyer, Jacob de Keyser, Jean Nieuhoff and Jean le Cardentier, dedicated to Jean Baptiste Colbert, the distinguished Minister of Finance under Louis XIV, consisting of two large volumes bound together in full leather and elegantly illustrated with full-page copper-plate engravings; printed and published in French, at Leyden, for Jacob de Meurs, chief bookseller and engraver of the city of Amsterdam, 1665."

Additional value attaches itself to this volume by reason of its title page being stamped "Bibliotheque du Roy, Neuilly". The royal chateau of Neuilly was built in the reign of Louis XV; it was the favorite Summer residence of Louis Philippe, but was destroyed during the Revolution of 1848. This book, however, escaped destruction, and save the borings of the bookworm, which rather add to than diminish its value, after the lapse of more than 230 years it is in a most excellent state of preservation.

The other work is entitled: "Hyak Nin Is'shiu, or Stanzas by a Century of Poets", consisting of Japanese lyrical odes, in the original text, with English translations, explanatory notes and a full index, by F. V. Dickins, M. B., London, Smith, Elder & Co., 1866.

Both of the above are beautifully printed and are very interesting as well as useful additions to the collections of the society.

Mr. D. Wiley, ex-postmaster, Black Breek, N. C., was so badly afflicted with rheumatism that he was only able to hobble around with canes, and even then it caused him great pain. After using Chamberlain's Pain Balm he was so much improved that he threw away his canes. He says this liniment did him more good than all other medicine and treatment put together. For sale at 50 cents per bottle at Reynolds's Pharmacy.

C. Y. M. L. SUCCESS.

Excellent Entertainment Afforded by Plainfield Amateurs.

The Catholic Young Men's Lyceum of this city is a thoroughly active and wideawake organization, and all previous efforts towards success and fame have been most flattering. They have always endeavored to give the best in every undertaking, and the results reached have always been those for which they sought. And when the entertainment which was given last evening was arranged those acquainted with the affair in detail had not the slightest doubt as to its success. Strict attention was given to rehearsals, with the idea of excelling all former entertainments ever given, and the success which attended their first performance was indeed most gratifying.

The hall was filled with members of the Lyceum and their friends, all of whom thoroughly appreciated the evening's entertainment.

In opening, the orchestra, under the able direction of Eugene O'Reilly, rendered a very pretty selection that received hearty approbation from all.

Messrs. Burns and Austin then appeared, and gave a realistic dialogue entitled "The Drummer's Specialty". It was amusing, and the audience appreciated the humor evidenced.

"A Dutchman's Tribulations" was the topic assigned John H. Carney, and those present were convinced that they had never seen a Dutchman in so much trouble before. Everyone was quick to catch the pith of the jokes that permeated his whole discourse. The humor of Plainfield's favorite flowed like the quiet stream in the brook until the ocean was reached, when it burst forth in a sea of hearty applause. The Dutchman finally reached the end of his troubles and retired, leaving all in the best of spirits.

Miss Sarah Carney sang "Say Au Revoir, But not Good Bye". Her voice was excellent, and the selection was finely rendered. Miss St. Leger was the accompanist.

Part two was devoted to an exceedingly pretty comedy-drama in two acts, entitled "Hick'ry Farm". The story is one of quiet New England life, with amusing and exciting incidents interspersed. The cast was superb and well trained. M. J. Cashin as Ezekiel Fortune, the New England farmer, was very clever, and the part could not have been improved on while C. J. Ward as Lawrence M'Keegan, an alderman from the city, was in such contrast from the quiet life of Ezekiel that the audience had the opportunity of seeing both the city and country side interpreted in a manner that would have done credit to professionals. Miss E. Day was given the part of Jessie Fortune, daughter of Ezekiel. The programme styled her pretty and unsophisticated, and there was no mistake, for the part was filled with credit, and Miss Day received hearty commendation, as did also Miss A. Keely, who took the part of Mrs. Priscilla Dodge, a susceptible widow. The four parts mentioned are worthy of special note, but the rest of the cast was also excellent, and all deserve great credit for the very able manner in which they assumed their different roles.

The cast of characters, together with the synopsis, is as follows:

Good Eating Assured.

An old-fashioned New England supper cooked in up-to-date Plainfield is what the Y. M. C. A. members will be treated to tonight, preceding their annual meeting.

Necessary But Unpleasant.

Considerable inconvenience is caused street car passengers by the transfer which is necessary on Front street on account of the blockading of one track by the sewer trenches.

THIS NEWS IS GOOD.

Coal Has Dropped in Price in Plainfield.

DEALERS TAKE UNITED ACTION.

They Follow the Lead of the Elizabeth Merchants, as Was Urged by The Daily Press, and Wise Householders Will Make Immediate Provision for Their Next Season's Stock.

The members of the New Jersey Coal Exchange, composed of the coal dealers along the line of the Central between Roselle and Somerville, and of which the merchants in this city are influential members, have at last recognized the demand for lower rates on domestic coal, and, following out the suggestions in The Daily Press of a few days ago, have reduced the cost 50 cents per ton, making all grades $4.50 per ton. The change took effect yesterday, and was accomplished at a meeting of the members of the Exchange in J. D. Thickstun's office in this city Tuesday evening.

Consumers have long felt that the rates have been kept unduly high at all times of the year, in the towns affected by the Exchange, but the combine of dealers has been powerful enough to crush out all competition that would tend to lower the rates to consumers. In Elizabeth, where the wholesale cost of coal is practically the same as in Plainfield the dealers have been selling at retail for $4.50 a ton, and very recently reduced it 35 cents for the Summer. In doing this they give the consumer some of the benefit of the reduction which they get from the mines.

This action on the part of the Elizabeth dealers was the real cause of the combine making the reduction of 50 cents, because the dealers in Roselle and Cranford are obliged to compete with the Elizabeth merchants, when there is a difference of 85 cents in the cost of a ton of coal between these places.

Thus it will be seen that the merchants in Plainfield, Dunellen, Somerville and Westfield were obliged to come down in their rates, because it would be manifestly unfair for them to compel the Cranford and Roselle members of the combine to meet Elizabeth competition, while they maintained the high prices. And again it was necessary to do this to keep the Exchange intact, from the fact that if the organization had refused to make a reduction it is probable that the Roselle and Cranford dealers would have dropped out, and thus weakened it to a certain extent, when a time came for the raising of rates again.

Nearly all local dealers have sent out notices of reduction, and there will probably be a great rush among householders to put in their Winter supply before the prices are put up for the Fall.

The present rate is the lowest that Plainfield has enjoyed in years.

Much to Interest, in the County Fair.

"The County Fair" may have something of the flavor of a twice-told tale to the amusement-going public, but its quaint and curious characters are in sympathetic touch with nature, stand wear like homespun; and with the advantage of picturesque scenic environment, it bids fair to retain its popularity.

"The County Fair" appears in Music Hall, tomorrow night. Of course, the chief feature of sensational interest is the horse race, but "The County Fair" is full of other interesting things. Besides Abigail Prue, the prim, peevish old maid, and Otis Tucker, and Tim, the trainer, and Taggs, the tough, and Silas Hammerhead, and Cold Molasses, and a Jersey calf, and the horse race, it has the first wagon ever built on Cape Cod.

Plans for Memorial Day.

The meeting of the joint-memorial detail in Post 73 rooms last evening was largely attended. Plans for the observance of Memorial Day were presented and perfected, so that nothing now remains but to carry them out. In a few days, Capt. Wm. Hand, who was made marshal for that day, will issue the line of march which will be followed out. It will include Somerset street as far as the public school. This is done to see the raising of the new flag presented by Somerset Council, No. 104, J. O. U. A. M. It was also decided to meet at Post 73 rooms Sunday evening, May 26, at 7, to attend divine services in the Seventh-Day Baptist Church, when Dr. A. H. Lewis will preach the sermon.

Climax Against Boiling.

The Climax Gun Club of this city went to Rutherford this morning to shoot against the Boiling Springs team for a silver trophy given by a sporting paper.

GREAT ARE THE PARKS.

Again They Prove Their Mettle at the Whist Tables.

The Park Club whisters last night added another victory to their long line of conquests during the Winter months, ranging from the defeat of the best clubs in the country to the unknown players of some of Jersey's little towns. The victory of last night was the winning over the Fanwood Club of the four-men team championship of the New Jersey Whist League tournament, of which the Parks already held the two and six-men team championships.

In March the various clubs of the League met at Orange and the Fanwood and the Park clubs were tied for first place in the four men contest. Arrangements were made to play off the tie, best two out of three. The first game was won by the Parks; and the second, played in the rooms of the Elizabeth Chess and Whist Club last night, was also won by the Parks by two points, and with it the championship trophy, which is a challengeable one.

The scores:

TEA BY MRS. FRENCH.

Plainfield People Enjoy the Hospitality of a West Seventh Street Home.

The engaging manners, the stylish gowns, and the radiant countenances of the fair guests, combined with the tastefully arranged pink and green decorations of the rooms, made the reception and tea given by Mrs. John Henry French at her home on West Seventh street yesterday an event of sociability and happiness.

The dining room was a beautiful scene. From the centre chandelier pink streamers were gracefully hung to the four corners of the dining table. Two of the streamers were entwined with green ferns and thus the predominant colors were harmonized in effect. On the table vases of ferns, daffodils, roses and other fair and sweet scented flowers added to the attractiveness of the surroundings. The parlors also were adorned with flowers.

Mrs. French was assisted in receiving by Mrs. F. E. Keep of Boston, Miss Boughton of Philadelphia, Miss Eddy of Brooklyn, Miss Ida Yerkes, Miss Harriet French, Miss Lillian Fritts, Mrs. George Hallock, and Mrs. Dewitt Brokaw of Plainfield.

Those who poured tea were: Mrs. Howard Runyon and Mrs. Philip McIntyre, assisted by Miss Grace Yerkes, Miss Arline Crane, Miss Mary Fritts, Miss Jennie Haviland, Miss Maude French of Plainfield; Miss Negus of Bound Brook, and Miss Bertha Thompson of Somerville. About fifty were in attendance.

The Leading Stone-Layer.

M. Powers & Son today began another big contract, the laying of 1,800 feet of flagging on the South avenue sidewalk for the Central New Jersey Land Improvement Company, running from Scott avenue to the Netherwood coal office.

This walk is to be of the superior quality and workmanship for which M. Powers & Son are noted. The Improvement Company in selecting this firm to do the work stated that previous work done by the Powers for them had been eminently satisfactory, and had stood every test.

Powers & Son are also completing 2,100 feet of flagging for other South avenue property, 300 feet for P. M. French on Craig place, and 230 feet on Richmond street for the Dunlap property.

—Bear in mind the great auction sale of the Bacon property Saturday. Details on Page 8.

A Remarkable Cure of Rheumatism.

From the Groton Connecticut Review.—"David Lewis, who has been afflicted all winter by rheumatism, is out again and all due to one of the medicines advertised in our columns. After trying everything possible, he used Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which has relieved him of all pain, from which he was a constant sufferer and promises to make him fit for duty soon. We know David has been a great sufferer and are glad to see him around again." For sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy.

In the Claws of a Crustacean.

J. W. VanSickle carries a sore finger as a souvenir of his encounter with a lobster this morning. He bought the crustacean in Frazee's market, and wrapped him as he thought securely. But Mr. Lobster thrust forth a claw through the paper, seized Mr. VanSickle's right forefinger, and cut it to the bone, tearing away at the same time Mr. VanSickle's pet finger-nail. With one fling of his hand he shook the lobster loose, and the force with which it struck the wall of the shop stunned it so it was safe to handle thereafter.

Shingles Caused the Runaway.

J. W. Buttfield of Grove street returned to his home last evening about 6 after enjoying a pleasant carriage drive. Before putting his horse in the stable, he thought he would drive over to Rockview avenue, where he is erecting a dwelling house. The horse and wagon were left standing by the house, and some shingles fell from the roof and frightened the animal, which started to run away. The wagon was upset, and was damaged considerably. The horse got away and ran into a large field near by, where he was captured.

IT WAS A BUSY SESSION

New York Legislature Adjourned at Noon To-day.

Never in the History of the State Were So Many Bills Introduced. Over 200 More Laws---Less Than a Score of Vetoes---Tax Rate Will Be About 3.15.

Albany, May 16.—The legislature adjourned sine die at noon to-day. Never in the history of the state have so many bills been introduced during a session of the legislature. The increase in legislation was due mainly to the reform wave which swept over the state last fall and to the new constitution which required many changes in the present laws. The reform legislation did not fare so well at the hands of the legislature as did the bills to carry out the requirements of the new constitution. All of the latter have either become laws or are awaiting the signature of the governor as thirty day bills. Commissions have been provided for to prepare charters for the three classes of cities, the same to be submitted to the next legislature.

Many Smelling Committees.

Seldom in the history of legislatures has there been so much investigating as there was this session. Special committees investigated New York city, the various state departments and bribery charges. The department investigating committee will sit during the summer. The Syracuse investigating committee did not prosecute its inquiry. Yesterday the assembly provided for an inquiry as to whether New York city policemen had raised money to influence legislation. The speaker to-day will appoint a committe to sit during the summer to inquire into the municipal ownership of street railroad franchises. The Reinhardt committee will continue during the summer months its inquiry into the work of the women of New York city.

Tax Rate About 3.15.

The appropriations this year are about the same as last with the exception of the increase of $500,000 carried over from last year and the appropriations for the care of the dependent insane in New York and Kings county. The appropriations will aggregate about $13,400,000 and the tax rate will be about 3.15 mills. Last year it was 2.18 mills.

Few Vetoes.

This year there will be over two hundred more laws than last, which will present a record of laws unequalled as regards number. Governor Morton has not vetoed a score of bills this session. This is another remarkable point in considering the work of the legislature, but it was due to the governor informing the introducers of bills of his probable action thereon, and if it was to be unfavorable, the bills were recalled from the governor's hands to save a veto. Governors Hill and Flower usually vetoed a couple of hundred bills each session. Governor Morton had recalled 150 bills in order to save a veto.

Ashley, of Brooklyn, medical director; Matt Gaffney, of Manlius, chaplain; council of administration: J. H. SALUTES BY MAIL CARRIERS.

Favorable View by the Department of Postmaster Sullivan Over.

Washington, May 16.—The officers of the post-office department are a good deal impressed with the idea of Postmaster Sullivan of Brooklyn in making a rule that letter-carriers shall salute the postmaster, and superintendent of carriers when they meet in the office or streets. It would not be surprising if a general order was issued from the department making this rule of universal application in the free delivery offices. It is designed not so much as a matter of discipline as for the purpose of relieving carriers of uncertainty what to do. As it is now, without any rule, some of them ignore their superior officers and look uncomfortable and self-conscious, others lift their hats at the risk of dropping some of their mail, while others adopt what is intended to be an off-hand manner and nod with a "How d' ye-do." It would probably inure to the convenience of everybody concerned to have a general rule, besides giving a little more dignity to the relations of superior and subordinate and cultivating somewhat the corps spirit.

SPANISH TROOPS DEFEATED.

Many Killed and Captured by the Cuban Insurgents.

Jacksonville, Fla., May 16.—A cablegram from Key West, Fla., says: Latest advices received in this city from Havana state that General Gomez has entered Camaguey and in the battle fought there the Spanish troops were defeated and many were killed and captured. The Spanish general, Echague, was one of the captured. Campos returned to Havana yesterday. He called all the Spanish officers before him and cited the case of Lieut. Gallego, stating that the same punishment will be meted out to them in case they are unfortunate enough to be defeated by the insurgents. This has caused a good deal of discontent among the officers. On the 13th the case of Manuel Fuentes, the New York correspondent, was decided, he being found not guilty. The prompt action of the United States state department alone saved Fuentes from being garroted.

BOYCOTTING THE TOWN.

A Railway Company Fences In Its Tracks with Barbed Wire.

Cincinnati, May 16.—The town of Bromley, Ky., opposite the west end of this city, is being fenced with barbed wire by the South Covington & Cincinnati Street Railway company so as to prevent the people living there from using its cars, and to discourage outsiders from visiting the town on Sundays. The three hundred people of Bromley are incensed over the move. The railroad officials say they have taken this summary action in order to put a stop to the establishment of free gardens and troublesome resorts for Sunday visitors. They say they do not propose to haul the tough element of Cincinnati, Covington and Newport on Sundays even if paid for it. An outbreak is threatened.

London, May 16.—William O'Brien, member of parliament for Cork City, and formerly editor of United Ireland, was served yesterday with a notice in bankruptcy for the amount of the judgment, £407, recently awarded Patrick Chance, an Irish lawyer, who had acted as counsel for O'Brien for some eight or nine years, and who brought action for slander on the part of O'Brien against Lord Salisbury, which resulted in a verdict in favor of the ex-premier. O'Brien will resign his seat in parliament immediately after the adjudication in bankruptcy occurs.

For Turning State Evidence He Was Promised Only Five.

After a statment by Commonwealth's Attorney White that the state had agreed with Searcey that if he would confess and testify he should have only five years in the penitentiary and a statment from Searcey in his own behalf, the jury returned a verdict of guilty and fixed his term of confinement in the penitentiary at eight years.

BEHRING SEA MATTERS

Sudden Ordering of a Cutter to the North Pacific.

Believed To Have Been Caused by the Refusal of British Authorities To Renew Behring Sea Regulations in Their Present Form—Explanations Given at Washington.

Port Townsend, Wash., May 16.—Unexpected orders have been received from Washington for the revenue cutter Grant to prepare immediately for sea. Several days ago the department ordered the cutter laid up for thirty days to effect necessary repairs. The work had been fairly begun when orders came to suspend operations and prepare for a cruise to the north Pacific ocean.

Cause of the Movement.

This movement is thought to have been caused by the refusal of the British authorities to renew Behring sea regulations in their present form and the desire of the United States government to communicate with its cutters now patroling the sea. Under the present arrangements, should other cutters seize British sealers upon the high seas for violation of the sealing regulations, serious complications might arise between the two governments. As soon as the Grant is ready for sea she will leave for the north in search of Commander Hooper of the steamer Rush, to whom dispatches from the department are to be delivered.

Explanations Given at Washington.

Washington, May 16.—It can be stated authoritatively that the British ships will be sent to Behring sea to patrol against poachers and to use every effective means of carrying out the Paris award and the British law based thereon. The instructions to the British ships will not, however, direct the seizure of vessels found with arms, but will require other external evidence of sealing, such as the possession of skins, presence of blood on the ship, etc., as a basis of seizure. This will differ from the instructions of last year, which made the open possession of arms prima facie evidence. The British law concerning sealing, based on the Paris award, does forbid the open carrying of arms.

Full and Sincere Co-operation.

At the request of the British embassy Earl Aberdeen, governor-general of Canada, has been directed to furnish the list of ships for the patrol of Behring sea. He will forward it as soon as it is received from the commander of the British fleet at Vancouver. In view of these facts, it is declared by the representatives of Great Britain in Washington that there will be full and sincere co-operation in the patrolling of the Behring sea against poachers. The patrol will be restricted to an execution of the British law framed on the basis of the Paris award.

May Take 15,000 Skins.

The treasury officials have practically decided that the North American Commercial company during the coming season may take 7,500, and this number may be increased to any number not exceeding 15,000 skins.

BROOKLYN HANDICAP.

Hornpipe Landed a Handsome Sum for His Owner.

New York, May 16.—It is estimated that Hornpipe won for his owner, Foxhall Keene, between $50,000 and $75,000 by landing first in the Brooklyn handicap race yesterday afternoon, over a track heavy with mud, for it is known that Keene backed his horse heavily. Considerable money changed hands, and those who were fortunate enough to hold bets on Hornpipe were well paid for their risk, for the odds were 12 to 1 against him. Dr. Rice and Ramapo were the horses most played, and as neither were in the race from the start, Lazzarone being second and Sir Walter third, the talent suffered heavily. Jockey Hamilton is very proud to-day in having landed an unexpected winner.

TO REFORM THE FINANCE.

One of the Schemes Proposed by the Powers for Armenia.

London, May 16.—A dispatch to the Times from Constantinople states the Armenian scheme proposed by the powers includes a system of financial administration under the supervision of the heads of the various committees and the abolition of the present system of farming out taxes and tithes. The powers did not seek to control the financial reforms, but will instruct their consuls to report from time to time how they are executed.

CONTROL OF SEMINARY

Issue Before Presbyterian General Assembly.

Line on Which the Contest for Moderator Will Be Conducted at Pittsburg This Afternoon—Rev. Dr. Booth the Candidate of the Extreme Conservatives.

Pittsburg, May 16.—The 107th general assembly of the northern Presbyterian church opened here this morning at 11 o'clock with a sermon by the retiring moderator. This took up the entire morning session. At 2:30 o'clock this afternoon the commissioners will assemble to elect a moderator. Usually this is a formal and dignified proceeding, the rule being to give this honor to the most distinguished minister in the denomination. But for the last five years party lines have been drawn in the church on the election of moderator and the candidates have been the leading campaigners in either party.

Control of Seminary the Issue.

This new rule promises to hold to-day. In the past the Briggs case was the dividing question, and the moderators of the five preceding assemblies have been bitter opponents of Dr. Briggs and his theories. Now there is a new issue which has grown out of the Briggs case but which has divided the church on different lines. The opinion of the commissioners on the subject of general assembly control of the thirteen theological seminaries will influence their votes today for moderator.

Dr. Booth Anti-Liberal Candidate.

Dr. Robert R. Booth, of New York, is the candidate of the extreme conservatives. He stands for seminary control. The liberals, who are against the general assembly's interference with the great independent divinity schools of the church as they have always been opposed to interference with its distinguished teachers and scholars, like Dr. Briggs and Dr. Smith, are disappointed in the failure of Dr. George Alexander, of New York, to come to Pittsburg as their candidate and moderator.

Liberals May Support Dr. Adams.

They have no candidate in his place and they will probably be found voting with the milder conservatives against Dr. Booth. The candidate of this combine will possibly be elected whoever he is. Dr. Adams, of Minnesota, a home missionary man and a moderate conservative, is spoken of in connection with the moderatorship. As at Saratoga last year the liberals almost captured the assembly with a home missionary candidate for moderator. In that event, with the liberals responsible for the organization of the assembly, the attention of the many millions of Presbyterians of the United States will for the next ten days be centered upon Pittsburg.

Seminary Control.

The question of seminary control comes up this year in the form of a report of a special committee appointed at the Saratoga assemble to confer with the several seminary boards upon the general plan of financial and doctrinal control proposed. The plan is the result of previous conferences of general assembly committees with the Union Theological seminary directors on account of their contumacy in retaining Dr. Briggs in their faculty after his election had been disapproved by a vote of the Detroit general assembly. It involves an absolute control of all funds and endowments of the several seminaries by the general assembly, a supervision of the theological instruction in each institution and a guarantee to donors that funds intrusted to seminaries for Presbyterian instruction of ministerial students shall not be diverted or misused.

Only Two Favor the Plan.

All the seminaries, except Princeton and Omaha, are opposed to the plan, and the committee's report will so read. It may be decided to continue the committee for another year and thus avoid an open battle on the issue in this assembly. Col. John J. McCook, the chief prosecutor in the Briggs case, is here to-day.

France's Naval Expenditures.

Paris, May 16.—A statement in regard to the naval estimates has been submitted to the chamber of deputies. The expenditures are placed at 273,000,000 francs, an increase of 2,000,000 francs over last year's. The minister of marine will ask for a further sum of 8,000,000 francs for the purpose of building new ships.

Verdict Against Bessie Bellwood.

London, May 16.—Bessie Bellwood, the music hall singer, was the defendant in court yesterday in an action to recover $200 for medical attendance. UNUSUAL CONTINGENCIES.

Cause of the Shortage in Funds To Maintain United States Courts.

Washington, May 16.—The closing of a United States court in New York state because of exhaustion of the appropriations for the pay of witnesses and baliffs, and which may be followed by other courts, is causing some inquiry to be made at the department of justice as to the reasons for the shortage. For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1895, congress appropriated for the department of justice $5,705,200. The estimates submitted aggregated $7,861,000. Congress appropriated, therefore, $150,000 less than was asked for. In only two items, that of baliffs and witness fees, are the appropriations exhausted, the appropriations for all other items, it is said, being sufficient.

Absorbed by Strikes.

In the item of witness fees congress gave the department of justice $156,000 less than asked for, and that accounts in a large measure for the present exhausted condition of the appropriation. Extraordinary expenses incurred in the railroad strikes in the northwest and at Chicago during this fiscal year also have had the effect of absorbing much of the money. It is explained that the estimates submitted to congress by executive heads of departments are based on usual conditions, and do not provide for such unusual contingencies as strikes, riots, etc.

KOHL GRANTED A RESPITE.

Gov. Werts Gives the Newark Murderer One More Week To Live.

Jersey City N. J., May 16.—Gov. Werts last night granted a reprieve to Henry Kohl, who was to have been executed at Newark to-day for the murder of Joseph Prievel, his cousin, until Friday, May 24. The application was made by Frank McDermitt, the prisoner's counsel, and was endorsed by a letter from Attorney-General Stockton. Gov. Werts subsequently said that Kohl's case might possibly be considered by the court of pardons, which is to meet in this city to-day.

Like the Buchanan Case.

Newark, N. J., May 16.—Sheriff Lehlbach was in a great quandary yesterday as to his duty in regard to executing Kohl to-day. He said that owing to the action of Kohl's lawyers in taking the case to the United States court he didn't feel sure as to whether he could legally hang Kohl. He consulted legal advice, but the respite granted by the governor relieved his anxiety. Kohl's lawyers said yesterday that the steps they had taken in carrying the case on appeal to the United States court would prevent the execution of the condemned man to-day. They said the law gave them thirty days in which to file the necessary papers.

From there the ex-president goes to New York for two weeks and while there he will sit for his portrait to be hung in the white house.

CATHOLICS MUST ABSTAIN.

Can Take No Part in the Italian Elections.

Rome, May 16.—The Osservatore Romano prints a letter written by the pope to Cardinal Rampolla, papal secretary of state, forbidding Catholics to take part in the Italian elections. His holiness concludes by reminding the faithful that he is still kept a prisoner in the vatican by the Italian government.

RUSSIA'S LATEST MOVE

Will Occupy Certain Ports in Corea.

To Hold Them Until the Conditions She Imposes on Japan Are Satisfied. Sixteen Thousand Troops Menacing the Mikado's Little Empire. Russian Press Comment.

Frankfort, May 16.—The Frankfurter Zeitung publishes a dispatch from St. Petersburg stating that Russia will occupy certain ports in Corea until the conditions she imposes on Japan shall have been satisfied. Sixteen thousand Russian troops will be concentrated on the frontier in readiness for service in the event of Japan refusing to agree to this plan.

Russian Protectorate Necessary.

St. Petersburg, May 16.—The Novoe Vremya says that a Russian protectorate of Corea is necessary to protect Russian merchants there from Japanese competition. The Moscow Gazette says that a military, stable and financial power like Russia alone has the right to hold Corea. The paper adds that if any power should object to Russia holding that country it would be a mark of avowed unfriendliness with which Russia would know how to deal.

HENDRICKS CONVICTED.

A Verdict of Murder in the Second Degree Returned at Wilkesbarre.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., May 16.—The jury in the case of James Hendricks, on trial for the murder of Barney Reich, brought in a verdict of murder in the second degree last night. Judge Woodward discharged the jury without even thanking them, and was apparently disgusted with their action. When the verdict was announced the prisoner seemed to be overjoyed, and was overwhelmed with congratulations by his relatives and attorneys. The counsel for the commonwealth, while not entirely satisfied, expressed their satisfaction that the prisoner had not escaped punishment altogether. The verdict is condemned generally by the public, which expected it to be in the first degree.

The Meade Case Probably Dropped by the Navy Department.

Washington, May 16.—There is nothing new in the Meade matter. A report was circulated this morning to the effect that Secretary Herbert drove out to Woodley yesterday and spent the day there consulting the president as to the best line of action to properly rebuke Admiral Meade. It had no foundation in fact. The secretary was at the navy department uninterruptedly all day except during luncheon. He has not given the Meade case any further consideration. The fact seems to be that there is nothing left to consider.

A REPLY FOR GRESHAM.

Hawaiian Government Denies His Charges Against Thurston.

San Francisco, May 16.—The steamer Australia, from Honolulu May 8, arrived last night with the following advices: Minister Hatch has handed Minister Willis his answer in regard to the recall of Thurston, which will go forward by this mail. It is a lengthy document and makes a general denial of the charges against the Hawaiian minister. The latter's course is upheld in every particular. Gresham is informed that Thurston will not be returned to Washington, but the letter does not name his successor.

It is hoped that the United States warships that are going to Kiel to take part in the opening of the North sea canal will call at Southampton and remain there to salute the new liner when she arrives.

IMPORTANT REAL-ESTATE CHANGE.

Possibility of Removal of the City National Bank.

H. G. Runkle has purchased the White building at Front street and Park avenue, occupied on the first floor by the Plainfield Tea and Grocery Company, Leggett's drugstore, Collier's jewelry store, and Laing's hat-store.

It is understood that Mr. Runkle's intention is to remodel the building by removing the stairway to the Park avenue side, occupying Collier's place, and installing the City National Bank at the corner. The ground floor to be leveled even with the sidewalk.

Mr. Runkle confirmed the news of his purchase, when asked by The Daily Press today, but said that he could not state his plans because they were not yet completed.

Petty Thieving that Counts Up.

A few days ago sneak thieves broke into an isolated barn on Passaic Valley road, near Berkley Heights, in which David E. Townley, who resides on Manning avenue with B. S. Braider, has his household goods and farm implements stored. The thieves took the wheels from a buggy, and departed with them; leaving the body of the vehicle in the barn.

At different times the structure has been entered and various articles taken therefrom, aggregating $150.

Detective Kelly of Summit has been engaged to ferret out the guilty parties, and is now at work on the clues.

JOHN BULL A BULLY.

EVEN POOR CHINA DEFEATED ENGLAND NO LATER THAN 1859.

Rear Admiral Belknap Pricks the Bombastic Bubble of Britain's Greatness and Points Some Wholesome Lessons for Americans to Ponder.

"Cordially disliked" by Japan, not beloved by China, "without a friend" in Europe, distrusted throughout the vast domain of Russia, holding India and Egypt by the sword, carving up Africa, making enemies every day by her current procedures in Venezuela and Nicaragua, while one of her ablest writers, Admiral Colomb, unblushingly asserts that "the British Empire, being the greatest thing in the world, is in a position to bid defiance to the rest of the world," what friend among the nations has she? Not the United States, surely, for, independently of many other causes that from Mayflower days to this have made her to be regarded as the hereditary enemy of all on this soil, it is not so long ago that Lord Salisbury is alleged to have said, with curt frankness, that "the United States being England's greatest commercial rival, there can be no real friendship between them," an enunciation that the great bulk of the people of the United States will accept with cheerful resignation, and especially those descended from the old colonial stock of Puritan ancestry.

The average Englishman is prone to think that the British flag is invincible; that it has never suffered defeat. On such line of belief is doubtless based the opinion quoted to the effect that "in the event of trouble between the two powers," England and Japan, "the meteor flag of England, carried by English naval vessels and English regiments, would speedily 'burn,' as Thomas Campbell has it, over the sunken navies and scattered armies of Japan." Yet we have but to overhaul the log of memory of our brief day to find that not even the non-soldierly Chinese, who have been so thoroughly beaten in every encounter with the Japanese, on land and sea, during the recent war, inflicted upon "the meteor flag of England" one of the worst defeats it ever sustained. And this on the Pei-ho river on a summer's day in 1859, when the Taku forts beat off, with great slaughter, the British naval force under the command of Admiral Hope. Four of the admiral's gunboats were sunk, forty per cent. of his officers and men were killed or wounded, and the gallant old admiral himself was nearly shot to pieces by the vigorous fire of the enemy.

One-half the pluck and skill displayed by the Chinese on that occasion would have held the Japanese at bay for long and decimating sieges at Port Arthur and Wei-Hai-Wei, perhaps have baffled the arms of Japan for as long a period as the genius of Todleben kept the English and French out of Sebastopol in 1855.

But the average Britisher is singularly oblivious to events that occur beyond the confines of his "tight little island," and it is second nature for him to boast and bluster and to regard himself as the Lord's appointed regulator of the world's affairs and to look upon his country as the natural and invincible master and dictator of modern civilization; but I apprehend that Admiral Freemantle, the commander-in-chief of the British fleet in Oriental waters during the recent hostilities, and his able and alert captains, who have watched with dogged pertinacity and practiced eye every movement of the belligerents in the Yellow Sea, know full well that in the event of war between Great Britain and Japan, they would have to put their best foot forward to overcome, in any degree, the victory crowned seamen and soldiers who have so humbled the pride of the Chinese, and enable them to flaunt or "burn" in triumph the "meteor flag over the sunken navies and the scattered armies of Japan." They doubtless grasp the fact, too, that an attempted bombardment of Tokio by a British fleet would be no Alexandria affair, and that Gen. Lord Wolseley would find no easy victory, as at Tel-el-Kebir, in an encounter with the battle seasoned armies of the Mikado. Official England, indeed, is by no means anxious to make the boasted "meteor flag terrific burn" at the juncture in a test of arms in that direction, nor, I venture to say, could a dastardly attack like that made on the Danish fleet at Copenhagen, in 1801, be successfully indulged in at this day as regards the gallant fleet that won the fight at Yalu.

On the contrary, the cable and wire apprise us that England has sufficiently seen a new light in the East, and though she may not rejoice in the spirit and fulness of the wise men who followed the star of Bethlehem in the days of Herod, the king, she has the canny penny-shillings-and-pence sense to respect its refulgent light and to hasten to get a share of its reflected gleams. Aye, her greed may be counted on for that!

The United States are and ever have been a better friend of Japan than Great Britain, not only in a political but a commercial sense. The customs returns of Japan show that, as a customer of the empire, the United States, as contrasted with Great Britain, take the products of Japan in the ratio of four silver yen to one. Per contra, Japan buys of Great Britain, as compared with what she buys of the United States, goods of the value of just the reverse ratio. That is to say, the bulk of the money Japan receives from the United States for her products of soil and loom, she, in turn, spends in buying from Great Britain. Now, the trade of which country is of more value to the farmer, the artisan, the merchant, the treasury of Japan? There can be but one answer. Nor is there a more important problem confronting our statesmen of to-day than the solution of the best means of wresting from Great Britain a part of her exporting trade with the valiant Island Queen of the Orient. Would that statesmen of the stanch Americanism of Ambassador Eustis might take up the problem and master it!

HER RULING PASSION

TWO PARIS DREAMS THAT CAN BE MODIFIED TO SUIT.

Summer Linens Are as Dainty as Chine and Crepon Effects Are Shown. Turkish Batiste is Something New. Summer Capes.

The dinner dress illustrated here is of lilac bengaline richly embroidered in silk, gold and jet. The visiting gown is of gros de Suez in a soft shade of pinkish gray. The pointed collar is made of rose pink silk embroidered with ruby beads and silk over a deep plisse of silk muslin in the shade of the gown.

The summer cottons and linens are very dainty and lovely, and carry out in colors and designs all the new features seen in the silks and wool. Some of the zephyrs have a distinct chine effect, and there are many cotton stuffs showing crepon waves or seersucker stripes. A very lovely material is a buff cotton with a creamy, crinkly stripe running through it. On the plain stripes are printed tiny Pompadour rosebuds. Most of the materials are decidedly fanciful and show combinations of color as well as a mixture of threads. Indeed, the combination of cotton and silk in the same goods is the most prominent novelty. The new ginghams have silk dots, or stripes, or small figures woven in them. Sometimes an all over lace design is woven on the surface in a silk of the same or another color. Lace stripes run through many of the cotton goods, and necessitate a silk lining.

There is a pretty fabric called Turkish batiste. It shows slightly tufted squares, giving it a faint resemblance to Turkish toweling. A great deal of black and white is still seen; so are the cool cornflower blue and the old fashioned buff and flower designs, particularly roses, are considered in very good style. These designs are partly stamped and partly embroidered. For example, a very pale yellow muslin has a large all over design of woodbine stamped on it in dull greens and golden browns, with the bright berries embroidered in red silk. A cool looking lawn has black polka dots embroidered on a white ground and is divided into squares by threads of pale yellow silk. Many of the lawns have cords running through them of cotton or silk, in the same or a different color. There are lovely crepes, some with the popular Oriental or Japanese designs printed on them. These make charming gowns when softened by a profusion of yellow lace.

As the days grow brighter the wraps grow smaller and gayer; still they all seem to retain the simplicity and the daintiness that have from the first characterized the spring modes for wraps. A cape that shows a novel feature in the use of ribbon is of black silk finished about the bottom by a ruche of the same. It has a short round yoke of an embroidery of jets and blue paillettes done on black net. Below the yoke the cape is covered by two accordeon plaits of black chiffon. At intervals there are straps of black satin ribbon fastened by buttons of blue paillettes. The collar is of the accordeon plaited chiffon, crushed in on each side by a large bow of ribbon. A light silk lace is accordeon plaited and very much used on these collars. It is newer and perhaps in better style now than the chiffon. A pretty cape of a fancy shot silk is trimmed with two rows of this lace. The upper row passes about the shoulders and is bunched up on the shoulder with some ribbon loops. This arrangement of the trimming would, in most cases, add to the becomingness of the garment. The cape has a turned over silk collar; and over this is the accordeon plaited lace, which is arranged with some ribbon, another bunch in the back.

Royal Baking Powder

ABSOLUTELY PURE

All the Congregation Interested in an Incident of a Summer Day.

"You might think," said a church usher, "that there was nothing to do in a church but seat people; but, dear me, strange things are happening all the time. One summer day, when the church doors were open, I saw a dog appear. I stood at the back of the pews just beyond the end of the middle aisle, and the dog stood right at the end of the aisle, looking at me and wagging his tail. He was a nice looking dog, a sort of red dog, shaggy and gentle looking, but of course church was no place for him. But he was nearer the aisle than I was, and he was bound to make the tour of the church, and I was sure he would start down the middle aisle the moment I made any serious effort to put him out. Still I advanced toward him with a friendly bearing and outstretched hand, hoping that he would stand still until I could get between him and the aisle. He wagged his tail good humoredly when he saw me approach, but before I could get near enough to cut him off he started down the aisle, so softly that nobody heard him, and nobody saw him until he had passed.

He came down to where he had started and then trotted along the base of the pews and out of the church by a door opposite to the one by which he had entered. The instant he stepped through the door we heard the most tremendous uproar; he had met another dog outside.

"As a matter of fact, I suppose our dog had come into the church to escape the other dog; he didn't want to fight, and I suppose he thought if the other dog saw him go into a church he'd feel kind of ashamed of himself and go away. But he didn't; he just hung around outside and waited. The peaceful dog was diplomatic, you see, too; he went out by a different door from the one he came in at, thinking, no doubt, that the dog that wanted to fight would wait for him where he came in, and that he would escape the other dog and get away quietly by going out at the other door; but the other dog must have guessed his intentions, for he was waiting for him there.

"Our dog didn't want to fight, but he didn't run away; good natured, shaggy and gentle as he was, he pitched in and fought like a demon. Between them they made more noise than an earthquake. It pretty nearly broke up the gravity of the entire congregation, and the sexton had to go out and drive them away; so we never knew how the fight came out."

Too Delightful.

"Isn't this perfectly delightful?" she asked, as they sat on the sofa with their arms intertwined, and the brillantine on his mustache not very far from the crimson balm on her lips.

"Dorothy," he replied, "when I know that your mother is listening on the stairs, that your father is waiting in the passage with a cane, that the bulldog is loose in the front yard, and that your little brother is under the sofa, how can I say that it is delightful?"—London Tit-Bits.

Why He Swore Off.

"Why don't you work? Don't like it I suppose."

"Like it! Why, boss, work with me is a passion, a vice. That is just the trouble. The moment I commence to do a little, I cannot leave it alone, and it grows upon me like drink, opium or lawn tennis. This is why I have to make an effort to leave it entirely alone."—Life.

THE EXPLOITS OF BRIGADIER GERARD.

By A. Conan Doyle.

I had now no doubt at all about getting into the yard, but I had very considerable misgivings as to how I was to get out again. It would be too humiliating, after trying here and trying there, to have to go back to my hole again in despair, or to be arrested by the guards outside, and thrown into those damp underground cells which are reserved for prisoners who are caught in escaping. I set to work, therefore, to plan what I should do. I have never, as you know, had the chance of showing what I could do as a general. Sometimes, after a glass or two of wine, I have found myself capable of thinking out surprising combinations, and have felt that if Napoleon had intrusted me with an army corps, things might have gone differently with him. But, however that may be, there is no doubt that in the small stratagems of war, and in that quickness of invention which is so necessary for an officer of light cavalry, I could hold my own against any one. It was now that I had need for it, and I felt sure that it would not fail me.

The inner wall which I had to scale was built of bricks, 12 feet high, with a row of spikes, three inches apart, upon the top. The outer I had only caught a glimpse of once or twice, when the gate of the exercise yard was open. It appeared to be about the same height, and was also spiked at the top. The space between the walls was over twenty feet, and I had reason to believe that there were no sentries there, except at the gates. On the other hand, I knew that there was a line of soldiers outside. Behold the little nut, my friends, which I had to open with no crackers save these two hands.

One thing upon which I relied was the height of my comrade, Beaumont. I have already said that he was a very tall man, six feet, at least, and it seemed to me that if I could mount upon his shoulders, and get my hands upon the spikes, I could easily scale the wall. Could I pull my big companion up after me? That was the question, for when I set forth with a comrade, even though it be one for whom I bear no affection, nothing on earth would make me abandon him. If I climbed the wall and he could not follow me, I should be compelled to return to him. He did not seem to concern himself much about it, however, so I hoped that he had confidence in his own activity.

Then another very important matter was the choice of the sentry who should be on duty in front of my window at the time of our attempt. They were changed every two hours to insure their vigilance, but I, who watched them closely each night out of my window, knew that there was a great difference between them. There were some who were so keen that a rat could not cross the yard unseen, while others thought only of their own ease, and could sleep as soundly leaning upon a musket as if they were at home upon a feather bed. There was one especially, a fat, heavy man, who would retire into the shadow of the wall and doze so comfortably during his two hours, that I have dropped pieces of plaster from my window at his very feet, without his observing it. By good luck, this fellow's watch was due from twelve to two upon the night which we had fixed upon for our enterprise.

As the last day passed I was so filled with nervous agitation that I could not control myself, but ran ceaselessly about my cell, like a mouse in a cage. Every moment I thought that the warder would detect the looseness of the bar, or that the sentry would observe the unmortared stone, which I could not conceal outside, as I stood within. As for my companion, he sat brooding upon the end of his bed, looking at me in a sidelong fashion from time to time and biting his nails like one who is deep in thought.

"Courage, my friend," I cried, slapping him upon the shoulder. "You will see your guns before another month be past."

"That is all very well," said he. "But whither will you fly when you get free?"

"To the coast," I answered. "All comes right for a brave man, and I shall make straight for my regiment."

"You are more likely to make straight for the underground cells, or for the Portsmouth hulks," said he.

"A soldier takes his chances," I remarked. "It is only the poltroon who reckons always upon the worst."

I raised a flush in each of his sallow cheeks at that, and I was glad of it, for it was the first sign of spirit which I had ever observed in him. For a moment he put his hand out toward his water jug, as though he would have hurled it at me, but then he shrugged his shoulders and sat in silence once more, biting his nails and scowling down upon the floor. I could not but think, as I looked at him, that perhaps I was doing the Flying Artillery a very bad service by bringing him back to them.

I never in my life have known an evening pass as slowly as that one. Towards nightfall a wind sprang up, and as the darkness deepened it blew harder and harder, until a terrible gale was whistling over the moor. As I looked out of my window I could not catch a glimpse of a star, and the black clouds were flying low across the heavens. The rain was pouring down, and what with its hissing and splashing and the howling and screaming of the wind, it was impossible for me to hear the steps of the sentinels. "If I cannot hear them," thought I, "then it is unlikely that they can hear me"; and I waited with the utmost impatience until the inspector should have come round for his nightly peep through our grating. Then, having peered through the darkness, and seen nothing of the sentry, who was doubtless crouching in some corner out of the rain, I felt that the moment was come. I removed the bar, pulled out the stone, and motioned to my companion to pass through.

"After you, Colonel," said he.

"Will you not go first?" I asked.

"I had rather you showed me the way."

"Come after me, then, but come silently, as you value your life."

In the darkness I could hear the fellow's teeth chattering, and I wondered whether a man ever had such a partner in a desperate enterprise. I seized the bar, however, and mounting upon my stool, I thrust my head and shoulders into the hole. I had wriggled through as far as my waist, when my companion seized me suddenly by the knees and yelled at the top of his voice:

"Help! Help! A prisoner is escaping!"

Ah, my friends, what did I not feel at that moment! Of course, I saw in an instant the game of this vile creature. Why should he risk his skin in climbing walls when he might be sure of a free pardon from the English for having prevented the escape of one so much more distinguished than himself? I had recognized him as a poltroon and a sneak, but I had not understood the depth of baseness to which he could descend. One who has spent his life among gentlemen and men of honor does not think of such things until they happen.

The blockhead did not seem to understand that he was lost more certainly than I. I writhed back into the darkness, and, seizing him by the throat, I struck him twice with my iron bar. At the first blow he yelped as a little cur does when you tread upon its paw. At the second down he fell with a groan upon the floor. Then I seated myself upon my bed, and waited resignedly for whatever punishment my jailers might inflict upon me.

But a minute passed and yet another, with no sound save the heavy, snoring breathing of the senseless wretch upon the floor. Was it possible, then, that amid the fury of the storm his warning cries had passed unheeded? At first it was but a tiny hope, another minute and it was probable, another and it was certain. There was no sound in the corridor, none in the courtyard. I wiped the cold sweat from my brow, and asked myself what I should do next.

One thing seemed certain. The man on the floor must die. If I left him I could not tell how short a time it might be before he gave the alarm. I dare not strike a light, so I felt about in the darkness until my hand came upon something wet, which I knew to be his head. I raised my iron bar, but there was something, my friends, which prevented me from bringing it down. In the heat of fight I have slain many men—men of honor, too, who had done me no injury. Yet here was this wretch, a creature too foul to live, who had tried to work me so great a mischief, and yet I could not bring myself to crush his skull in. Such deeds are very well for a Spanish partida—or, for that matter, a sans-culotte of the Faubourg St. Antoine—but not for a soldier and a gentleman like me.

However, the heavy breathing of the fellow made me hope that it might be a very long time before he recovered his senses. I gagged him, therefore, and bound him with strips of blanket to the bed, so that in his weakened condition there was good reason to think that, in any case, he might not get free before the next visit of the warder. But now again I was faced with new difficulties, for you will remember that I had relied upon his height to help me over the walls. I could have sat down and shed tears of despair had not the thought of my mother and of the Emperor come to sustain me. "Courage!" said I. "If it were any one but Etienne Gerard he would be in a bad fix now; that is a young man who is not so easily caught."

I set to work, therefore, upon Beaumont's sheet as well as my own, and by tearing them into strips and then placing them together I made a very excellent rope. This I tied securely to the centre of my iron bar, which was a little over a foot in length. Then I slipped out into the yard, where the rain was pouring and the wind screaming louder than ever. I kept in the shadow of the prison wall, but it was as black as the ace of spades, and I could not see my own hand in front of me. Unless I walked into the sentinel I had nothing to fear from him. When I had come under the wall I threw up my bar, and to my joy it stuck the very first time between the spikes at the top. I climbed up my rope, pulled it after me, and dropped down on the other side. Then I scaled the second wall, and was sitting astride among the spikes upon the top, when I saw something twinkle in the darkness beneath me. It was the bayonet of the sentinel below, and so close was it (the second wall being rather lower than the first) that I could easily, by leaning over, have unscrewed it from its socket. There he was, humming a tune to himself, and cuddling up against the wall to keep himself warm, little thinking that a desperate man within a few feet of him was within an ace of stabbing him to the heart with his own weapon. I was already bracing myself for the spring, when the fellow, with an oath, shouldered his musket, and I heard his steps squelching through the mud as he resumed his beat. I slipped down my rope, and, leaving it hanging, I ran at the top of my speed across the moor.

SKETCHES OF LINCOLN.

His Attempt to Make a Lawyer of Himself.

A BOOK HIS CONSTANT COMPANION.

Why He Loved a Story—His Deficiency as a Salesman—How He Kept His Head Above the Waves of Destitution—A Surveyor Under Calhoun.

VII.

That Lincoln's attempt to make a lawyer of himself under adverse and unpromising circumstances excited comment is not to be wondered at. Russell Godby, an old man who still survives, told me in 1865 that he had often employed Lincoln to do farm work for him and was surprised to find him one day sitting barefoot on the summit of a wood pile and attentively reading a book. "This being an unusual thing for farmhands in that early day to do, I asked him," relates Godby, "what he was reading. 'I'm not reading,' he answered. 'I'm studying.' 'Studying what?' I inquired. 'Law, sir,' was the emphatic response. It was really too much for me as I looked at him sitting there proud as Cicero. 'Great God Almighty!' I exclaimed and passed on."

But Lincoln kept on at his studies. Wherever he was and whenever he could do so the book was brought into use. He carried it with him in his rambles through the woods and his walks to the river. When night came, he read it by the aid of any friendly light he could find. Frequently he went down to the cooper's shop and kindled a fire out of the waste material lying about, and by the light it afforded read until far into the night.

Preliminary Practice.

One of his companions at this time relates that "while clerking in the store or serving as postmaster he would apply himself as opportunity offered to his studies, if it was but five minutes' time; would open his book, which he always kept at hand, study it, reciting to himself; then entertain the company present or wait on a customer without apparent annoyance from the interruption. Have frequently seen him reading while walking along the streets. Occasionally he would become absorbed with his book; would stop and stand for a few moments, then walk on, or pass from one house to another, or from one crowd or squad of men to another. He was apparently seeking amusement, and with his thoughtful face and ill fitting clothes was the last man one would have singled out for a student."

It was not long until he was able to draw up deeds, contracts, mortgages and other legal papers for his neighbors. He figured conspicuously as a pettifogger before the justice of the peace, but, regarding it merely as a kind of preliminary practice, seldom made any charge for his services. Meanwhile he was reading not only lawbooks, but natural philosophy and other scientific subjects.

It has been denied as often as charged that Lincoln narrated vulgar stories, but the truth is he loved a story, however extravagant or vulgar, if it had a good point. If it was merely a ribald recital and had no sting in the end—that is, if it exposed no weakness or pointed no moral—he had no use for it either in conversation or public speech, but if it had the necessary ingredients of mirth and moral no one could use it with more telling effect. As a mimic he was unequaled, and with his characteristic gestures he built up a reputation for story telling, although fully as many of his narratives were borrowed as original, which followed him through life. One who listened to his early stories in New Salem says: "His laugh was striking. Such awkward gestures belonged to no other man. They attracted universal attention, from the old sedate down to the schoolboy. Then in a few moments he was as calm and thoughtful as a judge on the bench and as ready to give advice on the most important matters. Fun and gravity grew on him alike."

As a salesman Lincoln was lamentably deficient. He was too prone to lead off into a discussion of politics or morality, leaving some one else to finish the trade which he had undertaken. One of his employes says: "He always disliked to wait on the ladies, preferring, he said, to wait on the men and boys. I also remember he used to sleep on the store counter when they had too much company at the tavern. He wore flax and tow linen pantaloons—I thought about five inches too short in the legs—and frequently had but one suspender, no vest or coat. He wore a calico shirt, such as he had in the Black Hawk war; coarse brogans, tan color; blue yarn socks and straw hat, old style and without a band." His friend Ellis attributed his shyness in the presence of the ladies to the consciousness of his awkward appearance and the unpretentious condition of his wearing apparel. It was more than likely due to pure bashfulness. "On one occasion," continues Ellis, "while we boarded at the tavern, there came a family, consisting of an old lady, her son and three stylish daughters, from the state of Virginia, who stopped there for two or three weeks, and during their stay I do not remember Mr. Lincoln's ever appearing at the same table with them."

As a society man Lincoln was singularly deficient while he lived in New Salem and even during the remainder of his life. He never indulged in gossip about the ladies nor aided in the circulation of village scandal. For woman he had a high regard, and I can testify that during my long acquaintance with him his conversation was free from injurious comment in individual cases—freer from unpleasant allusions than that of most men.

While wooing that jealous eyed mistress, the law, Lincoln was earning no money. As another has said, "He had a running board bill to pay and nothing to pay it with." By dint of sundry jobs here and there, helping Ellis in his store today, splitting rails for James Short tomorrow, he managed to keep his head above the waves. His friends were firm—no young man ever had truer or better ones—but he was of too independent a turn to appeal to them or complain of his condition. He never at any time abandoned the idea of becoming a lawyer. That was always a spirit which beckoned him on in the darkest hour of his adversity.

Some one, probably a Democrat who voted for him in the preceding fall, recommended him to John Calhoun, then surveyor of the county, as suitable material for an assistant. This office, in view of the prevailing speculation in lands and town lots, was the most important and possibly the most profitable in the county. Calhoun, the incumbent, was a Yankee and a typical gentleman. He was brave, intellectual, self possessed and cultivated. He had been educated for the law, but never practiced much after coming to Illinois; taught school in preference. As an instructor he was the popular one of his day and age. I attended the school he taught, when I was a boy, in Springfield, and was in later years clerk of the city under his administration as mayor. Lincoln, I know, respected and admired him. After Lincoln's removal to Springfield they frequently held joint debates on political questions. At one time, I remember, they discussed the tariff question in the courthouse, using up the better part of two evenings in the contest. Calhoun was polite, affable and an honest debater, never dodging any question. This made him a formidable antagonist in argumentative controversy. I have heard Lincoln say that Calhoun gave him more trouble in his debates than Douglas ever did, because he was more captivating in his manner and a more learned man than Douglas.

As a Surveyor.

But to resume. The recommendation of Lincoln's friends was sufficient to induce Calhoun to appoint him one of his deputies. At the time he received notice of his selection by Calhoun, Lincoln was out in the woods near New Salem splitting rails. A friend named Pollard Simmons, who still survives and has related the incident to me, walked out to the point where he was working with the cheering news. Lincoln, being a Whig and knowing Calhoun's pronounced Democratic tendencies, inquired if he had to sacrifice any principle in accepting the position. "If I can be perfectly free in my political action, I will take the office," he remarked, "but if my sentiments or even expression of them is to be abridged in any way, I would not have it or any other office." A young man hampered by poverty as Lincoln was at this time, who had the courage to deal with public office as he did, was certainly made of unalloyed material. No wonder in after years, when he was defeated by Douglas, he could inspire his friends by the admonition not to "give up after one nor one hundred defeats."

Honors were now crowding thick and fast upon him. On May 7, 1833, he was commissioned postmaster at New Salem, the first office he ever held under the federal government. The salary was proportionate to the amount of business done. Whether Lincoln solicited the appointment himself or whether it was given him without the asking I do not know, but certain it is his "administration" gave general satisfaction. The mail arrived once a week, and we can imagine the extent of time and labor required to distribute it when it is known that "he carried the office around in his hat." Mr. Lincoln used to tell me that when he had a call to go to the country to survey a piece of land he placed inside his hat all the letters belonging to people in the neighborhood and distributed them along the way. He made headquarters in Samuel Hill's store, and there the office may be said to have been located, as Hill himself had been postmaster before Lincoln. Between the revenue derived from the postoffice and his income from land surveys Lincoln was, in the expressive language of the day, "getting along well enough." Suddenly, however, smooth sailing ceased, and all his prospects of easy times ahead were again brought to naught. One Van Bergen brought suit against him and obtained judgment on one of the notes given in payment of the store debt, a relic of the unfortunate partnership with Berry. His personal effects were levied on and sold, his horse and surveying instruments going with the rest. But again a friend, one James Short, whose favor he had gained, interposed, bought in the property and restored it to the hopeless young surveyor. It will be seen now what kind of friends Lincoln was gaining. The bonds he was thus making were destined to stand the severest of tests. His case never became so desperate but a friend came out of the darkness to relieve him.

Nature's Stamp of Greatness.

No little of Lincoln's influence with the men of New Salem can be attributed to his extraordinary feats of strength. By an arrangement of ropes and straps, harnessed about his hips, he was enabled one day at the mill to astonish a crowd of village celebrities by lifting a box of stones weighing near 1,000 pounds. There is no fiction either, as suggested by some of his biographers, in the story that he lifted a barrel of whisky from the ground and drank from the bung, but in performing this latter almost incredible feat he did not stand erect and elevate the barrel, but squatted down and lifted it to his knees, rolling it over until his mouth came opposite the bung. His strength, kindness of manner, love of fairness and justice, his original and unique sayings, his power of mimicry, his perseverance—all made a combination rarely met with on the frontier. Nature had burned him in her holy fire and stamped him with the seal of her greatness.

In the summer of 1843 Lincoln determined to make another race for the legislature, but this time he ran distinctly as a Whig. He made, it is presumed, the usual number of speeches, but as the art of newspaper reporting had not reached the perfection it has since attained we are not favored with even the substance of his efforts on the stump. I have Lincoln's word for it that it was more of a handshaking campaign than anything else.

The election took place in August. Lincoln's friend, John T. Stuart, was also a candidate on the legislative ticket. He encouraged Lincoln's canvass in every way, even at the risk of sacrificing his own chances. But both were elected. The four successful candidates were Dawson, who received 1,390 votes, Lincoln 1,376, Carpenter 1,170 and Stuart 1,168.

At last Lincoln had been elected to the legislature and by a very flattering majority. In order, as he himself said, "to make a decent appearance in the legislature," he had to borrow money to buy suitable clothing and to maintain his new dignity. Coleman Smoot, one of his friends, advanced him "$200, which he returned," relates the generous Smoot, "according to promise." Here we leave our rising young statesman to take up a different but very interesting period of his history.

The Firing at Knoxville.

At the time when General Burnside's force was besieged in Knoxville, Tenn., with an apparent danger of being starved into surrender, a telegram came one day from Cumberland Gap announcing that "firing is heard in the direction of Knoxville." "Glad of it!" exclaimed Mr. Lincoln. "Why should you be glad of it?" asked a friend who was present in some surprise. "Why, you see," he explained, "it reminds me of Mrs. Sallie Ward, a neighbor of mine. She had a very large family. Occasionally one of her numerous progeny would be heard crying in some out of the way place, and she would exclaim, 'There's one of my children that isn't dead yet!'"

HER INMOST MIND.

"When I was a young man," began Mr. Arkin, "I was an enthusiastic student of natural science; chemistry, physics, astronomy, zoology, botany, all came in for their share of attention. But the subject which interested me most of all was the anatomy and physiology of the human brain and nervous system. In my travels in the East I had seen a good deal of opium eating and smoking, the use of Indian hemp and other narcotics, and being thus led to study the action of drugs upon nervous tissue I discovered some things of which the scientists of the day know nothing, nor never will if they continue to work in their present superficial fashion.

"One day I received from a friend in Zanzibar a little package of roots which he said were used by the medicine men there, and were supposed to have wonderful properties. I made a decoction of some of them, and, after testing it to ascertain that it was not poisonous, I took a small dose.

"At the end of an hour I could perceive no effect, and had about concluded the thing was a 'fake' when the young man whom I employed to assist me in my experiments entered the room.

"'Well,' I understood him to say, 'I suppose the fool has been messing some more with his filthy roots.'

"'Sir,' I exclaimed, 'how dare you?'

"My assistant looked at me with astonished expression.

"'I didn't say anything, sir,' he replied, and then, though his lips were shut tight, I seemed to hear him add: 'Is he drunk or crazy?' I stood bewildered for a moment and then the truth flashed upon me—the drug had in some way rendered my brain responsive to the thought of another without the mediation of the senses.

"For several days I went about reading the thoughts in people's minds, and then the revealation of the general baseness of humanity became so terrible that I resolved never to touch the drug again." Mr. Arkin here paused.

"And did you never?" I asked, "find any exception, any true, noble soul, amid all the babble of base ones?"

"Never," he replied. "What was not evil was petty and trivial."

"Yes," said I, "such certainly do exist. I will be sworn that I know a person with a mind so pure you might search it with an intellectual microscope without finding one trace of anything ignoble, of anything but what is true, beautiful and good."

My friend gave me an understanding look and said, with a smile:

"Happy the man who can believe that. I envy him from the bottom of my heart."

"If you do not believe it," I replied, provoked, "then take some of your miserable drug and come with me. I will let you see for yourself."

"No," he said, "I vowed never to touch it again, and I never will, but if you would like to try—why I have no objection to lending you a little."

I signified my desire to do so, and he went to his room, returning presently with a little vial, half filled with a ruby liquid.

"Take three drops of that in a glass of water," he said, "about half an hour before you meet this person. But before I give it to you I want you to promise me two things—first, that if as I expect you find this person unworthy you will not in your despair do anything desperate; and, second, that you will return that vial and report the result of the experiment."

I readily acceded to these requests and we parted, he to take his afternoon nap and I to stroll on the beach.

After supper I went to my room, took the required dose and in half an hour sallied forth to find Miss Atwood. I made up my mind whatever occurred not to betray my new power, but I nearly broke my resolution the first person I met. This was one Binks, a fellow who had been in the habit of borrowing small sums of money. He greeted me with a smile and a "How d'ye do?" but he thought:

"Here comes that blooming jay, Brown. Wonder if he's good for another tenner?"

"No, sir," I said, drawing myself up and looking at him fiercely. "That blooming jay, Brown, is not good for another tenner nor for another cent."

His jaw dropped; he stared at me, and I left him under the impression that he had inadvertently spoken his thoughts aloud.

I found Miss Atwood sitting by herself in a cane backed settee on the veranda, looking out over the water. The last glow of the fading sunset gleamed over the tranquil sea. In its magic light Miss Atwood's face seemed to me of almost supernatural beauty, and I approached her with a feeling akin to awe.

This was quite dispelled, however, by her thinking as I came up: "Oh, good! here comes Charlie!"

"Good evening, Miss Atwood," said I.

"Good evening, Mr. Brown," she replied, moving over a little on the seat, "won't you sit down?"

I seated myself beside her, and pointing to the western sky, said:

"See what a beautiful fairyland nature has painted for us in yonder clouds. It looks to me like another and vaster ocean dotted with golden isles, and on one of them is a palace all of ruby and opal. Would it not be lovely if we could live in such a mansion?"

"Oh, wouldn't it," she cried with that dreamy, poetic expression on her face which had so often charmed me. But to my utter astonishment, she was not gazing of the clouds at all, but was speculating as to whether my rather conspicuous watch chain was genuine or paste.

I thought with chagrin of the various other times I had uttered similar sentimental remarks, and wondered if they had all had the same reception. But I resolved not to judge too hastily and began again:

"The season here is fast drawing to a close, Miss Atwood," I said, "soon all our lazy dream life here will be broken up, and each must return to take his part in the busy life of the world."

"Yes," she said, "isn't it sad to think that the happy days are nearly over, that the friends who have met here and learned to love one another must separate, to be lost forever in the dreary rush of every day life?"

"But in our case there is an alternative," I replied. "If we only wish to, we can make our pleasant summer here but the stepping stone to a lifelong happiness."

"How do you mean?" asked she in an undertone, and looking down in feigned embarrassment. As a matter of fact, however, she wondered if it was getting dark enough so that she could let me kiss her, should I manifest any tendency in that direction. As may be imagined, I was not overpleased with the result of my experiment so far, but still, I reasoned, it was only natural that a lover should overestimate the intellectual qualities of the girl he loved, and as far as I could see she really cared for me, so I said, with perhaps a little less emotion than the occasion demanded, for a gambler who knows the dice are loaded can't work up much excitement:

"Miss Atwood, Lucy dear, you know that I love you." I spoke with greater certainty on this point than lovers are wont to do. "I have loved you since the first day we met in the park. Will you join your lot with mine, Lucy?" I leaned over and took her hand without waiting for an answer.

"Oh, this is so sudden, Mr. Brown," she replied, affecting great embarrassment, but leaving her hand in mine, "you must give me time to consider."

This hypocrisy irritated me.

"Oh, come," I said, "you have thought of this before; I know you have," and considering that it was dark enough, I put my arm over her shoulder, drew her to me and kissed her.

"No," I replied, "you can't get away until you've said 'yes.'"

"Well, then," she said in a mock plaintive voice, "if that's the case I must comply, you wicked man—'yes.'"

I prepared myself for the feeling of tender joy which was to diffuse itself through her mind at this happy consummation, but here is what she thought:

"Well, it's all settled now. I wish, though, it had been Willie; he has twice as much money."

Little she thought how fatal that was! Pushing her rudely from me I exclaimed angrily:

"Indeed! Would you like me to tell him of your regard?"

"Why, what's the matter?" she stammered. "Tell who—what?"

"Tell Willie, whoever he is, of your great affection for his money bags."

"I don't understand," said she, tremulously, which was true enough. Then the same thing occurred to her that did to Binks—she supposed that she had unconsciously spoken her thoughts aloud.

"What did I say?" she asked.

"Oh, you didn't say anything, confound it," I replied, "you only thought."

"How do you know what I thought?" she asked, in indignant astonishment.

"Oh, never mind," I replied. "Good-by." I rose and started to leave her, but she walked quickly up to me, took hold of my coat lapel and cried in a half whisper full of wrath:

"Sir, how dare you trifle with my affections this way?"

The mass of furious thoughts which raged in her mind at this moment was a revelation to me! It was worth all the pain of my discomfiture.

"Don't get excited," I said, soothingly; "excitement dilates the blood vessels of the face and spoils the complexion. As to that breach of promise suit you were just now thinking about, let me, from my legal knowledge, advise you not to try it; you haven't sufficient grounds."

She started back in terror.

"Can you read the inmost working of my heart?" she cried.

"Perhaps," I replied; "at any rate I can see into the cavity where the heart ought to be."

I left her and hurried to my room, giving a wide berth to every one I met on the way. I could not sleep, but sat up all night smoking and pondering over my strange experiment.

As soon as it began to get light I left my chamber and went out on the little balcony where we had been playing chess the day before. On the way I passed close by a servant, and was happy to find the effects of the drug had completely passed away. Whether he thought me an ass or was grateful for the various silver coins I had given him as fees remained as much a mystery to me as ever.

The air outside was still. The waves came in on the beach with the precision of clockwork, and reared, curled over and fell with a deep musical swishing sound, and the roseate hues of the dawn sparkled below in the dew laden lawns of the park.

A strange feeling came over me that all I saw and heard was a stupendous dream of which I was an insignificant part. I half expected to see the scene before me suddenly roll up like a theater curtain to disclose some more real world back of it.

Presently I was roused from my reverie by some one coming up behind me and turning I saw my friend Mr. Arkin.

"Well," he said, "what luck?"

I told him the result of the experiment and returned him the vial.

"Life is a failure," I said.

"No," he replied, "I don't think it is. When inquisitive people like you and I go to prying into secrets not intended for us, it is our own foolishness and not nature we have to blame for the result. The longer I live the more I become convinced that life is symbolical; that its worth lies not in what it is in itself but in what it signifies to us and that the man who expects more is as foolish as he who should tear a rent in a beautiful painting and then complain of the dingy wall behind it."—Exchange.

COST OF THE CUP DEFENDER.

Estimated that the Iselin Syndicate Will Have to Lay From $150,000 to $200,000.

The use of aluminum bronze for the sides above the water line and for the floor beams will render Defender from four to seven tons lighter than would any other suitable material employed for the same purposes. In just this point of weight alone, therefore, Defender will have an advantage which is of almost incalculable value and which it is difficult for any one but an expert yacht designer and builder adequately to appreciate.

That "money is no object" is the motto of Defender syndicate is also very effectively demonstrated by the lavish use to be made of this extremely costly metal, and the selection of this material for such extensive use also confirms the previous statements that it has been the determination both of the members of the syndicate and of the designers and builders to neglect or slight not one single point, however insignificant, in which, regardless of expenditure, any possible advantage could be secured and anything whatever be added to the possibilities or capabilities of the boat.

This policy, it is said, determined the fact that Defender should be a keel boat and not a centerboard, like the Vigilant, according to what should be excellent authority. The original intention of the syndicate, according to this authority, was to build another centerboard yacht, but when the matter was talked over with Nat Herreshoff he put his foot on it at the very outset. His argument, it is said, was that not only must the new cup defender be absolutely the very best that skill and money could produce, but that no chances at all must be taken in constructing the boat. As on this basis, he is positive that, to say the least, he could build as fast a keel boat as a centerboard, it was unwise to take the possible chances, however slight they might be, of any trouble with a centerboard or of any mishap of any nature to that sometimes cranky appendage. Therefore, the keel type was decided upon, according to the story as told privately by one who should know whereof he affirms.

As to the actual cost of Defender, of course, not even Mr. Iselin or Nat Herreshoff can yet tell what it will be, but those here who are competent to figure on such matters are making some very extravagant sounding estimates. All admit that, although they know pretty well that the aluminum costs in the neighborhood of 80 cents per pound, yet the actual number of pounds of it which will go into the boat is very hard to estimate, since no one is sufficiently familiar with it to judge accurately of its weight by its size, and therefore they are greatly hampered at the very outset in attempting to estimate the cost. It is a matter of interest, however, to know that these men, who are all, probably, as competent to form an opinion as any boat builder to-day outside of the Herreshoffs, place the probable cost of Defender at the starting line at all the way from $150,000 to $200,000.

IDLE AMERICAN YOUNG MEN.

Grand Juror Loth Thinks State Industrial Schools Might Lessen the Evil.

Just before the New York Grand Jury was discharged in the General Sessions, Joseph Loth, a silk manufacturer, who was a member, stepped up to the railing and addressed the Judge:

"While I have been acting as a Grand Juror I have noticed that the majority of the offenders indicted were young men of American birth. I think this is a matter to which the attention of the community should be called.

"There are so many young men unemployed who are on the streets, and I would think it a good idea for the State to build industrial schools so that these young men might be taught trades, instead of enlarging its prisons. It appears to me that there are altogether too many young men with no means of employment who idle away their time."

Agreeably Surprised.

"I had a very severe cold on my lungs that caused much soreness and gave me considerable uneasiness in regard to the result," says Mr. T. E. Smith, of Billerica, Mass. "A local druggist called my attention to Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and on his recommendation I gave the remedy a careful trial. The result surprised me; I recovered entirely in three days." 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy.

It Did the Business.

Mr. J. H. Cobb, publisher of the Mirror, at Brockton, N. Y., says: "For nearly two years the Mirror has been publishing the advertisements of Chamberlain's Remedies. A few days ago the writer was suffering from a bowel trouble and resorted to an old remedy which did not prove efficacious; finally he tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and two doses did the business, checking it completely. Catarrh starts in the nasal passages, affecting eyes, ears and throat, and is, in fact, the great enemy of the mucous membrane. Neglected colds in the head almost invariably precede catarrh, causing an excessive flow of mucous, and if the mucous discharge becomes interrupted the disagreeable results of catarrh will follow, such as bad breath, severe pain across forehead and about the eyes, a roaring and buzzing sound in the ears and oftentimes a very offensive discharge. Ely's Cream Balm is the acknowledged cure for these troubles.

Thirteen Leading Citizens of the Station End of the Township State Their Views for Preferring to Establish Home Government for Their District—Common, Not Selfish, Interests at Stake.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—

To the Citizens of Fanwood residing in proximity to the station of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, the question of forming a closer municipal organization for the promotion and protection of their local interests has forced itself to an issue.

An area of a little over one square mile, with the railroad station approximately in the centre, is suitable to, and available for villa and cottage sites, to be improved and occupied generally by people having business interests elsewhere. Such occupation of this area will greatly increase the value of its land, and it would seem to be the interest of the owners of it to take those steps which will facilitate and encourage such people to come and live upon it.

No area so easily reached within the same distance of New York and Brooklyn, offers to people who are seeking the healthfulness, economies and pleasures of country living, better natural conditions than can here be found. But these people are accustomed to publicly supplied conveniences of living not to be found in the country outside of village communities, and increasing population and closer building of houses necessitate certain public expenditures for improvements which simply farming communities do not need. By supplying these improvements as required, we will make this area attractive, create a demand for our property and increase its value.

The village requires good streets good sidewalks, street lights, water supply, and in fact whatever promotes sanitary conditions and the protection of life and property. Some of these things we now have, but we hold them precariously, as we are but a small minority of the people of the township, and they can be taken from us when it pleases the majority, who have no special interest in them, to refuse by their votes to sanction them. Other things, which in the course of a few years we shall need, we will probably not be able to obtain at all unless we can supply them for ourselves, independently of the township at large.

But the need of the village of these things does not at present, and will not in the future, go beyond its means of supplying them if, governing itself, its steady increase of taxable valuation and growth in population are applied to its own necessities and are not frittered away by being spread over too wide an area. It must be remembered that nearly all of the township's growth of population and of property valuation within the last ten years, is within this area in which it is proposed to establish the Borough Commission.

The proposition to form this local government is a business proposition and should be treated from a business standpoint. The injection into the discussion of personalities, vague insinuations and anonymous circulars is entirely uncalled for. It is the old method of abusing the opposing attorney when you have no good argument to present to the court. It may be, as stated, that taxes are inequitably assessed among us. If so, let us by all means, make them equitable. It may be that some of our citizens are selfish and disposed to deal unjustly with their neighbors; if so, it is not an exceptional case and we can see to it that such men are not favored in their efforts; but these things have literally nothing to do with the question for or against the Borough Commission government. The existing inequalities of taxation have not arisen under the Borough but under the Township government. The self-seekers of Fanwood township do not all reside in the area proposed to be constituted into a Borough Commission. The possibility that the new government might be used to promote selfish corporate or personal schemes, applies with no more force to the Borough Commission than to the Township. To allow such a fear to deter us would be a confession of a lack of ability on our part to take care of ourselves; it would be "pleading the baby act". We submit, that the citizens of the proposed Borough Commission being more largely property owners than those of the Township at large, and therefore having every inducement to protect their own interests, can run their local government without being swerved from their duty by any selfish schemes of individuals or corporations, should such appear.

It is a very modest beginning which is proposed. At first, a Borough Commission, by which we take the management of our roads—separate our roads and our taxation for them from the remainder of the township—take care of our own sidewalks, regulate the use of our streets, establish a police court, have control over the treatment of tramps, mendicants and disorderly persons, measurably provide for sanitary conditions, etc. Later as property values within our area increase, and we can obtain improvements and benefits without an increase of taxation, we may be disposed to go further. But at present we propose only that form of self-government which will give us control of our own affairs, which will place the management of our local matters in the hands of those identified with our interests and growth, rather than in the hands of those whose interests lie in other and oftentimes opposite directions, as is now the case.

The assumption, or pretended fear, by the author of a circular who was not sufficiently proud of his production to give it the support of his name, that the Borough Commission expenses would be $2,000 per annum, is ridiculous. The law sets $2,000 as the highest amount which the Borough Commission may raise for roads and other Borough uses, but the amount actually to be raised will rest with the voters themselves, as it does now. The Borough Commission Act restricts the amount which they may vote for the uses of the Borough. They cannot vote so much under the Borough Commission Act as they can now under the Township government, but what they do vote will be applied exclusively to their own purposes.

So far as we can estimate there need be little or no increase of taxation by the adoption of the Borough Commission. The committee appointed to investigate this matter has given an estimate of an increase of 14½ c. per $100 of property valuation; say $1.45 per $1,000. But the government can undoubtedly be run for less than those figures. The committee supposed that it would be necessary to hire a room for the meetings of the Commissioners; they supposed also that ordinances would be passed which must be advertised. By correspondence with officers of Borough Commissions in other parts of the State it is ascertained that it is a common practice for the Commissioners to meet without incurring expenses for rent, and to govern by resolutions which require public posting only and not newspaper advertisement, instead of by ordinances. Supposing our Commissioners would deem it wise to practise as close economy as this, and modifying the Committee's figures slightly in other particulars, our estimate for Borough expenses, other than roads and lights, is as follows:

Advertising notices of election, say	$ 5.00
Pay of election officers, say 4 at $2 each	8.00
Printing ballots	5.00
Rent of rooms for election	3.00
Advertising, stationery and incidentals	5.00
Total	$26.00

As we would receive more than the above sum from license fees, all the borough expenses would be fully covered and no tax would be necessary.

We whose names are hereto subscribed have no personal or selfish schemes to promote in the establishment of this Borough Commission, other than those which are common to the people of the district. We have weighed the matter carefully and investigated closely, and respectfully ask and advise the voters to vote in favor of the Borough Commission at the election to decide the question to be held Saturday, May 18, 1895, at the Club House, from 2 to 7 in the afternoon.

Marked Prosperity.

Somerville Unionist-Gazette:—The Plainfield Daily Press had its eighth birthday celebration Friday and it came out attired in a brand-new dress with all the latest wrinkles. No wonder it felt pretty large, for the feature of the new dresses are big puffs. This new gown is an evidence of a vigor in Plainfield's handsome daily which is likely to continue for years to come. Prosperity is marked on every page.

Bright, Clean, Up to Date.

Clinton Home Visitor:—The Plainfield Daily Press, a bright, clean, newsy afternoon paper, celebrated its eighth birthday last Friday by appearing in a new dress. This paper is up-to-date in all matters of public interest.

LOWRIE-GRIFFITH.

Marriage of a Plainfield Youth to a Bride of the Capitol City.

The following despatch was received by The Daily Press yesterday afternoon; and in the absence of definite knowledge from the family, publication was withheld. Today it appeared in The Morning Journal of New York:

Cincinnati, Ohio, May 16.—Harry H. Lowrie, of Plainfield, N. J., is in this city on his wedding tour, in which he is starring without the support of his bride.

Last Monday evening Harry was wedded to Inez Mae Griffith of Washington, D. C., who, until recently, was employed in the Treasury Department. She left her position to give her attentions to the arrangement of her wedding trousseau, and on its completion was married to Lowrie, who, for two years, had been a student of the Georgetown Medical College.

Dr. Lowrie, the lad's father, is one of the most prominent physicians of Plainfield, and some time ago cut off his son's allowance on hearing of his alleged gayety. Harry then applied to an uncle, who lives near Washington, who responded liberally until a few weeks ago, when the two had a row.

Dr. McGruden, dean of the college, at whose residence young Lowrie boarded, turned on the boy, and on the morning after his marriage Harry fled, reaching this city yesterday afternoon, penniless and despondent.

Friends of the young student in this city endeavored to get him to go back home and face the music. It is understood that Lowrie's parents and other relatives are greatly put out over the marriage.

Miss Griffith has always moved in good society and is of a highly respected family.

Lowrie left for Chicago this evening.

The matter thus becoming public, denial of its errors is proper. The fact is that Harry has had no trouble with his parents. He did not come home when he was expected, and as no word came from him his father went on to Washington to look him up. Harry married without his parents' knowledge, and made the mistake of applying elsewhere for help in the hope of evading their displeasure. His parents have sent to Chicago for him to return home, and will welcome him back; and that is all there is to what has been wrongly elaborated by gossip into a social sensation.

TELLER VAN DEVENTER.

The Franklin National Bank Makes a Deserved Promotion.

Jacob H. Van Deventer of Woodland avenue has been appointed receiving teller of the Franklin National Bank, Greenwich street, New York. He is a brother of Augustus Van Deventer of North Plainfield, with whom he was formerly associated in business.

Mr. Van Deventer has been connected with the bank since its organization, as counting clerk, and received the promotion through the influence of ex-Postmaster General Thomas L. James, who is a director in the bank.

Mr. Van Deventer is a graduate of Princeton college, and during his studentship there, was the fastest sprinter among the athletes of the institution. He is still an enthusiast on whist, chess and bowling. His many friends in this city will be pleased to learn of his advancement.

For The Fresh Air Fund.

A festival for the benefit of the New York Fresh-Air Fund will be given on the lawn of John H. Carney's residence, corner Craig place and Duer street, the middle of next month. The affair is being arranged by the Misses Addie Carney, Nellie Valiant and Tina Voehl, who will be assisted by the juvenile Queen Esther Band of Grace M. E. Church. It is probable that Guttman's band will contribute their services and give a concert as one of the attractions. The Borough Electric Light Company have also agreed to furnish, free of cost, the illumination for the festival, and that, together with the other allurements, will make the event a notable success.

To Play a Week.

The Howard Stock Company, brass band and orchestra will open a week engagement in Music Hall next Monday evening. La-Petite-Shirley, the clever child actress, is the mascot. Among the plays to be produced are: In His Power, Forgiven Sin and Its Shadow, The Banker, In the Web, and The Vendetta. Popular prices will prevail.

Hunting for Rocks.

PLAINFIELD YOUNG MEN.

What Is Being Done by the Christian Association.

GREATER WORK IN THE NEW HOME.

Interesting and Edifying Reports Submitted at the Annual Meeting—Esteem Expressed for Worthy and Efficient Workers, and Gratitude Given to Helpful Papers.

The annual business meeting of the Y. M. C. A. was held last night in the Assembly Hall of the Association Building. The meeting was well attended, and much interest was manifested in the work that had been accomplished and the plans that were promulgated for the ensuing year. Previous to the business session, however, the social committee of the Ladies Auxiliary of the Association served a New England supper to the active members, which was attended by a large element of the younger members. Baked beans brown bread, doughnuts and coffee was the menu and palatable it was too. The following as the committee who served the refreshments: Mrs. H. M. Maxson, Mrs. J. W. Gavett Mrs. Roger Murray, Mrs. Frank Clawson. Mrs S. R. Struthers, Miss J. L. Demarest, Mrs. L. M. French and Mrs. J. H. Manning.

At 8:15 the meeting was called to order by President William D. Murray, and J. A. Robinson was selected for temporary secretary. After the minutes of the last annual meeting had been read and approved a committee was appointed to make up a list of nominations.

While the nominating committee were in conference the committees' and officers' reports were made. The first to be presented was from the committee on educational work, which was read by chairman J. Cahoone. The work of the past year was shown to have been practical and profitable, mechanical drawing, stenography, bookkeeping, arithmetic and German being the subjects taught. The largest class was that of bookkeeping. Out of a class of sixteen in the stenographic instruction five had qualified in the seven months term to hold positions. Next fall it is calculated to organize a class in Spanish. A first-class library is needed. Though there is shelf room for 2,300 only 1,200 volumes are on hand, and most of these are in bad condition. Overtures have been made to the Public Library towards establishing a distributing station at the association building, but the plans have not yet been consummated. What is needed to make the educational more efficient is salaried teachers. Physical Director MacPhie reported that since January 18 he had examined 172 men and 72 boys. There is a growing appreciation, he said, of the benefits of the gymnasium, which enables the brain worker to accomplish his tasks with more rapidity and ease.

In the young men's class there had been an average attendance of 36, in the boys class, 50, and in the business men's class, 8.

A. C. LaBoyteaux, chairman of the committee on religious work, reported that since occupying the new building the Sunday afternoon meetings had increased in attendance from 40 and 50 to 150 and 250.

The report of Treasurer H. O. Newman showed that the total receipts for the year had been $4,293.31, of which the most important item was $2,894.08 for membership fees. The expenditures were $4,270.73, of which $2,168.32 was for officers salaries. A balance of $22.58 is left on hand. The report was referred to H. R. Munger to audit.

President Wm. D. Murray's report was as follows:

"Once more the pleasant duty comes to me, as your President, of reporting to you our work for the year. It is not hard to render a report for the Plainfield Young Men's Christian Association because there is always something to report. The great trouble is to select from the whole the most important things.

"From month to month reports are rendered to our board of directors showing the progress of the various departments of our work. In such reports the details can be given which it would be tiresome to repeat here tonight. I can only refer to those matters which will give you, the members of the Association, a general idea of the year's work.

"There are three departments of our work which this report does not touch: the religious, the educational and the physical, not because they are not important, but because they are so important that the Chairmen of the Committees having charge of these departments, have been asked to render separate reports. All our work is religious in the sense that the reason for our existence is that we may lead young men to Jesus Christ, their Saviour.

"The most important event during the year, the event which has put a song of rejoicing in our mouths and has filled our hearts with joy, is the consummation of our long deferred hope, the completion and occupation of our beautiful building. The first subscription to this enterprise was made in May 1887, and we moved in in January 1895, nearly seven years after. Great credit is due our architect, A. L. C. Marsh, for the splendid results he has obtained with the amount of money at his disposal, and we must ever be grateful to the various contractors, every one of whom more than fulfilled his contract. Our financial statement is as follows:

Cost of Land	$14,000.00
Building Complete	46,224.00
Furnishing	4,693.00
Total	$64,917.00
We have paid	$50,700
Leaving a deficit of	14,217

"Of this amount $5,000 at least ought to be realized when Watchung avenue is extended, and we have a legacy of $2,000 from William R. Clarkson, which will be paid in due time. This leaves us about $7,000 to be raised. We are praying that it may not be necessary to place a mortgage on the building but that our friends who have so liberally contributed to our work, will continue to help us until this one of the finest Association buildings in New Jersey is wholly ours. Or may not some public spirited friend arise who will out of his abundance free us from the bondage of debt?

"On June 28, 1894 in response to an invitation sent to the ladies of the different churches, a goodly number met to discuss the subject of furnishing the building. Thereafter a committee was formed, and it was finally decided to undertake the work and to attempt to raise the necessary money by a fair.

"Preparations continued until Nov. 27, when for five days a Festival of Nations was given in the building. The interest of the people of the city, both in the preparation for this entertainment and in its support, was exceedingly gratifying. As is well known over $4,600 was raised, a sum sufficient to thoroughly furnish our new home. We never can thank the ladies enough. We feel, too, that we ought again to acknowledge the many kindnesses shown to us by the merchants of the city, who were determined to give us whatever we needed at the very lowest prices. This made it possible for us to furnish this large building with the above sum of money.

"Our expenses for this year will, of course, be larger than ever, though it is hardly possible to tell exactly what they will be. Much of it can be merely estimated. Our finance committee, however, after careful consideration, reported a budget of $6,300. The principal items of this are: Salaries for secretary, assistant-secretary, physical instructor, and janitor, $3,420; light and heat, $1,200; insurance, water and interest, $1,000; reading matter, educational work, printing, postage, etc., $780.

"Our income is from membership and rentals. This we estimate at $4,300, which may be too high. This leaves us an estimated deficit of about $3,500 to be raised by subscription, and of this about $1,400 is now subscribed. We should be glad to receive any sum towards this amount. We estimate that what we give to members who pay $8, costs us fully $15. It is no more than they ought to have, and the great majority of them cannot pay more than they do. This is why we have to ask the friends of young men to contribute the difference, so that those who want a place and safe resort can have it. Not long ago, a man, not a Christian, living in a New York town, said to his son, 'John, I don't want to see you standing around the corners nights'. John answered, 'Do you want me to go inside, father?' And when the father realized what the only places he could go into were, he sent for the Young Men's Christian Association State Secretary and started an Association. It is interesting to know that the people of our city contributed during the past year $562 to the work of the International Committee, and over $353 to the work of our State Committee.

"The year has been noted as a convention year for our Association. The State Convention is so recent that it only needs to be mentioned to bring up pleasant recollections of the few days we spent in conference with our fellow-workers from all over the State. The Convention helped us and helped other Associations by demonstrating, among other things, the possibility of securing buildings adequate for their needs. The cost of the Convention was $194.94, and this was paid largely from collections taken at the evening meetings.

"We were represented for the ninth time at the great gathering of college students at Northfield. This conference meets this year from June 29 to July 7 and we hope that Plainfield will be again represented.

"Our members rendered good services at the District Convention held at Somerville, and from the seed planted then an Association has grown. Westfield, likewise, partly through our efforts, has organized an Association.

"The President, General Secretary and Assistant Secretary attended the International Convention at Springfield, Mass., where over a thousand delegates assembled, representing every State in the Union, besides Canada, British Columbia and Mexico. The broadness of our work was well shown at the closing meeting of this Convention when men of eleven nations spoke, each one closing his address with the words, spoken in his native tongue, 'Jesus Christ the same yesterday, today and forever'.

"The Plainfield Association has been fortunate in having employes who have honored us. One of our former secretaries, after having been for some years State Secretary of Virginia, is about to become one of the Railroad Secretaries of the International Committee. Another is now State Secretary of Alabama and Mississippi. Mr. Clemens who helped us so much in our educational work is now Assistant State Secretary of New Jersey, and is to be one of the instructors at an educational conference to be held in Springfield next month. And our present corps gives promise of as great service, though we trust they will long be spared to us. Mr. Jessup takes hold of the work very well; Mr. MacPhie has proved himself a splendid man in the gymnasium; and our devoted General Secretary, Mr. Manning, is so efficient that we almost fear to sound his praises where other associations may hear them. A secretary's position is not a bed of roses; his hours are long, from 9 a. m to 11 p. m. His work is trying, drawing alike on sympathy, patience and physical endurance. If any member of this Association can at any time be of assistance to these men, who are making sacrifices to help us in the work the Lord has committed to us, let them see to it that they do it.

"There have been a number of occasions during the year which we have considered worthy of special note. In June last we, in company with Associations all over the world, joined in celebrating the jubilee, for on June 6, 1894, the Young Men's Christian Association was fifty years old.

"A delightful outdoor conference of committee-men was held at Mr. Kissam's hospitable home at about the same time of year, on one of the subjects discussed at the State Convention 'Esprit de Corps in Association Work.' The social gatherings of committee-men serve to foster a spirit essential to the best work.

"In December, D. A. McPhie came to us as Physical Director, and Dr. and Mrs. Endicott gave a reception at which the medical men of the city were invited to meet Mr. McPhie who thus came in immediate contact with those who can help him most in his work.

"On February 12, our new building was formally opened by appropriate exercises in the hall. Mayor Gilbert presided, and addresses were made by Dr. Richards, State Secretary Lucas and the President. This was followed by a reception at which many friends inspected our new home.

"For years it has been evident to us that our work in the future depends largely upon what we do for those who are now boys. But prior to this year we have not been able to do much because we have had no place. Men and boys will not mix. Now, however, the boys have their own rooms and are allowed the use of the gymnasium and swimming tank on certain days. This has brought us a membership of seventy-five fine boys of whom we are proud.

"There are many others matters that ought to be mentioned, but time forbids. We believe the Association is on a firmer basis than ever before. Our membership is 450, exclusive of the boys. During January the average daily attendance at the building was 134.

"There is one phase of our work, however, which has been neglected, and that is Bible study. Every Young Men's Christian Association ought to be a training school for Christian workers. We have facilities and opportunities along this line which the churches do not have, and they have supported us because we have supplied this lack. Let us plan for better things in this direction during the coming year.

"In closing may I not commend to you this work for the young manhood of our city? Give of your substance to support it, deny yourselves some social pleasures that a portion of your

OPPOSITION WAS WEAK

Russell's Supporters Outgeneraled the Liberals.

Believed That the New Moderator Will Now Put the Screws Upon the Home and Foreign Boards—Prospects of a Lively Session Over Charges of Extravagance.

Pittsburg, May 17.—Notwithstanding the well laid plans of the Presbyterian league of liberals and mild conservatives the out-and-out anti-Briggs men were successful in electing their candidate for moderator, Rev. Dr. Robert Russell Booth, of the Rutgers church, New York city. This campaign for Dr. Booth began weeks ago. It was carried on from New York city by master hands in a manner that would have brought them credit in a contest with experienced politicians.

Briggs' Faction Took Alarm.

As soon as it was understood that Dr. Booth was to be the candidate of the conservatives, the friends of Dr. Briggs and Union seminary took alarm. They engaged the energies of the Presbyterian league, an organization pledged to the reversal of the acts of preceding assemblies in the Briggs case. The Presbyterian league dominates the boards for home and foreign missions in the Presbyterian church. A majority of each board and many of the secretaries and clerks openly sympathize with the object of the league.

Anything To Beat Booth.

Dr. Booth is a member of the foreign board. He has always been prominent in its councils. Years ago he lifted an enormous debt, nearly half a million dollars, that had rested for years on the board's treasuries. A few years ago his influence turned the vote in the foreign board in favor of a change in the charter bringing the board under the direct control of the general assembly. Every man connected with the board understood that Dr. Booth was inimical to the Briggs influence there. Understanding this, the missionary strength was enlisted in a measure in this fight. Instructions were sent out to each delegate known to be in sympathy with the Briggs side, the word being "Anything to beat Booth."

Lobbying Methods.

An old-time father of the Presbyterian church remembering the cordial reunion of the old and new school churches which took place here twenty-five years ago, and which this assembly is to commemorate, would have stood, had he been here to-day an amazed witness of the lobbying methods in vogue in a modern general assembly. The conservatives acted to a man under clear and definite instructions to give their full strength to Dr. Booth. The liberals and the weak-kneed conservatives had their instructions, but they lacked a candidate.

Could Not Agree on a Man.

At the last minute they met in caucus and discused the most available man. In this they could not agree, so when the votes were counted they were divided, 165 for Dr. Page, of Topeka, and 83 for Dr. Adams, of Minneapolis, showing a strength of liberals nearly double that found in any assembly for the last five years.

Charges of Wasting the Funds.

Understanding the issues clearly and the forces that were at work against him Dr. Booth's missionary committee, which he will announce to-day, may be expected to put the screws upon the home and foreign boards. The situation with respect to those boards is somewhat distressing at this juncture, as the western commissioners say that the boards are wasting their funds and violating their pledges to the donors in the erection of a marble palace in New York at a cost of $2,000,000.

Believe Sweeping Changes Necessary

Both boards come to the assembly with enormous debts, the one $175,000 and the other $360,000, although but two years ago the accounts showed a surplus. The idea in the west is that sweeping changes are imperative in the offices of the missionary boards. It is clearly the intention to raise these points in the assembly's missionary committees this year. Should this issue reach the floor of the assembly a violent and determined oppostion would be aroused that would make the assembly memorable.

Dr. Booth's Career.

Dr. Robert Russel Booth is a graduate of Williams college and Auburn seminary. His first pastorate was at Troy, where he assisted Dr. Beeman for three and a half years. He then went to Stamford, Conn., remaining there about the same length of time. He was then called to succeed Thomas H. Skinner, the famous pastor of the ancient Mercer street church at New York city, now known as the Church of the Strangers. He remained there until the reunion of the old and new schools when the Mercer street church was merged into the University place church.

Extended Tour of Foreign Missions.

He continued as pastor of the combined churches until his health failed and he entered upon an extended tour of the foreign mission fields. Returning to New York he found the ancient Rutgers church at Madison avenue and Twenty-eighth street deserted and abandoned by pastor and congregation. He undertook the work of its revival. This he accomplished with signal success, planting the church in the magnificent edifice at the corner of Seventy-third street and the Boulevard. He has just completed a term as moderator of the New York presbytery. Dr. Booth opposed Dr. Briggs in Union seminary where he was a director, and when that institution rebelled against the assembly veto, he resigned from the directorate.

Indian Agent Powell Dead.

Washington, May 17.—Secretary Hoke Smith has been advised of the death of Capt. W. L. Powell, United States Indian agent at Neahby, Washington. Capt. Powell was a brother-in-law of Senator Gibson, of Maryland, and was himself a native of that state.

Race Riot in New Orleans.

New Orleans, May 17.—Pistol shots were exchanged in a riot between white and negro longshoremen yesterday. One man was shot in the leg. No arrests were made.

CATHOLICS IN BOSTON.

Closing Banquet in the Golden Jubilee of Archbishop Williams.

Boston, May 17.—The celebration of the golden anniversary of Archbishop John J. Williams, of the Catholic diocese of Boston, reached a fitting climax last night in a magnificent banquet in Music hall. The vast building was arrayed in jubilee attire. The halls and foyer were beautifully decorated with palms, potted plants, streamers and flags. Crossing the front of the stage was a long table, banked with the choicest products of the hot house, provided for the honored chief guest of the occasion, and the dignitaries of the church.

The Honored Guests.

In the centre of the chief table on the stage and facing the vast assembly sat the venerable Archbishop Williams. At his right sat Cardinal Gibbons in the scarlet vestments of his office, Governor Greenhalge, Archbishop Ireland, of St. Paul; Bishops Feehan, of Chicago; Bradley, of Manchester; Harkins, of Providence; Tierney, of Hartford; Michaud, of Burlington; Congressman Fitzgerald, of Boston, and Vicar General Byrne. On the left of the archbishop were the apostolic delegate Monsignor Satolli, Alderman Horace G. Allen, representating the mayor of Boston; Archbishop Corrigan, of New York; Bishop William Lawrence, of the Episcopal diocese of Massachusetts; Bishops Ryan, of Philadelphia; Fabre, of Montreal, and Father Ronan, the toast master of the occasion.

HELD IN $10,000 BAIL.

Assemblyman Vacheron Surrenders Himself at Albany.

Albany, May 17.—Assemblyman Eugene F. Vacheron, of Ozone Park, was arraigned yesterday afternoon before Justice Landon, sitting in the supreme court here, by District Attorney Burlingame. Counsel Reilly, on behalf of the accused assemblyman, pleaded not guilty, with permission of the court to withdraw it, if so desired, later. Justice Landon, at the suggestion of the district attorney, fixed the bail at $10,000, and Senator John L. Childs of the first senate district went on Vacheron's bond. The assemblyman was then released. The charge, as read by the district attorney, specifies that Vacheron on April 25, in violation of his oath, asked Geo. M. Best for $3,000, with the understanding that it was to influence his vote on the ice bill, and that at a later date he received the money. After the arraignment of Vacheron District Attorney Burlingame announced to the court that out of the four sealed indictments handed down by the grand jury this indictment against Vacheron was the only one against any member of either senate or assembly.

MURDERER KOHL'S CASE.

The New Method for Defeating Justice—Safe Probably Until October.

Trenton, N. J., May 17.—Judge Green, of the United States court, denied the application for a writ of habeas corpus for Henry Kohl, the Newark murderer, who was to have been hanged yesterday, but who was reprieved by Governor Werts. The application for the writ was based upon the allegation that one of the jurors who convicted Kohl was not a citizen of New Jersey, and otherwise the conviction was not according to law. An appeal to the United States supreme court was taken as a matter of right, and this will act as a stay. Judge Green said to your correspondent that he did not suppose the case would be taken up in United States supreme court before the October term.

FRENCH TORPEDO BOAT SUNK.

Four of the Nine Persons on Board Lost—A Steel Ship Damaged.

Rochefort, France, May 17.—The French torpedo boat No. 20 foundered last evening northwest of the Isle d'Aix, which lies a short distance from this port. There were nine persons on the boat when she sank. Four of them were drowned, but the other five were picked up by a passing vessel. The barbette iron and steel ship Admiral Duperre yesterday struck rock bottom in the gulf of Juan, causing her to leak badly. She will go to Toulon to repair when the weather becomes calmer.

ADVOCATES REBELLION

Tillman's Advice if Judge Goff Goes Any Further.

An All Night Secret Session of the Tillman-Irby Executive Committee. Gov. Evans Refuses To Call an Extra Session of Legislature—White Primary To Be Held in August.

Columbia, S. C., May 17.—An all-night secret session of the Tillman-Irby executive committee was held here, having been called to meet the emergency caused by Judge Goff's decision against the constitutionality of the state registration laws in the face of the coming election to the constitutional convention. There was a strong effort to induce Gov. Evans to call an extra session of the legislature to pass a new registration law, but he refused, stating that if another were passed the courts would declare it unconstitutional also.

Favored Extreme Measures.

Senator Tillman, who was present, declared, notwithstanding his bitter attacks upon Judge Goff, that the condition in which his decision had left politics was the very best for his party, and advocated a white primary to nominate delegates to the convention. He said that if Judge Goff went any further in this matter he, for one, would advocate open rebellion. The end of it was that a general white primary was ordered to be held on July 30, to nominate delegates to the constitutional convention. The election will be held in August.

48 YEARS OF SERVICE.

Record of Admiral Almy Whose Death Occured Yesterday.

Washington, May 17.—Admiral John J. Almy, retired, whose death occured at his home in this city yesterday, was born in Newport, R. I., on April 24, 1814. He entered the navy as a midshipman in 1829. He served almost forty-eight years, retiring in July, 1877. As midshipman and lieutenant he cruised all over the world in the old sailing navy. He was present at the surrender of Walker and his filibusters and commanded the Fulton in the expedition to Paraguay. He was at the siege of Vera Cruz and the capture of Tuxpan during the Mexican war. He was commander at the Brooklyn Navy Yard in 1861 and 1862. During his service as commander he had charge successively of the gunboats South Carolina, Connecticut and Juniata. While in command of the Connecticut he captured four noted blockade runners with valuable cargoes and chased four others to the shore and destroyed them.

TURNED OUT AN EMBEZZLER.

A Wilkesbarre Ticket Agent and Society Man Goes Wrong.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., May 17.—S. S. Chan, city ticket agent for the Lehigh Valley Railroad company, and prominent society man of this city, has turned out to be an embezzler and as far as can be learned his accounts are short $2,850, how much more is as yet not known. The money that he had stolen did not belong to the Lehigh Valley company. He had in connection with his ticket agency carried on a money order business, his patrons being mostly Hungarians and Polanders and it was through this branch he worked his system of stealing. At present he is in Europe where he went a few weeks ago under the pretext that he was in very ill health. It is not at all likely that he will return to this country unless brought back. He has a family well known here who have the sympathy of the entire community.

CONFEDERATION DEAD

Newfoundland Abandons the Scheme at Last.

Terms Offered by Canada Would Leave Too Big a Burden To Should r—Will Now Adopt a Policy of Retrenchment and Endeavor To Pull the Colony Through.

St. John's, N. F., May 17.—As indicated in the United Press dispatches of the past week the idea of the confederation of Newfoundland with the dominion of Canada was abandoned yesterday. In the legislature the Whiteway government almost unanimously opposed the proposal. Mr. Norris, one of the delegates to Ottawa, reported to the legislature the proceedings of the conference between the Canadian authorities and the Newfoundland delegates.

Terms Offered by Canada.

Canada's terms included the assumption of $10,000,000 of Newfoundland's debt, leaving $5,000,000 to be assumed by the colony. The dominion proposed to grant eighty cents per capita for local administration, $50,000 for legislation, $150,000 for the crown lands and $40,000 for police, in lieu of the formation of a militia body, a total of $505,000. This was exclusive of the services to be taken over and maintained by the dominion government. These services now demand the expenditure of $900,000, so that Canada conceded Newfoundland the equivalent of $1,405,000.

Left Too Much Debt.

The main objection to these proposals was that they left Newfoundland in debt nearly $7,000,000, on which sum interest would have to be paid annually. Newfoundland demanded a bounty to fishermen, a subsidy of $1,500,000, of which $203,000 represented the interest on the difference between her debt in 1888, when Canada urged Newfoundland to accept union, and before Newfoundland undertook to build the railway, which Canada was willing to finish after union was consumated.

Other Demands of Newfoundland.

Newfoundland also demands an additional $160,000 for the crown lands in Labrador and for the fisheries of the maritime provinces, an efficient weekly mail and passenger service with Halifax, bounties to local industries and the establishment of a naval brigade. She reserved for herself all the precious metals in the colony.

Too Big a Burden.

The acceptance of Canada's proposals would have left a total annual deficit of $50,000, which would be required to be made up by direct taxation within Newfoundland, besides another $150,000 yearly after five years, when the colony would be obliged to operate the railway itself. Canada negotiated with the British government, hoping to secure assistance therefrom to help complete the railway. These negotiations failed, and Canada then made her last offer of $6,000 per mile to complete the railway, Newfoundland to assume the remaining $3,000 per mile.

A Policy of Retrenchment.

This was beyond Newfoundland's means, and the negotiations were broken off. The government now proposes a policy of retrenchment, and hopes to carry the colony through its troubles, but this is generally believed to be impossible owing to the difficulty of obtaining a loan because of the bad condition of public affairs.

So Far Recovered as To Be Able To Be Taken Home.

Saratoga, N. Y., May 17.—Comrade James C. Fox of Bosworth Post, G. A. R., who fell from the stairway in the Columbia hotel a distance of three stories, on Tuesday afternoon, and dislocated his neck, had so far recovered yesterday under the surgical care of Dr. Varney that he was taken on a stretcher to the train last evening and sent to his home in Fairhaven, Vt. Fox seems to bear a charmed life. Twice was he wounded and left for dead on the battlefield and once he fell from a passenger train in rapid motion and rolled unhurt down an embankment twenty feet high.

CONEY ISLAND'S BIG BLAZE.

A Score of Buildings Were Wiped Out by Yesterday's Fire.

Brooklyn, N. Y., May 17.—The fire that swept Coney Island yesterday is the third that has occurred at that popular resort at the opening of the season. The score of buildings destroyed yesterday were among the more prominent pleasure resorts and business structures. They were: O'Brien's hotel, St. Nicholas hotel, Ernest Beach's hotel, Michael's hotel, Rochester Brewing company, Jimmy Carroll's saloon, Galligan's saloon, Paul Weizmen Bottling company, Oss' photograph gallery, Bullock's Gayety Concert hall, Ex-Police Capt. Hinman's saloon, Kuhlman's Metropolitan hall, Sanguinetti's gallery, Iron Pier hotel, McKane flats, Surf avenue; Dr. Hill's drug store, which included the postoffice; Little Ferris wheel, Everhard's laundry and barber shop. Fully eighty small sheds and booths were totally destroyed. The loss is estimated at from $150,000 to $200,000. The blaze originated in a small photographic establishment on Maiden lane and spread through to Surf avenue, along that thoroughfare to Culver's plaza and Sea Beach walk.

THE COMING C. E. CONVENTION

Representatives and Speakers from Many Countries Will Be Present.

Boston, May 17.—The international Chiristian Endeavor convention in Boston will be more international in its make-up of delegates than any previous convention by great odds and even Secretary Baer is surprised at the number of foreigners who intend to be present. There will be representatives from England, Australia, China, India, Canada, Japan, France, Ireland, Madagascar, Samoa, New Zealand, Hawaii, Wales, Scotland, Germany, Africa, Turkey, West Indies, Chili, Switzerland, Bohemia, Persia, Italy and Spain, and there will be speakers from fifteen different countries. Mr. Baer has received a letter from an English clergymen stating that he and another clergymen, who are much interested in Christian Endeavor work, but don't feel that they can spend a great deal of money traveling, have made plans to come to Boston steerage, in order to be present at the convention.

Newark, N. J., May 17.—This city was aglow with decorations yesterday in honor of the semi-centennial anniversary of the New Jersey Historical society, and the visit of ex-President Harrison as the chief guest of the society. The ex-president was received at the depot by Franklin Murphy, chairman of the committee of arrangements, and members of the society, and drove at once to the Lyceum, where a gold medal commemorative of the Washington Centennial in 1889 was presented to him. The presentation speech was made Dr. Austin Scott, president of Rutgers college, New Brunswick, N. J. The address of welcome was delivered by Woodrew Wilson, Ph., D., LL. D., of Princeton university.

INSURANCE SWINDLERS HELD.

Three Men Indicted in Philadelphia for Palming Off a Dead Body.

Philadelphia, May 17.—The grand jury has found a true bill against Jeptha D. Howe, Marion Hedgepath and Hermann Mudgett, alias H. H. Holmes, charging them with conspiring to cheat and defraud the Fidelity Mutual Life association of Philadelphia out of $10,000. This is the case which attracted much attention a few months ago by reason of the alleged fraud perpetrated by the defendants in palming off a dead body found in a house on Callowhill street as that of Benjamin Pitezel, whose life was insured in the Fidelity association for $10,000. Pitezel is said to be alive.

DWYER KEEPS BANQUET

It Cost Him £1,150, However, To Save the Horse.

Probably Fortunate in Getting Off So Easy—Denied That It Is Unsportsmanlike To Run the Americans Up on the Sale Business—English Opinion of Simms.

London, May 17.—When Banquet was put up for sale immediately after the selling plate race was ended yesterday, the price rose by bids of twenty pounds until an offer of a thousand pounds was made, when there was a pause. Soon, however, the bidding was resumed and continued until a bid of £1,510 was made, at which price the horse was bought in by Mr. Dwyer. The amount paid is almost without precedent and rendered the race six times more valuable to the second horse than to the winner.

Damper on British Sports.

Banquet's victory put a damper upon the crowing of the English sporting fraternity over the defeats of American horses, especially over their jubilant utterances after the defeat of Stonenell when Michael F. Dwyer's horse finished sixth, with Simms up, and was bought in by Hoodless, the owner of Crawley, the second horse.

Comment on Stonenell.

Sporting Life, in its comment on the defeat of Stonenell says: "When fairly in the dip the pinch came. It was both instructive and amusing to see, when pitted in a finish against such a master of the art as Cannon, how bunched up and helpless to assist his mount the darky was, except by needless punishment with the whip. The race was unlucky in another sense. Dwyer lost his horse, which was claimed by Mr. Hoodless, the claim surely being worth £1,000. Stonenell is the finest specimen of the powerful thoroughbred horse that set foot on the flat this day. It will be instructive to see how he fares under English training."

Have Dwyer and Croker Split?

The Globe revives the rumors of differences between Michael F. Dwyer and Richard Croker. Their horses for the past few days have been exercised in different parts of Newmarket Heath. Their colored jockey Simms divides his attention between the two American horse owners.

The Sportsman on the Race.

Commenting on the performance of Mr. Dwyer's Banquet the Sportsman says: "Simms' show on Banquet was totally different from what it was when he was when he was on Stonenell. He played circus tricks, it is true, pulling back and popping in again, and 300 yards from the finish he contrived to drop out and look as if he was beaten. The ring was thus inspired to increase their offers, but when, after fooling the bookmakers to the top of their bent, Simms concluded it was time to settle down to business. He had for the first time to show how he could sit down against an English jockey, for Loates was up beside him on Drogo. To the astonishment of many, probably Loates especially, Simms was fully equal to the occasion. Doubtless the horse had tons in hands, but he yet might well have been beaten after being messed about as he had been had his jockey been incapable of collecting him when he wanted."

Not Unsportsmanlike.

The Sportsman denies that it is unsportsmanlike to run the Americans up on the sale business. It says that if this is unsportsmanlike it is the old, vicious practice of entering as a selling plater a horse that is not such and gambling on him. Men who do this must count the cost. Mr. Dyer may thank his stars that he got Banquet for £1,500, with the big handicaps at Doncaster and Manchester virtually at his mercy. If they had been mentioned at the sale it would have needed £3,000 to buy Banquet. It cannot be said, however, that the Americans have gained great kudos for running their best horses in selling races. Though it may be profitable, thanks to our stranga stupidity, it is not calculated to make the eagle plume his feathers.

REBELS REPULSED.

Goverment Victory Repulsed at Cristo, Cuba.

Madrid, May 17.—The Imparcial has a dispatch from Havana stating that a body of insurgents attacked the town of Cristo, two hours distant from Santiago de Cuba. A column of government troops under command of General Gasco went to the relief of the town, and a sanguinary fight resulted. The troops finally won a victory, driving off the rebels with a heavy loss.

The bank clearings of the south for the last week reported show an increase of 12.5 per cent. over the corresponding week of 1894. There is a very marked increase in the number of industrial enterprises that are being organized.

Afire on a Bicycle.

The rather astonishing sight of a cyclist with his coat-tails on fire was presented to those who were on West Seventh street last evening shortly after 7. The rider had just crossed Plainfield avenue going toward Park avenue when his coat pocket began to smoke and soon the papers with which it was filled were blazing, and a moment later the coat itself caught. The rider went on apparently unconscious of his danger, with the flame streaming out behind, presenting a very unusual appearance to the onlookers. The burning papers fell out and attracted the man's attention; he dismounted and extinguished the rest of the fire.

To Have Uniforms.

Those interested in baseball met in the Y. M. C. A. Building last night, and reports were made showing that sufficient money had been subscribed to warrant the purchase of uniforms. ST. MARY'S DRAMATICS.

Successful Termination of "Hickory Farm" and Organization of a Permanent Society.

At the conclusion of the entertainment in the parochial school last night, those who had participated in the Hickory Farm and other entertainments of St. Mary's parishioners, sat down to a collation in the Lyceum hall, over which M. J. Casher presided as master of ceremonies. A brief and happy speech was made by Rev. F. J. Murphy, after which St. Mary's Dramatic Association was formed by electing C. J. Ward as temporary president and Father Murphy as secretary. A permanent organization will be made later, the objects of which are to provide entertainments during the winter months. After the refreshments, the floor was cleared and dancing enjoyed by those present.

After the programme dancing was enjoyed.

There are Shoes and Shoes.

Mr. Doane, of the firm of Doane & Edsall, says that he always makes it a point when buying goods to see that they have the wearing qualities, no matter what the price; another thing in advertising he never misrepresents by naming a fictitious price on a shoe, for the sake of making a big cut at times of special sales, as some unreliable dealers do. It is to these two things, more than anything else, he lays the steady increase each year in the business of the firm. Special low prices will prevail with them tomorrow. See their new ad today.

—Leggett's witch-hazel soap at 10 cents a bar is the latest.

Cartridge Company exhibit at the Sportmen's Exposition in Madison Square Garden, through the New York Stock Exchange. They were shown a species of bears and bulls that were no less interesting to them than the Rocky Mountain kind which are so familiar to them.

HOW A STEER IS CUT UP.

The Chicago Trust Has Paralyzed the Whole Meat Industry.

Careful study of the accompanying diagram of a prime steer as it reaches the wholesale butcher from either of the local establishments of the Chicago "Big Three," or their New York allies, will clear up many statements that have been published since the cattle combine put the screws on and made beef dearer.

"Such beef as I handle," said a dealer, "will weigh 800 pounds, that is two sides will weigh 400 pounds each. This is dressed beef, all of which is cut up and sold. There is no waste. The fat and bones are sold. Such extras as you see on the butchers' stalls as brains, tongues, liver, tripe, oxtails, etc., do not come to us as dressed beef. These are special lines handled by special men.

"There is a steer," and the dealer pointed through the glass door of a refrigerator, "that weighed 800 pounds when laid on these scales to-day. I paid 9 cents a pound for it. Don't believe these 11 and 12 cents stories, for they are not true. It cost me $72 at the warehouse. I hauled it here, must pay my men to cut it up and deliver it and all that. What will I get for what cost me $72? Just $75.26.

"A steer goes into an abbatoir on the hoof and every ounce of him goes out a commercial commodity. A 1,200 pound steer will net 800 pounds of beef. The hide is sold to the tanners. A limited number of tails go to dealers in ox tails and special dealers buy the tongues, which are sold to delicatessens here, and in Chicago go to the canners of 'lunch tongues.' There is a limited demand for brains. All livers find a ready sale, and the lining of the paunch, known as tripe, is growing in such favor that it is all disposed of to dealers who pickle it.

"From the pure fat is extracted the highest quality of oleo oil. This is generally exported to Holland, where it enters into the make up of the gilt edged Dutch butter that commands fancy prices in England. From other fats come the lower grades of oleo oil. From selected bones are secured, by boiling, gelatine, which is the basis of all cheap jellies and marmalades. Stearine, used as a base of chewing gum and for many other purposes, is the product left from the process of pressing out oleo oil.

"All hoofs are boiled, and the valuable commodity known as neat's foot oil is secured. The horns are sold to manufacturers of combs and fancy goods. The hoofs after boiling are also used in the making of horn ornaments. Everything that is left, blood, entrails, etc., is made into fertilizing material, not the least valuable commodity turned out of the abbatoir. I have no positive figures, but I believe that the 400 pounds of 'offal,' the term used as applying to everything except the actual beef, will net the killer from $20 to $22. The wholesale slaughterer does not get any of the worst of it at any stage of the game."

68 EX-BANKERS IN ONE JAIL.

Remarkable Colony of Prisoners in Kings County Penitentiary.

Former bank officers to the number of sixty-eight, all serving sentences in one penitentiary! That is the remarkable fact which will appear in the forthcoming report of Warden Hayes, of the Kings County Penitentiary.

To be more explicit, there are now within the cold gray and black walls of that institution seven men who, when arrested for embezzlement of depositors' funds, were presidents of national banks; twelve men who, when rounded up in a career of crime by the strong arm of the law, were honored and respected cashiers of national banks, and forty-nine other men who were trusted clerks or tellers in banks of the same class.

The Kings County Penitentiary is one of the five penal institutions in the country which, under contract with the general government, keep in confinement all prisoners convicted of felonies by United States courts. The other prisons that board Uncle Sam's lawbreakers are that at Albany, the Erie County Penitentiary, near Buffalo; the House of Correction, at Detroit, and the most impregnable prison in the world, the Minnesota State Penitentiary, at Stillwater, Minn.

The percentage of former bank officials at Albany, Erie, Detroit and Stillwater will average the same as at the Kings County institution. The total number is equally divided between the five prisons. There are at present 405 "boarders" at Kings, of whom sixty-eight are from banks. The total number of bank defaulters, embezzlers and wreckers formerly connected with national banks alone will, therefore, approximate 340, or about one-sixth of the total number of Federal prisoners in confinement for felonies.

"Yes," said the warden, "I could fit a bank out with a president and a full force down to, but not including, the janitor. It is a remarkable fact, which I have verified by looking over the records, that although there have been confined in this prison since it began to receive United States prisoners, twelve or fifteen years ago, a total of 130 bank officers and clerks, we have never as yet had a janitor or watchman or runaway messenger."

Good people shine from afar, like snowy mountains; bad people are not seen, like arrows shot by night.

Lead others, not by violence, but by law and equity.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

ELLIOTT WILL CASE ENDED.

Settlement of an Estate of $75,000.

An important will case was decided in the Orphans Court in New Brunswick yesterday by Judge Rice that will interest Plainfielders.

Mrs. Elizabeth Elliott who formerly lived on Park avenue this city died November 2, 1894, leaving four children. Before her death she secured Justice Storms of New Market to draw her will. She left considerable of her real and personal property to her children and a legacy of $1 a day for life to her stepdaughter, Mrs. Anna L. Silveria of Brooklyn.

The will was offered for probate Nov. 23, 1894. At the same time Lawyer George DeMeza filed a caveat against the admission of the will to probate for the following reasons: First—That at the time of making of said alleged last will said Elizabeth Elliott was not of sound mind, memory and understanding, sufficient to make and publish a will and testament. Second—That the making of said alleged will was procured through undue influence. Third—That said paper, purporting to be the last will and testament, presented for probate, was not the last will and testament of the said Elizabeth Elliott.

Since the time the will was offered, the case has been in the court. Foley & Powell of New York and Alan Strong counsel for the Pennsylvania Railroad Company were in opposition to the breaking of the will and the case was very strongly contested. Lawyer DeMeza argued the case alone and worked hard for the children.

Judge Rice rendered his decision yesterday and decided that the will be set aside, and declared the same invalid. This gives to the children the entire real and personal property of the late Elizabeth Elliott, which will amount to about $75,000, and includes the Lakewood Hotel at Lakewood. The children are now living in Dunellen.

Runaway Averted.

The horse attached to the delivery wagon of H. A. He ran on to the sidewalk and threw himself, and by quick action the driver soon subdued his fractiousness.

Broken Panes.

The glass in four windows of a West Front street trolley car were shattered yesterday afternoon at 5 by the protecting boards in the sewer trenches lapping over too far in front of Music Hall entrance.

CHEAPER COAL.

Present Reduction in Price Not Likely to Last Long.

The exclusive announcement in The Daily Press of yesterday that the coal dealers of the city had reduced prices on all domestic grades of coal, was greeted with many enthusiastic remarks by householders, and many are placing orders for their Winter supply.

A prominent dealer last night told a Daily Press reporter that the wholesale price in this city was always 25 to 50 cents a ton more than at tidewater, and for that reason they were unable to sell as low as Elizabeth dealers. This he accounted for by the fact that Elizabeth has two railroads, while Plainfield has only one, and therefore local merchants never receive the benefits from competitive freight rates such as Elizabeth dealers are favored with.

The present reduction in Plainfield is not likely to hold long, as the margin for profit is very small.

PLAINFIELD LAWYERS LEAD.

Union County Litigation Seems to Centre in Plainfield, the Logical County Seat.

Judge VanSyckel finished the trial of civil jury cases in the Supreme and Circuit Court issues at Elizabeth yesterday. The Court calendar discloses that a large part of the legal business of the county comes from Plainfield. There were 44 cases on the printed list, in many of which Plainfield parties were interested. The local lawyers appearing as attorneys for either plaintiff or defendant in these suits were the following:

Reed & Coddington appeared in eleven cases, Craig A. Marsh in five, Hance & Powers in three, W. R. Codington in two, and George W. DeMeza in one.

More than half the cases actually tried originated in this city.

The County Fair Tonight.

In "The County Fair" tonight in Music Hall the spectator may enjoy admirable views of rural quietude and many deft touches of New England character and honesty. The final scene, depicting the horse race, is said to be one of the most stirring pieces of stage realism and ingenuity ever seen in this country.

THE EXPLOITS OF BRIGADIER GERARD.

HOW THE KING HELD THE BRIGADIER

By A. Conan Doyle

(Copyright, 1895, by Bacheller, Johnson & Bacheller.)

III.

Heavens, how I ran! The wind buffeted my face and buzzed in my nostrils. The rain pringled upon my skin and hissed past my ears. I stumbled into holes. I tripped over bushes. I fell among brambles. I was torn and breathless and bleeding. My tongue was like leather, my feet like lead, and my heart beating like a kettle-drum. Still I ran, and I ran, and I ran.

But I had not lost my head, my friends. Everything was done with a purpose. Our fugitives always made for the coast. I was determined to go Ireland and the more so as I had told Beaumont the opposite. I would fly to the north, and they would seek me in the south. Perhaps you will ask me how I could tell which was which on such a night. I answer that it was by the wind. I had observed in prison that it came from the north, and so, as long as I kept my face to it, I was going in the right direction.

Well, I was rushing along in this fashion when, suddenly, I saw two yellow lights shining out of the darkness in front of me. I paused for a moment, uncertain what I should do. I was still in my hussar uniform, you understand, and it seemed to be that the very first thing that I should aim at was to get some dress which should not betray me. If these lights came from a cottage, it was probable enough that I might find what I wanted there. I approached, therefore, feeling very sorry that I had left my iron bar behind; for

"PERHAPS I CAN BE OF SOME ASSISTANCE TO YOU, MADAME."

I was determined to fight to the death before I should be retaken.

But very soon I found that there was no cottage there. The lights were two lamps hung upon each side of a carriage, and by their glare I saw that a broad road lay in front of me. Crouching among the bushes, I observed that there were two horses to the equipage, that a small postboy was standing at their heads and that one of the wheels was lying in the road beside him. I can see them now, my friends: the steaming creatures, the stunted lad with his hands to their bits, and the big, black coach, all shining with the rain, and balanced upon its three wheels. As I looked, the window was lowered, and a pretty little face under a bonnet peeped out from it.

"What shall I do?" the lady cried to the postboy in a voice of despair. "Sir Charles is certainly lost, and I shall have to spend the night upon the moor."

"Perhaps I can be of some assistance to madame," said I, scrambling out from among the bushes into the glare of the lamps. A woman in distress is a sacred thing to me, and this one was beautiful. You must not forget that, although I was a colonel, I was only eight-and-twenty years of age.

My word, how she screamed, and how the postboy stared! You will understand that, after the long race in the darkness, with my busby broken in, my face smeared with dirt, and my uniform all stained and torn with brambles, I was not entirely the sort of gentleman whom one would choose to meet in the middle of a lonely moor. Still, after the first surprise, she soon understood that I was her very humble servant, and I could even read in her pretty eyes that my manner and bearing had not failed to produce its impression upon her.

"I am sorry to have startled you, madame," said I. "I chanced to overhear your remark, and I could not refrain from offering you my assistance." I bowed as I spoke. You know my bow, and can realize what its effect was upon the lady.

"I am much indebted to you, sir," said she. "We have had a terrible journey since we left Tavistock. Finally, one of our wheels came off, and here we are helpless in the middle of a moor. My husband, Sir Charles, has gone on to get help, but I much fear that he must have lost his way."

I was about to attempt some consolation when I saw beside the lady a black traveling coat, faced with astrakhan, which her companion must have left behind him. It was exactly what I needed to conceal my uniform. It is true that I felt very much like a highway robber, but then, what would you have? Necessity has no law, and I was in an enemy's camp.

"I presume, madame, that this is your husband's coat," I remarked. "You will, I am sure, forgive me, if I am compelled to"—— I pulled it through the window as I spoke.

I could not bear to see the look of surprise and fear and disgust which came over her face.

"Oh, I have been mistaken in you," she cried. "You came to rob me then, and not to help me. You have the bearing of a gentleman, and yet you steal my husband's coat."

"Madame," said I, "I beg that you will not condemn me until you know everything. It is quite necessary that I should take this coat, but if you will have the goodness to tell me who it is who is fortunate enough to be your husband, I shall see that the coat is sent back to him."

Her face softened a little, though she still tried to look severe. "My husband," she answered, "is Sir Charles Meredith, and he is traveling to Dartmoor Prison upon important government business. I only ask you, sir, to go upon your way, and to take nothing which belongs to him."

"There is only one thing which belongs to him which I covet," said I.

"And you have taken it from the carriage," she cried.

"No," I answered. "It still remains there."

She laughed in her frank English way.

"If instead of paying me compliments, you were to return my husband's coat"—— she began.

"Madame," I answered, "what you ask

IT WAS THE LAST THING I SHOULD HAVE EITHER EXPECTED OR CHOSEN.

is quite impossible. If you will allow me to come into the carriage, I will explain to you how necessary this coat is to me."

Heaven knows into what foolishness I might have plunged myself had we not, at this instant, heard a faint hallo in the distance, which was answered by a shout from the little postboy. In the rain and the darkness I saw a lantern some distance from us, but approaching rapidly.

"I am sorry, madame, that I am forced to leave you," said I. "You can assure your husband that I shall take every care of his coat." Hurried as I was, I ventured to pause a moment to salute the lady's hand, which she snatched through the window with an admirable pretense of being offended at my presumption. Then, as the lantern was quite close to me, and the postboy seemed inclined to interfere with my flight, I tucked my precious overcoat under my arm, and dashed off into the darkness.

And now I set myself to the task of putting as broad a stretch of moor between the prison and myself as the remaining hours of darkness would allow. Setting my face to the wind once more, I ran until I fell from exhaustion. Then, after five minutes of panting among the heather, I made another start, until again my knees gave way beneath me. I was young and hard, with muscles of steel, and a frame which had been toughened by twelve years of camp and field. Thus I was able to keep up this wild flight for another three hours, during which I still guided myself, you understand, by keeping the wind in my face. At the end of that time I calculated that I had put nearly twenty miles between the prison and myself. Day was about to break, so I crouched down among the heather upon the top of one of those small hills which abound in that country, with the intention of hiding myself until nightfall. It was no new thing for me to sleep in the wind and the rain, so, wrapping myself up in my thick, warm cloak, I soon sank into a doze.

But it was not a refreshing slumber. I tossed and tumbled amid a series of vile dreams, in which everything seemed to go wrong with me. At last, I remember, I was charging an unshaken square of Hungarian Grenadiers, with a single squadron upon spent horses, just as I did at Elchingen. I stood in my stirrups to shout "Vive l'Empereur!" and as I did so, there came the answering roar from my hussars, "Vive l'Empereur!" I sprang from my rough bed, with the words still ringing in my ears, and then, as I rubbed my eyes, and wondered if I were mad, the same cry came again, five thousand voices in one long-drawn yell. I looked out from my screen of brambles, and saw in the clear light of morning the very last thing that I should have either expected or chosen.

It was Dartmoor Prison! There it stretched, grim and hideous, within a furlong of me. Had I run on for a few more minutes in the dark I would have butted my busby against the wall. I was so taken aback at the sight, that I could scarcely realize what had happened. Then it all became clear to me, and I struck my head with my hands in my despair. The wind had veered from north to south during the night, and I, keeping my face always toward it, had run ten miles out and ten miles in, winding up where I had started. When I thought of my hurry, my falls, my mad rushing and jumping, all ending in this, it seemed so absurd, that my grief changed suddenly to amusement, and I fell among the brambles and laughed and laughed, until my sides were sore. Then I rolled myself up in my cloak and considered seriously what I should do.

HEROIC WOMEN.

Their Struggle Against a Common and Merciless Enemy.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

Woman's Heroism is not evinced by fearlessness or enterprise in time of danger, but her courage and fortitude are unquestionable in time of suffering.

Think of the woman who smiles and tries to make those around her cheerful, while she is racked with the excruciating tortures of womb trouble.

Think of one who, day by day, begs her physician to help her, while the torture of tortures could not add to her misery.

Does she yield? No! She endures her agonies, and meets her friends with cheerfulness.

This is woman's heroism, and few men realize how prevalent they are. Physicians rarely render relief in such cases.

After twenty years of success, with ever-increasing popularity, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is, to-day, woman's only sure and safe refuge from inflammation, ulceration, falling and displacement of the womb, ovarian trouble, leucorrhœa, painful and suppressed menstruations, kidney trouble, nervous prostration, and all manner of distressing and life-sapping female diseases.

"O my sisters, believe what is told you of this wonderful medicine! Before I took it I had falling of the womb and leucorrhœa. My womb came down so badly I could not walk across the floor; the pain was excruciating; now all is so changed, and I am so happy. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has saved me from a life of misery. Don't, don't suffer, I say, when a cure is so easily obtained."—MRS. WILLIAM HOWE, 168 Antoin Street, Detroit, Mich.

SKETCHES OF LINCOLN.

The Old Story of How He Fell In Love.

DESCRIPTION OF ANNE RUTLEDGE.

Young Men Who Laid Siege to the Heart of This Attractive Maiden—Case of John McNamar—Death of Anne—Effect on Lincoln's Mind.

[From "The Life of Lincoln" by William H. Herndon and Jesse W. Weik. Copyright, 1888, by Jesse W. Weik. Copyright, 1892, by D. Appleton & Co.]

VIII.

Since the days when in Indiana Lincoln sat on the river's bank with little Kate Roby, dangling his bare feet in the water, there has been no hint in these pages of tender relations with any one of the opposite sex. Now we approach in timely order the "grand passion" of his life—a romance of much reality, the memory of which threw a melancholy shade over the remainder of his days. For the first time our hero falls in love. The courtship with Anne Rutledge and her untimely death form the saddest page in Mr. Lincoln's history.

James Rutledge, the father of this interesting girl, was one of the founders of New Salem, having come there from Kentucky in 1829. Besides his business interests in the store and mill at New Salem he kept the tavern where Lincoln came to board in 1833. His family, besides himself and wife, consisted of nine children, three of whom were born in Kentucky, the remaining six in Illinois. Anne, the subject of this chapter, was the third child. She was a beautiful girl, and by her winning ways attached people to her so firmly that she soon became the most popular young lady in the village. She was quick of apprehension, industrious and an excellent housekeeper. She had a moderate education, but was not cultured except by contrast with those around her. At every "quilting" Anne was a necessary adjunct, and her nimble fingers drove the needle more swiftly than any one else. Lincoln used to escort her to and from these quilting bees, and on one occasion even went into the house—where men were considered out of place—and sat by her side as she worked on the quilt.

He whispered into her ear the old, old story. Her heart throbbed, and her soul was thrilled with a joy as old as the world itself. Her fingers momentarily lost their skill. In her ecstasy she made such irregular and uneven stitches that the older and more sedate women noted it, and the owner of the quilt, until a few years ago still retaining it as a precious souvenir, pointed out the memorable stitches to such persons as visited her.

Handsome and Good.

"Miss Rutledge," says a lady who knew her, "had auburn hair, blue eyes, fair complexion. She was pretty, slightly slender, but in everything a good hearted young woman. She was about 5 feet 2 inches high and weighed in the neighborhood of 120 pounds. She was beloved by all who knew her. She died, as it were, of grief. In speaking of her death and her grave Lincoln once said to me, 'My heart lies buried there.'"

Before narrating the details of Lincoln's courtship with Miss Rutledge it is proper to mention briefly a few facts that occurred before their attachment began.

About the same time that Lincoln drifted into New Salem there came in from the eastern states John McNeil, a young man of enterprise and great activity, seeking his fortune in the west. He went to work at once and within a short time had accumulated by commendable effort a comfortable amount of property. Within three years he owned a farm and a half interest with Samuel Hill in the leading store. He had good capacity for business and was a valuable addition to that already pretentious village—New Salem. It was while living at James Cameron's house that this plucky and industrious young business man first saw Anne Rutledge. McNeil fell deeply in love with the schoolgirl—she was then only 17—and paid her the usual unremitting attentions young lovers of that age had done before him and are still doing today. His partner in the store, Samuel Hill, a young man of equal force of character, who afterward amassed a comfortable fortune and also wielded no little influence as a local politician, laid siege to the heart of this same attractive maiden, but he yielded up the contest early. Anne rejected him, and he dropped from the race. McNeil had clear sailing from this time forward. After several years McNeil, having disposed of his interest in the store to Hill, determined to return to New York, his native state, for a visit. He had accumulated up to this time, as near as we can learn, $10,000 or possibly $12,000. Before leaving he made to Anne a singular revelation. He told her the name McNeil was an assumed one; that his real name was McNamar.

McNamar, after much vexatious delay, finally reached his birthplace in New York, finding his father in the decline of years and health. He provided for his immediate needs, and by his assiduous attentions undertook to atone for the years of his neglect, but all to no purpose. The old gentleman gradually faded from the world and early one winter morning crossed the great river. McNamar was thus left to settle up the few unfinished details of his father's estate and to provide for the pressing needs of the family. His detention necessitated a letter to Anne explaining the nature and cause of the delay. Other letters followed, but each succeeding one growing less ardent in tone and more formal in phraseology than its predecessor Anne began to lose faith. Had his love gradually died away like the morning wind? was a question she often asked herself. She had stood firm under fire before, but now her heart grew sick with hope deferred. At last the correspondence ceased altogether.

At this point we are favored with the introduction of the ungainly Lincoln as a suitor for the hand of Miss Rutledge. Lincoln had learned of McNamar's strange conduct, and no doubt when he began to pay her attentions she was the most attractive young lady whom up to that time he had ever met. She was not only modest and winning in her ways and full of good, womanly common sense, but withal refined in contrast with the uncultured people who surrounded both herself and Lincoln. She had a secret, too, and a sorrow—the unexplained and painful absence of McNamar—which no doubt made her all the more interesting to him whose spirit was often even more melancholy than her own.

McNamar seems to have considered Lincoln's bashfulness as proof against the alluring charms of Miss Rutledge or anybody else, for he continues:

"Mr. Lincoln was not to my knowledge paying particular attention to any of the young ladies of my acquaintance when I left my home in New York. There was no rivalry between us on that score. On the contrary, I had every reason to believe him a warm personal friend. But by [illegible] left so far behind in the race [illegible] deem my chances worthy of [illegible] at this time forward he made [illegible] des to that imperishable fame w[illegible]y fills a world."

A Pathetic Event.

Lincoln began to court Miss Rutledge in dead earnest. As he pleaded and pressed his cause the Rutledges and all New Salem encouraged his suit. McNamar's unexplained absence and apparent neglect furnished outsiders with all the arguments needed to encourage Lincoln and convince Anne. Although the attachment was growing and daily becoming an intense and mutual passion, the young lady remained firm and almost inflexible. She was passing through another fire.

A long struggle with her feelings followed, but at length the inevitable moment came. She consented to have Lincoln, provided he gave her time to write to McNamar and obtain his release from her pledge. The slow moving mails carried her tender letter to New York. Days and weeks, which to the ardent Lincoln must have seemed painfully long, passed, but the answer never came. In a half hearted way she turned to Lincoln, and her looks told him that he had won. She accepted his proposal. Now that they were engaged he told her what she already knew—that he was poverty itself. She must grant him time to gather up funds to live on until he had completed his law studies. After this trifling delay "nothing on God's footstool," argued the emphatic lover, could keep them apart. To this the thoughtful Anne consented. To one of her brothers she said, "As soon as his studies are completed we are to be married." But the ghost of another love would often rise unbidden before her. Within her bosom raged the conflict which finally undermined her health. Late in the summer she took to her bed. A fever was burning in her head. Day by day she sank until all hope was banished. During the latter days of her sickness her physician had forbidden visitors to enter her room, prescribing absolute quiet. But her brother relates that she kept inquiring for Lincoln so continuously, at times demanding to see him, that the family at last sent for him. On his arrival at her bedside the door was closed, and he was left alone with her. What was said, what vows and revelations were made during this sad interview, were known only to him and the dying girl. A few days afterward she became unconscious and remained so until her death on the 25th day of August, 1835. She was buried in what is known as the Concord graveyard, about seven miles northwest of the town of Petersburg.

The most astonishing and sad sequel to this courtship was the disastrous effect of Miss Rutledge's death on Mr. Lincoln's mind. It operated strangely on one of his calm and stoical makeup. As he returned from the visit to the bedside of Miss Rutledge he stopped at the house of a friend, who relates that his face showed signs of no little mental agony. "He was very much distressed," is the language of this friend, "and I was not surprised when it was rumored subsequently that his reason was in danger." One of Miss Rutledge's brothers says: "The effect upon Mr. Lincoln's mind was terrible. He became plunged in despair, and many of his friends feared that reason would desert her throne. His extraordinary emotions were regarded as strong evidence of the existence of the tenderest relations between himself and the deceased." The truth is Mr. Lincoln was strangely wrought up over the sad ending of the affair. He had fits of great mental depression and wandered up and down the river and into the woods woefully abstracted, at times in the deepest distress. If, when we read what the many credible persons who knew him at the time tell us, we do not conclude that he was deranged, we must admit that he walked on that sharp and narrow line which divides sanity from insanity. To one friend he complained that the thought "that the snows and rains fall upon her grave filled him with indescribable grief." He was watched with especial vigilance during damp, stormy days under the belief that dark and gloomy weather might produce such a depression of spirits as to induce him to take his own life. His condition finally became so alarming his friends consulted together and sent him to the house of a kind friend, Bowlin Greene, who lived in a secluded spot hidden by the hills a mile south of town. Here he remained for some weeks under the care and ever watchful eye of this noble friend, who gradually brought him back to reason, or at least a realization of his true condition. In the years that followed Mr. Lincoln never forgot the kindness of Greene through those weeks of suffering and peril. In 1842, when the latter died and Lincoln was selected by the Masonic lodge to deliver the funeral oration, he broke down in the midst of his address. "His voice was choked with deep emotion. He stood a few moments while his lips quivered in the effort to form the words of fervent praise he sought to utter, and the tears ran down his yellow and shriveled cheeks. Every heart was hushed at the spectacle. After repeated efforts he found it impossible to speak and strode away, bitterly sobbing, to the widow's carriage, and was driven from the scene."

"Immortality."

It was shortly after this that Dr. Jason Duncan placed in Lincoln's hands a poem called "Immortality." The piece starts out with the line, "Oh, why should the spirit of mortal be proud!" Lincoln's love for this poem has certainly made it immortal. He committed these lines to memory, and any reference to or mention of Miss Rutledge would suggest them, as if "to celebrate a grief which lay with continual heaviness on his heart." There is no question that from this time forward Mr. Lincoln's spells of melancholy became more intense than ever. In fact, a tinge of this desperate feeling of sadness followed him to Springfield. He himself was somewhat superstitious about it and in 1840-1 wrote to Dr. Drake, a celebrated physician in Cincinnati, describing his mental condition in a long letter. Dr. Drake responded, saying substantially, "I cannot prescribe in your case without a personal interview." Joshua F. Speed, to whom Lincoln showed the letter addressed to Dr. Drake, writing to me from Louisville Nov. 30, 1866, says, "I think he (Lincoln) must have informed Dr. Drake of his early love for Miss Rutledge, as there was a part of the letter which he would not read." It is shown by the declaration of Mr. Lincoln himself, made to a fellow member of the legislature within two years after Anne Rutledge's death, that, "although he seemed to others to enjoy life rapturously, yet when alone he was so overcome by mental depression he never dared to carry a pocketknife."

Lincoln said, "History is not history unless it is the truth."

A BACHELOR'S COMPLAINT ABOUT AMERICAN WOMEN.

He Finds Something Essentially Faulty in the Social Relationship of American Husbands and Wives, the Horrid Thing.

Now, I want to say just this: Being a bachelor and the kind of a bachelor I am, I see more wives than do most married men. If this were not so, I might not have an objection to them as a class. I might think, as some of my married male friends do, that even if my own wife (suppose I had one, I mean, now) were disappointing to me as a companion and distressing to me because of her unwarranted exactions, my married neighbors may be more lucky. Their wives may be their chums and companions; their wives may not demand a slave's attention, a father's indulgence, a lover's unquestioning devotion, and a rich and doting uncle's unstinted allowance and expect nothing in return.

I visit many homes where I know the husband's business affairs and see the wife's attitude and I feel myself equipped to discuss the question of American wives better, being a bachelor of a somewhat extended and varied acquaintance, than I could if I were married.

There is something essentially faulty in the social relationship of American husbands and wives, which relationship is brought about wholly by the assumption on the part of the wives of rights, privileges and exemptions? These assumptions are of so long standing in America, and have been so meekly and uncomplainingly acquiesced in by the husband that they are looked upon, I suspect, by the wives, as vested rights to question which hints at anarchy. Now, I do not know about that. The husband is bound by every obligation, legal and moral, to give his wife a home and such material comforts as he is able to supply to himself also. Please, observe that "also." Is it not a fact that the American wife of any man above the grade of common, unskilled labor demands—even expects without demanding—comforts and luxuries to which the husband could not also indulge without incurring debts he could not pay if he is less than a merchant or capitalist, and perhaps inviting bankruptcy through extravagance and neglect of business?

Beside sharing in such comforts as the husband's home and board affords, the American wife at once assumes the right to the luxury of idleness. That is a very great deal. It means an additional cost for one or more servants, which cost is imposed upon the husband's earnings, be they large or small. If they are large, I have no complaint. If those earnings are small, then surely the husband has a complaint—but he seldom makes it.

But this is only the beginning. In matters of luxury the American wife not only indulges at his expense in many more than does the husband, but frequently she indulges in many when, and again, therefore, he can indulge in none. What right has she to this? Take the luxury of fine dressing, for example. I know a man—I shall make a homely example—who before his marriage was a noticeably well dressed man. He cared for well made, fresh, nice clothes in a perfectly rational way, and artistically. Now he wears trousers which bag at the knee pitifully, and his coat shines at the elbows and shoulders. He holds a responsible place, and has for years, in a big commercial firm, and I know his salary is not less than $4,000 a year, and I should not be surprised to hear that it was more. I dined with him the other night at his house, and inviting me he said, as he always does, "Don't take the trouble to dress, old man; we'll just dine informally."

Now, he knows perfectly well that it is no trouble for me to dress in the evening, and that I did so nearly every day, and, to tell the truth, this letter was first suggested to me by my conviction that his evening dress suit is in a pretty bad way and he doesn't feel that he can afford the expense of another.

That is one side of the picture; here is the other: Madam appeared in a pretty dainty dinner gown, which she told me was new before I'd been in the house five minutes. I've known her since she was a child.

I'm talking now about the typical American wife of a man who can be said to be in comfortable circumstances by the standards of the best class of salaried men. She is no more extravagant, thoughtless, exacting or unreasonable than the average of her class, was well brought up, helped her mother keep her father's nose to the grindstone always, is bright, good enough natured, if you please, and of course brought her husband not a dollar, for she and her sister and her mother had not left her father a dollar to settle on her. I do not know, thank God, just what the dress I referred to cost, but I know its price would cover my friend's expenditure for clothes for a year. The dinner was good, as she judged it, no doubt, but she did not know what a single dish was to be until it was served.

Now, there is that man earning four or five thousand dollars a year, working from nine in the morning until six in the afternoon fifty weeks a year, dressing like a $40-a-month clerk, not saving a penny, supporting his wife in idle luxury at the cost of probably two-thirds, if not probably three-fourths of his earnings, and she would look in big eyed amazement at any one who should suggest that she was unwarrantably, heartlessly, unreasonably exacting, and enjoying privileges to which she had no manner of right whatever. Furthermore she would call the man a brute who told her so. Is she unique as an American's wife? Well, I rather think not! At any rate I will confidently leave it for married men readers to say.

Let a man overcome anger by love, let him overcome the greedy by liberality, the liar by truth.

Life, you and I have stood now face to face
For many years.
Look deep into my eyes. There you will trace
Your myriad tears;
Touch you my cheek and see its rounded place
A drawn look wears.
Ah, life! for me you have left but little space
For patient cares.

Dreams, we have spent, ah! many an hour
Of heaven sweet rest
Together. Wrapped in your most secret bower
With vision blest.
I've seen the budding of Love's sweetest flower
Within my breast.
His golden petals rained a precious shower
At your behest.

Love, we have lived through many a day
Of happiness.
When Life did, with her sombre gray
My heart depress—
When she her tempests loosed, I sought your ray
Through storm and stress,
And found you, faithful Love a power always
My soul to bless!

And soon, oh! unknown Death, our hands will meet
In loving wise.
Oft in the hopeless nights I hear your feet,
I see your eyes.
Grant, when my soul is brought her summons sweet
To distant skies,
That your dread form my restless life will greet
In fair disguise.
And love and dreams—and pain, long borne with me will flee,
Where silence lies;

A WOMAN'S PARADISE.

She Is Boss In Alaska and Attends to Politics and the Family Government.

Mrs. de Vore, principal of the Presbyterian school at Sitka, Alaska, who is visiting in the States, recently said to a correspondent:

"Alaska is essentially a woman's country. She is 'boss' there without the shadow of a doubt. If there is a political meeting to be held the wife tells her husband to go and catch some fish or do the chores; then she sees to it that two or three dogs are left where they can get at the supper dishes, and off she goes to pass upon the affairs of State, after having carefully locked the doors of the house.

"When she returns she knows that her good man will be patiently waiting for her and that the dogs will have cleaned the dishes. To the Alaskan mind this method of cleaning dishes saves a lot of bother, but it has its drawbacks to the average American, especially if one is urged by the lady of the house, who may happen to meet you on her way home, to take dinner with her.

"The men are absolutely ruled by the women. For instance, a certain woman's husband desires to take a canoe and go fishing. You would naturally suppose that all there would be about it would be to have his lines in order, jump into a canoe and paddle off. But he must first ask his wife's permission, then get the consent of his mother in law and of all his wife's female relations within reach.

"That programme holds good in every case. The wife, too, is the financier of the family. She always carries the pocketbook, and the husband cannot spend one cent unless she knows just what it is for, and then she uses her own judgment, as one of them naively explained it to me, whether she gives him anything or not. More than that, after he has made a purchase it is his bounden duty to report to the head of the house and he does it without fail."

Absolute Proof.

A Remarkable Cure of Rheumatism.

From the Groton Connecticut Review.—"David Lewis, who has been afflicted all winter by rheumatism, is out again and all due to one of the medicines advertised in our columns. After trying everything possible, he used Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which has relieved him of all pain, from which he was a constant sufferer and promises to make him fit for duty soon. We know David has been a great sufferer and are glad to see him around again." For sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy.

Mr. D. Wiley, ex-postmaster, Black Breek, N. C., was so badly afflicted with rheumatism that he was only able to hobble around with canes, and even then it caused him great pain. After using Chamberlain's Pain Balm he was so much improved that he threw away his canes. He says this liniment did him more good than all other medicine and treatment put together. For sale at 50 cents per bottle at Reynolds's Pharmacy.

Agreeably Surprised.

"I had a very severe cold on my lungs that caused much soreness and gave me considerable uneasiness in regard to the result," says Mr. T. E. Smith, of Billerica, Mass. "A local druggist called my attention to Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and on his recommendation I gave the remedy a careful trial. The result surprised me; I recovered entirely in three days." 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy.

It Did the Business.

Mr. J. H. Cobb, publisher of the Mirror, at Brockton, N. Y., says: "For nearly two years the Mirror has been publishing the advertisements of Chamberlain's Remedies. A few days ago the writer was suffering from a bowel trouble and resorted to an old remedy which did not prove efficacious; finally he tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and two doses did the business, checking it completely. M. E. SUPPER AND SALE.

Good Time Enjoyed by a Throng in Vincent Chapel.

The promise of a good supper usually attracts a crowd, and the supper and sale given last evening by the Ladies Aid Society of the First M. E. Church in Vincent Chapel was no exception. From 6 until 8 the waitresses were kept busy supplying the needs of the incoming tide of diners. After the supper was concluded, a social time was enjoyed by all, while Miss Filmer rendered several vocal solos and Miss Cara Peck read an interesting paper on the work among the Indians.

The supper was arranged by a committee of which Mrs. N. W. Pike was the very efficient chairman. She was ably assisted in her work by Mrs. S. C. Baker, Mrs. Rugg, Miss Susie Jackson, Miss Minnie Sharp, Mrs. J. McNorton, Mrs. J. S. King, Mrs. Humble, Mrs. I. McVoy and Mrs. G. Q. Packer.

The waitresses were Miss Bertha Jenkins, Miss Alice Jenkins, Miss C. Florence Barnes, Miss Bessie Day, Miss Madeline Day, Miss Edna Harris, Miss Eva Jenkins, Miss Edna French, Miss Bessie Valiant, Miss Mattie Humble, Miss Flora Campbell, and Miss Lizzie Stackhouse.

The cake table was under the control of Mrs. C. E. Horne, Mrs. H. A. McGee and Mrs. Peck.

The ever-favorite candy table was very popular and here Mrs. N. Y. Hull, Miss Elsie Horne, Miss Bessie Cornwell and Miss Sarah Douglass supplied the steady demand for good things.

During the evening the Epworth League held an important business meeting.

After the reading of the minutes of the last two meetings, the reports of the various committees were made. After some discussion it was decided that two delegates, appointed by the president, should be sent to the State Convention to be held in Elizabeth. The president announced as his choice: Miss Gertrude Sharp and Robert Davis.

After further discussion it was decided to send one delegate to the National Convention to be held in Chatanooga, June 28. Miss Ida Angleman was elected delegate.

The annual election of officers followed, and resulted as follows: President, Robert Davis; first vice-president, Miss M. Sharp; second vice-president, Miss Smalley; third vice-president, D. S. Dunavan; fourth vice-president, Miss Elsie Horne; secretary, Miss Ida Angleman; treasurer, Miss Elizabeth Corwell.

Found the Jewels.

Mr. and Mrs. William Wilder of Central avenue returned home from Canada Thursday, where they have been visiting, and on unpacking their trunks were startled at being unable to find a valuable set of diamonds which had been placed in the trunks on the departure from Canada. The baggage was examined by the Custom House inspectors at the border, and fears were entertained that the jewels had been stolen in transit. After two days of diligent search they were finally found, having been mislaid in one of the compartments of a trunk.

Mrs. Wright's Pink Tea.

Mrs. William G. Wright of Eighth street gave a pleasant reception and tea at her home yesterday. She was assisted in receiving by Mrs. A. M. Decker, Mrs. George Wright, and Mrs. Mason W. Tyler. Mrs. Howard Tracy and Mrs. Edward Jermaine poured tea, assisted at the table by the Misses Dumont, Van Boskerck, Murphy and Coleman. The decorations were pink. Among those present was General and Mrs. Alling of Washington.

Pleased the Youngsters.

The Boys Club was entertained last night by L. B. C. Josephs of the Newark College of Music, who gave a number of comic and serious recitations and readings. The piece entitled "Mr. and Mrs. Spoopendyke Playing a Game of Checkers" was especially pleasing to the boys.

MR. HUBBARD'S BOARD.

It Is Organized for Effective County Work.

STANDING COMMITTEES APPOINTED.

Tax Levy to Be $185,000. Appropriated Judiciously Among the Departments—Freeholder Tier at the Head of the Plainfield Bridge Committee.

The Board of Freeholders met Thursday afternoon. The organization for the year was completed by Director Hubbard appointing the standing committees and the bridge committees for districts outside of Elizabeth.

The appropriations for the year were also fixed. The committee reported that after a careful estimate of the necessities for the several departments of the county, the $19,000 of principal to be paid on the bonded debt, the bonded debt interest and the large lunacy expense over which the Board has no control, they concluded that a total tax levy of $185,000, with the $21,500 assets of the county added, would be sufficient. They recommended, therefore, that $185,000 be raised by taxation, and that it, together with the assets, be divided among the several departments for which appropriations are made as follows:

Court expenses	$3,000
County jail	1,500
Care of lunatics	2,000
Members' salaries and expenses	2,500
Coroner's fees	1,000
Election	6,000
Advertising and publishing	2,500
Stationery	2,000
Incidentals, schools, burial of soldiers, etc.	5,000
Hospitals	4,000
Principal of bonded debt	19,000
Interest on bonded debt	75,000
Interest on temporary loans	1,000
Public grounds and buildings	7,000
Bridges and culverts	6,000
County roads	5,000

The Board received the report and adopted the recommendation of the committee.

Director Hubbard named the standing committees. The only changes from last year were the appointment of Mr. Farrell of Rahway to all committees on which Mr. Howard had served, and the correction of what he said was a mistake he made last year in naming Mr. Clark on only two commistees and Mr. Haliday on four. Director Hubbard apologized to Mr. Clark and appointed him on the Public Grounds and Buildings Committee, instead of Mr. Haliday.

The following are the committees as they are now constituted:

Collector's Bond—Messrs. Morrell, Miller and Haliday.

Publication—Messrs. Hulskamper, Badgley and Swain.

Discharge of Prisoners—Messrs. Krause, Westcott and Roll.

Settle With Collector—Messrs. Littell, Farrell and Krause.

Audit Accounts—Messrs. Ogden, Roll and Woodruff.

Lunacy—Messrs. Miller, Westcott and Clark.

Public Grounds and Buildings—Messrs. Farrell, Ogden and Clark.

Jail Inspection—Messrs. Tier, Krause and Woodruff.

Stationery—Messrs. Littell, Hulskamper and Swain.

Settle With Sheriff—Messrs. Westcott, Badgley and Tier.

Miscellaneous Accounts and Agreements—Messrs. Badgley, Ehrlich and Morrell.

Legal Questions—Messrs. Ehrlich, Tier and Woodruff.

Appropriations — Messrs. Farrell, Ogden, Littell, Haliday and Clark.

Rahway Drawbridges — Messrs. Ehrlich, Farrell and Haliday.

Elizabeth Drawbridges — Messrs. Miller, Morrell and Hulskamper.

County Roads—Messrs. Roll, Ogden, Littell, Krause and Swain.

On resolution of Mr. Littell, the Director was made a member of all committees.

Mr. Roll offered a resolution authorizing the County Collector to print his report and the reports of the standing committees im pamphlet form not to exceed 500 copies, and to publish his report in the papers authorized by law, including The Constitutionalist, weekly issue of The Daily Press.

This resolution was adopted.

The Director and County Collector were given authority to borrow in anticipation of taxes money not to exceed $50,000.

Mr. Farrell moved a committee of five be appointed to superintend the widening of the Grand street bridge in Rahway, as provided for by resolution at former meeting. The resolution was adopted and the committee appointed were: Messrs. Farrell, Ehrlich, Ogden, Roll and Woodruff.

Mr. Woodruff moved that a committee be appointed to examine the Walnut street bridge in Roselle, and report on the advisability of rebuilding it.

The motion was adopted, and Director Hubbard appointed as the committee: Messrs. Woodruff, Hulskamper and Badgley.

Other committees were appointed as follows:

Plainfield bridges—Messrs. Tier, Roll, Ogden, Westcott and Clark.

Cranford—Messrs. Littell, Krause, Miller, Westcott and Haliday.

CANINE RIGHTS DEFENDED.

If Plainfield Had Her Fences Up, Dogs Would Be Less Destructive.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—

I read the letter of "Good Morals" and have been awaiting the reply which did not come. I can sympathize with "Good Morals" in his desire not to be led into the use of profane language for I do not use it myself, but there my sympathy ends. I am sorry for his flowers because I love flowers, but I am not sorry for him when he lets them be destroyed, because he should take care of them. In fact I have long thought it high time that the too prevalent but semi-barbarous no-fence fad should be dropped. For myself I would not live in a place unfenced. And when house-hunting I have sometimes lain awake at night trying to think of some argument in favor of the abolition of fences. Thus far I have found only two. One is economy. The owner saves the price of the fence though it be at the cost of making the town look like a common. The other is the facility afforded to women of the house to slip out at the back door into a neighbor's kitchen whenever they want to pick feathers from the plumage of the other woman across the way. The Puritan fashion of gossiping over the fence was rather public, the modern method is private, and shall I say it?—more asthetic.

I once happened to be on hand in a town when a runaway team crossed a sidewalk and entered upon the first garden in a long row of fashionable residences. Two horses and a surrey behind them went straight down the lots, over lawns, flowers and floral beds, till they tangled up in an artistic shrubbery at the last house. Much expressive language resulted, but I could not find anybody who did not regret the absence of fences. From my point of view it seemed a useful lesson, indeed I am not sure that it did not appear rather in the light of a good practical joke, at any rate I felt no inducement to indulge in unprintable words.

Then the dogs. Anybody who does not love dogs and other animals I would deport to a different civilization, such for instance as might exist in the neighborhood of the Big Horn. Every householder should keep a good dog. But a dog is property. The law has often said so. A licensed law-abiding dog is free of the public thoroughfares. Not even an authorized stealer can legally arrest and do away with him. But how is the poor brute to know just where the sidewalk ends or the property of "Good Morals" begins, if "Good Morals" has not the courtesy to show him?

There is not an unfenced street in Plainfield that would not be improved if the several properties were surrounded by a good fence. It need not be of posts and rails. So I advise "Good Morals" to fence his ground artistically and thereby set his neighbors a good example. He could then cultivate his daffodils with serenity of mind, and on his own admission he would have one less temptation to use improper expletives. Aliquis.

Netherwood Does Want It.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—

The residents of the Netherwood district propose at the next meeting of the Council to show the Railroad Committee that their desire is fully as great as ever to have the trolley extended to Netherwood station. At a recent meeting of the Council an individual took upon himself to act for spokesman for Netherwood and he falsely stated that the sentiment of the residents was opposed to the road, whereas he had the opinion of but four people (himself included), one of whom is a public hackman.

Netherwood will present such evidence next week that will convince the Council we do want the road and insist on its extension. Trolleyite.

Progressive Women.

The last meeting for the season of the Plainfield Branch Alliance of Unitarian and other Christian women will be held in All Souls Church, Tuesday afternoon, May 28, when papers will be read on "Manufactories and Industries of Plainfield", and the "Public School System". On the first subject the following points will be discussed by different women: Number, age and sex of factory employes; length of hours and regulation for health and comfort; wages and cost of living; to what extent is work done in homes. The second subject will be discussed under these heads: Is it effective; progressive and satisfactory; Kindergartens and manual training; compulsory education.

Sewer Excavations Hurt Business.

West Front street merchants claim that the blockading of certain sections of that thoroughfare by the sewer work is injuring the volume of trade transacted for the time being.

AN INVENTIVE FIREMAN.

Driver Townley Perfects an Arrangement to Record the Time of Alarms.

Driver William Townley of Alert Hose wagon is a genius. Some time ago he conceived the idea of inventing a contrivance whereby he would be able to stop a clock automatically at the exact moment a fire alarm is received at the West Second street house. He has about accomplished his plan, though it is not yet in perfect working order.

An ordinary pendulum clock is placed under the ticker on which the alarm is recorded on a strip of paper by punching little holes. A weight is used to run the ticker which drops a certain distance at every stroke of the gong, and directly under the weight is a brake which holds a lever in position. When the lever is released from the brake, which is thrown off by the ticker weight dropping onto it, another small rod is drawn up close against the pendulum, which ceases swinging, and thus stopping the hands at the minute the alarm was received.

The time tests of the alarm have no effect on the arrangement, because the brake is set so far away from the ticker that it takes three blows to permit the weight to fall sufficient for the two to come in contact.

Death of Little Edith.

A darkened household is that of Letter-Carrier and Mrs. Edward T. VanWinkle of Elm street, for little Edith, the sunshine of their home, was called to higher glory at sunset yesterday. The child had for three weeks been ill with pneumonia and whooping-cough. At one critical point Drs Hallock and Keeney were in consultation with the attending physician, Dr. Jenkins, and medical skill and tender nursing carried the little sufferer past the crisis.

It was believed that recovery was assured, but weakness of the heart developed, and last evening at 6:45 the death pallor succeeded an attack of coughing, and the gentle spirit passed away while the frail body was being tenderly caressed by the grief-stricken parents. Little Edith was a remarkably sweet child, beloved by all, and her loss is a grevious affliction to all who knew her bright and lovable disposition.

Little Edith was in her fourth year. The funeral will take place from the residence of her parents Monday afternoon at 4.

Did You See Her?

A stylishly attired young woman caused many smiles on West Front street yesterday by parading along the walk with a cardboard sign marked "At cost, 59 cents" attached to her dress, which she had unwittingly entangled in the folds of her garment while shopping in a dry goods store. Councilman Westphal saw the spectacle the young woman was making of herself and going up to her said:

"Pardon me, madam, but you are tagged."

The fair dame turned hurriedly as though she thought some villian was about to strike her, and as she did so observed the placard. Giving it a feminine jerk she cast it into the gutter, and walked along at a gait that made her pug dog start on a gallop to keep in the wake of her natty figure.

A Model of Beauty and Style.

The Warren Journal, Belvidere:—The Daily Press, of Plainfield, celebrated its ninth anniversary last week by treating itself to a complete new dress, which is a model for beauty and style. It came out on its birthday, bright as new dollar- full weight—with a cut of its handsome building and an interior view of its elegant editorial rooms with group of staff. It is an enterprising journal, cleanly edited, somewhat proud of its distinction of being always a newspaper, never an organ.

Healthy and Influential.

Perth Amboy Republican:—We congratulate Bro. Force on his prosperity. The issue of May 10 of the Plainfield Press appeared gorgeous in its Spring suit, consisting of new type. It is now in its ninth year and a healthy paper it is, as well as influential where it is published.

Wide-Awake and Has the Call.

Dover Index:—The Plainfield Press appeared in a new dress last Friday, which date was also its eighth anniversary. The Press is a wide-awake, newsy paper and seems to have the call in that enterprising town.

Summery.

Rahway Democrat:—The Plainfield Press looks very neat in its new Summer dress.

—The Board of Health meet this evening, when the plumbers ordinance will be considered.

KILLED IN A WRECK.

Engineer Harry Buck Forfeits Life for Duty.

HE STUCK BRAVELY TO HIS POST.

The Smashup Was the Result of Collision of Parted Sections of a Reading Coal Train, into Which a Fast Flying Freight Train Crashed—All Traffic Blocked for Hours.

A bad wreck occurred on the Jersey Central between Greenbrook and Bound Brook this morning at 1. A train of empty coal cars going west, drawn by a Philadelphia and Reading engine, broke in two just west of Greenbrook. The engineer ran some little distance before discovering the accident and then stopped with the result of the detached cars crashing into the other section of the train. The collision threw seven coal cars off the rails and scattered them in a tangled mass over the other three tracks.

Before signals could be got out a Philadelphia freight, also drawn by a P. & R. engine coming east, ran full headway in the wreck. The locomotive was ditched, and Engineer Harry Buck of Philadelphia killed. Outside of a slight bruise to Passenger Conductor Brown, who was riding on the engine from Bound Brook to New York, no other railroad employes were injured.

All tracks at the point of the wreck were blockaded. The wrecking crews from Elizabethport and Jersey City were sent to the scene of the accident.

The Baltimore and Ohio train, due here at 1:1. a. m., after arriving at the North Avenue station, backed down to Roselle again, and went through to Bound Brook over the Lehigh Valley tracks. The other through trains are using the same route until the wreck is cleared away.

Local trains made up at Somerville transferred passengers at the wreck to trains that were made up at Dunellen and that were run down to that point. As a rule they passed the North avenue station on time, and no complaint was heard from the commuters on account of any delay.

Both outside tracks were clear at 10. Buck is said to be the engineer who escaped unscathed from a locomotive explosion at Dunellen ten years ago.

Must Look Out for Home First.

The Woman's Relief Corp, No. 10, auxiliary to Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., met last evening and discussed Memorial Day plans. They decided that it would be impossible for the Corps to go to Scotch Plains that day as there is so much to be attended to here. The women ask for the co operation of all in their efforts to make the day one long to be remembered.

Miss Newberger's Talent.

The recitations which Pauline Newberger of Elizabeth gave at the entertainment in the Parochial School, Thursday evening, were received with much approbation by those who heard them. Miss Newberger is possessed of talent which has been developed in the right direction.

Ought to Have Been Home.

Jacob Krismaker, a young lad whose home is in Newark, had one of his feet caught between the bumpers of Jersey Central cars at Greenbrook yesterday afternoon, and badly smashed. He was stealing a ride. The boy was brought to this city and taken to the Muhlenberg Hospital.

Don't.

Do n't go about from day to day with that strange, unaccountable headache, when an examination of your eyes may reveal the cause of the trouble, and open the way to sure relief. Such an examination by an expert optician is free to you at Collier's, 103 Park avenue.

To Complete the Schedule.

The Y. M. C. A. baseball team will meet in the association building this evening when a representative from Spalding Brothers will be present to take the measurements for the uniforms, the total cost of which will be about $70. The schedule of games will also be completed at this meeting.

Baseball.

The North Plainfield Stars (Herbert Cathcart pitcher and Howard Roome catcher) defeated the Prospects of Park avenue (Ray Smith pitcher and Will Gardner catcher) this morning. It was a close and exciting game; score, 15 to 14.

—R. M. Dawson, of the Prudential Insurance Company, walked into business from South Plainfield this morning, because of the train he boarded going by way of Lehigh Valley from Roselle.

MILLIGAN COMING BACK.

Counselor Runyon Says the Contractor Will Return and Settle Matters.

In conversation with Lawyer H. C. Runyon this morning a Press reporter learned that the trouble over alleged forgery between Joseph Milligan and the several contractors had about been settled, and the one remaining debtor, Ivins & Co., would be paid today. Mr. Milligan went to Newark the day the forgery was alleged to have taken place to collect some money to square himself, when it was rumored that he had left town for good.

The fact was that he was building a house for Mr. Kelly at Oak Tree and was getting his material from a Metuchen firm. They refused to let him have any more till he had paid his bills, hence his effort to collect the money before the bank closed that day, so he could finish the Kelly contract. Mr. Milligan did not realize that there was any seriousness attached to his actions and Ivins & Co., who had the warrant issued now say they are sorry they did so.

Mr. Milligan will return to Plainfield in a few days when matters will be settled satisfactorily.

Epworth Tennis and Croquet Players.

COURTS HAVE TO CLOSE

No Funds To Prosecute Federal Prisoners.

The President To Be Petitioned for Relief and the Judges To Confer. Marshals and Witnessess in Need. Prisoners Let Go for Want of Funds To Prosecute.

New York, May 18.—The failure of congress to make a sufficient appropriation for the department of justice has affected alike the dignity of the federal courts, and the officials in this city. The course adopted this week in Chicago, Utica and Rochester, of closing the United States courts for want of funds to meet the expenses, may soon be generally adopted here. Judge Townsend closed his court in this city yesterday.

Judges To Discuss the Situation.

It was stated in the Federal building that th United States judges for the seventy eight districts throughout the country contemplated soon holding a conference to discuss the financial situation which at present menaces alike the dignity of the bench and the ends of justice. Last Tuesday Judge Coxe discharged nine prisoners in Utica because there was no money to conduct the prosecution with.

Will Petition the President.

The deputy United States marshals in this city, whose wages are several months in arrears, and whose families are in actual want, decided to send a petition to President Cleveland and ask him to present the urgency of their pecuniary straits to Attorney-General Olney with a view of having some special measure taken for their relief during the months they will have to wait before congress can pass a deficiency appropriation.

Witnesses in Distress.

Nine witnesses who had appeared before Judge Benedict in the trial of John Fitzgerald for assault on the high seas, applied yesterday to United States Marshal McCarty for their witness fees. They were told that there was no money in the office with which to pay them, and that it might be a year before they could be paid. The men are all sailors and had been detained thirty-nine days in Ludlow street jail as witnesses. They had not a cent of money in their pockets and said they did not know what to do until they could get another ship.

Appropriation Too Small.

A number of other witnesses, among whom were three city policemen, met with a similar disappointment. Congress had been asked for an appropriation of $5,705,200 for the department of justice for the fiscal year to end June 30 next, but they appropriated $156,000 less than had been asked for. The appropriation for deputy marshals, court bailiff's and witness fees is exhausted and the expenses for three months of the present fiscal year are yet to be met.

ARMOUR BOYCOTT EXTENDED.

It May Soon Be Spread All Over the United States.

Kansas City, Mo., May 18.—The boycott of the Armour Packing company, declared a month ago by the local retail butchers' association, has been extended by the National association to include Chicago, St. Louis and Denver, with the intention of spreading it all over the United States unless the difference in Kansas City should be adjusted. The boycott is by order of President Stillman from Danbury, Conn. He also strongly recommends the establishment of a national abbatoir to relieve the association of dependency of packers.

CRISPI WILL SUE CAVALLOTTI.

Wants Redress for Being Accused of Ill Treating Political Prisoners.

Rome, May 18.—Prime Minister Crispi will prosecute for libel Signor Felice Cavallotti, the well known ultra radical leader and the editor of the Secolo, a radical newspaper of Milan, for declaring that he had ordered that political prisoners be ill treated. The Secolo, which has the largest circulation of any newspaper in Italy, is an implacable adversary of the alliance between Germany, Austria and Italy, and enthusiastically advocates a Franco-Italian alliance.

FILIBUSTERS GOT AWAY.

Said To Have Left While the Isabel Was Detained at Tampa.

Jacksonville, Fla., May 18.—At Key West, Fla., it is said a filibustering expedition left for Cuba while the Infanta Isabel was, detained in quarantine at Tampa. The report comes from a reliable source and seems to be well founded.

Old Hartford Bridge Burned.

Hartford, Conn., May 18.—The old East Hartford bridge was completely destroyed by fire last night. This is the bridge over which there has been so much discussion in the legislature. A new iron structure was to have replaced it. Little effort was made to put out the fire.

INTERNAL REVENUE RECEIPTS.

Collections Made During the Past Ten Months.

Washington, May 18.—During the month of April the internal revenue bureau, from figures compiled by Commissioner Miller, collected $44,506.34 on account of the income tax and for the past three months $73,164.3 as follows: From persons, $56,521.54; from corporations, $16,642.59. The total collections from internal revenue sources for the past ten months of the current fiscal year foot up $120,652,071, an increase over 1894 of $1,511,724. The principal sources of revenue are stated: Spirits, $69,355,575, an increase of $420,285; tobacco, $24,578,986, an increase of $993,743; fermented liquors, $24,884,124, a decrease of $59,502; oleomargarine, $1,261,938, a decrease of $288,712; and miscellaneous $498,278, an increase of $372,646.

DR. BUCHANAN'S CASE.

Believed That the Supreme Judges Will Refuse To Resentence Him.

Albany, May 18.—The statement that District-Attorney Fellows would appear before the court of appeals on Monday and ask the court to order Warden Sage of Sing Sing prison to bring Robert W. Buchanan before the court for resentence has created a stir here. Never in the recollection of any person attached to the court has this body been known to pronounce the death sentence, and it is believed the judges will refuse to take any action except that of ordering the lower court in New York to resentence. Neither Attorney General Hancock nor Clerk Parks has been notified of appearance of counsel on Monday, but that is not absolutely necessary, as the counsel may appear and demand a notice to be issued to the warden.

CROKER DENOUNCED.

English Critics Comment Severely on American Jockey Tricks.

Newmarket, Eng., May 18.—Stonell has been officially scratched from all engagements. It is believed here that the reported trouble between Dwyer and Croker is due to a difference of opinion regarding the condition of American horses. Mr. Croker said last week in the most positive manner that not any of the horses would run again until August, and it is thought probable that Dwyer persuaded Croker to change the programme. The newspapers are denouncing Americans for the tactics followed out in the race Thursday. Simm's riding is receiving special attention, and it is charged that his pulling back and popping in again on the other side of horses was done to influence betting during the race.

TO COMMAND THE ST. LOUIS.

Capt. Randle, formerly of the Paris, Chosen.

Philadelphia, May 18.—When the new American line steamship St. Louis is placed in active service, on June 5, she will be commanded by Capt. William G. Randle, who commanded the Paris when the latter first floated the stars and stripes. Capt. Randle was born in Dartmouth England, April 24, 1839, but has made his home in Chester, Pa., since 1863, having come to this country when but a small boy. He has followed the water since infancy, and when but twenty-one years old he was placed in command of one of the most celebrated Baltimore clippers, the Traveler.

MEADE TO BE RETIRED.

His Active Naval Career Will Terminate on Monday.

Washington, May 18.—The president has decided to comply with Admiral Meade's request to be placed on the retired list, and that officer's active career will be terminated on Monday next. An order retiring a naval officer does not relieve him of responsibility for any act while on duty or since his detachment, should his superior officer order an investigation into any matters previously arising.

THE SEMINARY MATTER

Heated Discussion in the General Assembly.

Report of the Committee—Few Accept the Plan—Its Main Purpose Is To Oust Heretical Professors—The Principal Subject Now Under Consideration.

Pittsburg, May 18.—The Presbyterian assembly is to-day considering the question of Seminary control. The principal subject before the assembly yesterday was the report of the committee on this subject. The report is, in part, as follows:

Meetings of Committee.

The committee held two meetings, one at Saratoga, N. Y., in August, 1894, and one at Pittsburg, May 14 and 15, 1895. By sub-committees it has held conferences with several seminaries. Immediately after the meeting of the committee at Saratoga, it addressed a letter through its chairman, to each of the boards of the seminaries, and the answers received were appended to the report. At the said conferences the committee, in expressing the meaning and effect of the recommendations, said that "A," which is as follows—

No Change of Title or Ownership.

That all their funds and property, subject to the terms and conditions of existing or specified trusts, shall be declared to be held by them in trust for the Presbyterian church, and that no part of the funds and property so held shall be used for any other purpose than for theological education in the doctrines set fogth in the standards of the Presbyteria church—involved no change of title, trust, ownership, management or disposition of the property held by various seminaries. As to "B," which is as follows—

General Assembly Approval.

That the election of the trustees shall be subject to the approval of the next succeeding general assembly, and that no election shall take effect until approved by the general assembly.—The committee stated that substantially the powers here sought to be conferred on the general assembly are now possessed by it over a majority of the seminaries; and that the adoption of "B" simply made plain by charter provision the right of the general assembly to protect what she thus possesses. As to "C," which is as follows: That the election, appointment or transfer of all professors and teachers in all seminaries shall be submitted to the succeeding general assembly for its approval, and that all of said professors and teachers shall be either ministers or members in good standing with the Presbyterian church in the United States of America.—The committee stated that this was, in substance and in effect, what is known as the agreement of 1870.

Few Favored It.

The committee reports that Omaha and Dubuque have adopted all of the report of the general assembly. The report of the committee on Lane seminary at Cincinnati was then heard. At the close an attempt was made to set an hour for taking the vote, but it was not adopted, its effect would have been to limit the time of each speaker to ten minutes. To-day the debate will wax hot and the fur will fly. The opening speech was made by E. E. White of Columbus, O., the newly elected president of the directory of Lane seminary, at Cincinnati, which rejected the attempts of the general assembly to gain control of the funds for the purpose of the church.

RUSSIAN AGENTS ACCUSED.

Buffalo, May 18.—Stanislaus C. Larzeminski, the son of Stanislaus F. Larzeminski of this city, who died in a Russian prison on Sept. 17 of last year, yesterday took the first steps toward laying the foundation for diplomatic representation to the Russian government certain agents of which he accuses of being personally responsible for the death of his father.

THE BUSINESS OUTLOOK

Review of Trade for the Week Just Closing.

Advance in Wages One of the Encouraging Features — Increase in the Volume of Domestic Trade—Great Want of Employment of Money in the West.

New York, May 18.—Dun's review of the business situation for the week just closing will to-day say: The severe cold snap, with extensive frost and in some states snow, has fortunately done little damage to the great crops, though much to fruit, but has considerably retarded retail trade. The best news of the week is the advance of 10 per cent. in wages by the Carnegie works, followed by the Jones-Laughlin establishment, and evidently implying a similar advance by many other concerns. The Illinois Steel company is starting its furnaces without granting the demands of its employes. No advance has been found practicable in the woolen mills, where conditions as to prices and foreign competition are very different, and about 10,000 workers are still idle at Olneyville, where the works should consume 600,000 lbs. per week.

Manufactured Products.

In other departments of labor troubles are not serious, and the demand for manufactured products increases. The volumes of domestic business, measured by railroad earnings for the first week of May, is 4.2 per cent. larger than last year, and measured by bank exchanges ouside New York is 11.0 per cent. larger than last year, and for the month the daily average is 11.0 per cent. less than in 1893. It is but fair to note that business broke down and exchanges fell below the normal average about this time two years ago.

Money Idle in the West.

With material and steady enlargement in domestic trade, there is still great want of employment in the interior for money which comes hither, $1,500,000 during the past week, and with the millions distributed by the syndicate on bond account stimulates speculation. Accordingly wheat has risen 5 cents, although the reports of injury by frost do not appear, upon sifting, to concern any considerable proportion of the growing grain. With only six weeks of the crop year left, the stocks in sight indicate a heavy surplus, if not as large as some western statisticians estimate. Corn has advanced only half a cent, though apparently injured more than wheat, but the acreage gives promise of a yield of 2,000 million bushels.

Cotton and Wool Markets.

Cotton is an eighth stronger. The manufacture is prospering, though no one can suppose its consumption is quite at the maximum, and for the year it certainly has not been. Goods are in fair demand for the season, and recent advances in price are fully maintained. Sales of wool continue remarkably heavy, for the past week. The markets are quiet because stocks of foreign wools held here are remarkably large, and are offered at prices relatively lower than those demanded by Western growers. The orders for men's goods, though gradually increasing, are scarcely fair for the season, and new orders for dress goods have been moderate, but the mills are fairly supplied for the present. Strikes and fear of strikes cause much difficulty, especially in delaying deliveries on past orders. Retail trade in carpets is exceedingly good, and the demand for flannels improves.

CONDEMNS SILVER AGITATION.

Statement Given Out by Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Wike.

Washington, May 18.—Assistant Secretary Wike of the treasury department gave out a statement last night in which he takes strong grounds against the free silver agitation and condemns in strong terms the calling of a convention by the democratic state committee of Illinois.

Attaching Chan's Personal Property.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., May 18.—A number of attachments have been issued against the personal property of S. S. Chan, the embezzling money order agent for a New York banking firm. A prominent member of the Concordia society, of which Chan is a well known member, said that all the money taken by him will be paid back within a short time, even if the society has to advance it.

The Reading Rumor.

Philadelphia, May 18.—Receiver Paxson of the Reading railroad was seen this morning in relation to the story that the Reading had passed into the control of a combination of the other anthracite roads. Judge Paxson denied any knowledge of the reported absorption of Reading, and said that the whole story was news to him.

A KILLING FROST.

Se ious Damage in New York and New Jersey.

New York, May 18.—There was a severe and killing frost on Long Island Thursday night, ice forming in many places. In Jamaica and Patchogue the damage was quite heavy, especially to tomato plants and beans, which will have to be replanted. Hundreds of acres of corn and potatoes in the vicinity of Patchogue, which had attained a growth of several inches, were destroyed. The replanting that will be necessary will make late crops next fall and poor prospects of early vegetables. Fruit trees were nipped, but not badly.

Damage in Northern New Jersey.

New Brunswick, N. J., May 18.—Northern New Jersey, after congratulating itself on escaping any serious effects from the cold of the last few nights, awoke yesterday morning to find itself the victim of a severe freeze. This frost is reported over the entire territory from the York state border to and below Plainfield. In Bergen county ice was formed wherever basins of water stood outdoors, tin roofs were white with frost, and tender vegetation was very generally injured. Considerable early corn is out of the ground in Bergen county, and this, together with tomato and strawberry plants, is nipped and in many instances ruined.

Peaches Escaped Injury.

Deckertown, N. J., May 18.—The frost of Thursday night did great damage to the early gardens in Sussex county. The strawberry crop suffered severely. All vegetation was injured, beans, tomatoes, potatoes and grapes very seriously, if they were not entirely destroyed. The peach crop, for which this county has now become noted, has not been materially injured, from the fact that the fruit was too far advanced. The outlook for a large crop of all varieties of peaches was never brighter than at this time.

Early Vegetables Suffered.

Nyack, N. Y., May 18.—Early vegetables were injured by a heavy frost in Rockland county Thursday night, and plenty of ice was found yesterday morning. Fears are felt for small crops.

Damage in Genesee Valley.

Genesee, N. Y., May 18.—The freeze Thursday night probably ruined what fruit was left in the Genesee Valley. Ice nearly half an inch thick formed on still water in exposed places.

Fruit Injured in New Hampshire.

On the Batchelder farm, in Milford, grapevines were damaged to the extent of $1,000. The loss in the Robinson peach orchards at Mount Vernon is also considerable, and all the farmers in this vicinity report heavy losses.

Frost and Ice at Bethleham, Pa.

Bethleham, Pa., May 18.—This section of the country was visited by heavy frosts last night. In some places ponds were frozen over. This has put an effectual end to the hopes of early produce and fruit growers in this county.

Grant, received a warm welcome from numerous friends both in private and official stations upon his arrival here.

Full powers are conferred upon the committee to make their investigation thorough, as far as the legislature can confer powers, and they are to report in print to the next legislature.

The Lambert Mandate Found.

Camden, N. J., May 18.—The mandate in the case of Theodore Lambert, the convicted murderer of Baker William G. Kairer, has at last been heard from. It will arrive here on Monday. The delay was occasioned by an oversight in the supreme court clerk's office. Another day for Lambert's execution will be set sometime next week.

Depew Is for Morton.

New York, May 18.—During a talk on the business improvement, Chauncey M. Depew asserted that his choice for the republican nomination for president in 1896 was Governor Levi P. Morton, although he regards General Harrison as the one who has the greatest strength at present.

BANKRUPTCY IS FEARED

Newfoundland Situation Is Very Grave.

The Most Severe Form of Retrenchment Will Only Pay the Way in the Future—No Hope for the Present Debts—Efforts To Raise Money in Montreal Fail.

St. John's, N. F., May 18.—Confederation, or rather the refusal of Newfoundland to enter the dominion of Canada on the terms proposed, is the sole topic of conversation here. Everybody is pleased that no attempt was made to urge the acceptance of the terms upon the house or people. The government appears to be frightened in the face of the severe retrenchment that is necessary to preserve the equilibrium of receipts and expenditures, and has postponed the introduction in the house of its retrenchment proposals until Tuesday next. These retrenchments will include the curtailment of every branch of the public service.

Bankruptcy Seems Certain.

Furthermore, it is questionable if retrenchment, however severe, will be capable of arresting the colony's progress towards bankruptcy. There is nearly $1,000,000 of floating debt, deficits, loans due banks, interest, etc., requiring some form of settlement by June 30. The question of how to grapple with this condition of things is agitating the government.

No Provision for Old Debts.

Retrenchment will only provide the means of paying the colony's way in the future; nothing is arranged to provide for the payment of present debts. These now amount to $10,500,000, and obligations have been incurred requiring another $5,000,000. The business people, those possessing money or property, are unanimous in desiring that Newfoundland be made a crown colony, which would take her out of the hands of the local politicians, and give her a clean, economical administration by British experts.

Unable To Raise Money in Montreal.

Montreal, May 18.—Hon. Robert Bond, of Newfoundland, who is here negotiating with capitalists for the loan of $2,000,000 has given it up as a bad job, and will leave to-day for Boston and New York, where he will endeavor to borrow that amount.

THREE KILLED; SEVEN INJURED

A Frame Building Collapses at Jericho, R. I.

Providence, R. I., May 18.—By the collapse of a four story tenement block at Jericho yesterday afternoon three persons were killed and seven others were more or less severely injured. The victims were: Mrs. Hermoine Guertin, a French-Canadian woman, aged 54 years; Asa G. Aldrich, a carpenter, aged about 55 years; Alice Lemoine, a child of 3 years of age. The building was a big frame structure adjoining the French Catholic church. Several workmen have been engaged for several weeks in turning around and raising the building to fit the basement story for business purposes.

PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDACIES.

Talks with Senators Cullom and Gallinger.

Seattle, Wash., May 18.—United States Senator Cullom (rep., Ill.), in an interview, said he was in no sense a candidate for the presidency, but admitted that he would accept the nomination if it were offered him.

Favors Reed.

Senator Gallinger (rep., N. H.), who is here, was interviewed on the presidential possibilities. He favors Reed, but thinks McKinley will be nominated. If the Allison and McKinley forces are so evenly divided as to prevent the nomination of either, a dark horse, probably Senator Cullom, will be nominated.

THE DAILY PRESS.

A. L. FORCE. Publisher and Proprietor.
WALTER IRVING CLARKE. Managing Editor.

TOWN AND HOME FAVORITE.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., MAY 18, 1895.

A DAPPER YOUNG MAN.

Could n't Curb His Tongue, and Was Incarcerated in the Rookery.

Robert Ferris, a dapper young man with an oily tongue, who has been sojourning in the city the past three months canvassing orders for crayon portraits, was incarcerated in a dingy cell in the police station this morning by Sergeant Kiely, where he was left to ponder on the folly of being too fresh.

Young Ferris, who spends two hours a day combing his blonde hair and the rest of his time—when not asleep and then he dreams—in telling of his love conquests, picked a quarrel with a West Front street clerk yesterday morning, during which he called the young man several vile and ungentlemanly names.

The young man entered a complaint against Ferris, and Sergeant Kiely told the erstwhile picture vender to appear in city court this morning at 8:30. But the blonde and suave young man did not comply with the order. Shortly after 10 the sergeant met him on the corner of Front street and Park avenue, and, amid many protestations, escorted him to the rookery.

NOT WORKING TOGETHER.

Loyal Ladies League Are Alone in Their Memorial Day Programme.

Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G.A.R., Major Anderson Post, No. 109, G.A.R., Woman's Relief Corps, No. 10, Auxiliary to Winfield Scott Post, and John Hand Camp, No. 28, Sons of Veterans, will have full charge of the Memorial Day exercises in Music Hall and the various cemeteries. The services at Scotch Plains in the morning will be conducted by the Sons of Veterans, and Rev. Mr. Braker of the Scotch Plains Baptist Church will make a short address.

The above organizations are not associated in any way with the Loyal Ladies League, as that is an entirely distinct society. This statement is made for the reason that the above organizations have been misrepresented in several ways, which is an injustice to them in their work for Memorial Day.

EPWORTH LEAGUE SOCIAL.

Arranged Programme Not Carried Out But a Good Time Enjoyed.

The monthly social of the Epworth League of Grace M. E. Church was enjoyed last evening in the church. The attendance of the members and their friends was large and the sociability was the chief attraction. Those present, however, were disappointed, for an excellent progamme had been arranged, but for very good reasons its rendition was impossible. All joined, however, in playing amusing games that afforded much pleasure.

The committee in charge of the affair included Miss Margaret Schuck, Miss Loomis, the Misses Carroll, Miss Steiner, Mrs. Lunger, Mrs. E. Winckler, and they were assisted by several of the young men in making the event one of success.

Threatens to Sue the City.

Michael Cox, Michael Day and Martin Kane had an examination before Judge Coddington this morning on the charge of fast driving and disorderly conduct on the boulevard Sunday night, May 5.

Sentence was suspended on the first two, and the latter was discharged. It is said that Kane is very indignant at having been arrested, and threatens to bring suit against the city for false imprisonment.

Accepted a Better Position.

Fletcher Hallock, who has been with the sewer department of the city engineer's office, leaves Monday for White Plains to superintend the construction of an electric road.

—It will pay you to watch for Edsall's ad. in Monday's Press, as he is sparing no trouble to assemble a great array of special bargains for his anniversary week.

—Mary Burke was arrested by Marshal Van Horn of the borough this morning for disorderly conduct. Justice orosley sentenced her to pay $10 fine or ten days in jail. She took the latter.

CYCLING COMMENT.

The Victor Wheelmen will elect officers June 6.

Charles Lister has sold a Keating wheel to Franklin B. Lord of New York.

The bicycle which was advertised in The Press yesterday as lost was claimed by its owner last evening.

Miss Maude Van Dyke of East Front street has a handsome new wheel that will prove a real pleasure to her during the Summer months.

The drivers of wagons and carriages have secured the passage of laws regulating the use of bicycles on the various State and County roads. But it is becoming daily a more and more noticeable fact that many of these same drivers of wagons do not accord to the bicycler the rights they themselves enjoy under the laws. It is now a common occurrence for teamsters to drive in the middle of the road and compel the wheelman to turn over on the rough dirt at the side of the macadam. The wheelman is entitled to one-half the road, and it is often dangerous for him to run his wheel over the ruts that always exist at the side of every county thoroughfare. Bicycles today are more numerously seen along the roads than all other vehicles, and the cyclists are growing in numbers every day. They are held accountable for their every violation of the restrictive and just laws governing the use of vehicles. Many of these rules, however, can be violated only by a bicycle rider. While the wheelman is compelled to abide by the law, the riders in other vehicles should also be compelled to accord to him his full rights and privileges under the law, and should be punished for their many and gross violations of the laws governing the rules of the road.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

A little boy was born yesterday to Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Pope, Jr., of Summit avenue.

Stephen Beeching and family of Grandview avenue will move to New York next week.

Mrs. E. A. Dithmar of New York city is the guest of Mrs. C. P. Gross of Belvidere avenue, Netherwood.

A Remedy Against Flies.

"I never use window screens," said a wise housekeeper the other day, "because I have a fancy that they shut out all the air in hot weather, and, besides, they serve to keep the flies in the house equally as well as out."

"But I never see a fly in your house," said her friend. "How do you manage it? For my part, I must confess that, screens or no screens, my summer means to me one long battle with the little pests."

"My remedy is a very simple one," said the good housekeeper, "and I learned it years ago from my grandmother, when I used to watch her putting bunches of lavender flowers around to keep the flies away. My method is simpler. I buy five cents worth of oil of lavendar at the drug store and mix it with the same quantity of water. Then I put it in a common glass atomizer and spray it around the rooms wherever flies are apt to congregate, especially in the dining room, where I sprinkle it plentifully over the table linen. The odor is especially disagreeable to flies, and they will never venture in its neighborhood, though to most people it has a peculiarly fresh and grateful smell."

Messages by Barbed Wire.

Webster City, Ia., is becoming honeycombed with telephones, and every town within a radius of fifty miles will soon be connected with Webster City. The scheme is something new and surprising even to old telephone men, but it works like a charm. An inventive genius there struck upon the idea of making direct connections with the barbed wire on the fences that run along the prairie. He tried a line first to Duncombe. It was a success, and now he has an incorporated company which has just sprung into existence and is getting rich. A line was hitched on to the barbed wire fence to Williams, twenty miles away, in one day, by two men who used only eight or ten rods of insulated wire under the road crossings that pass over the railroad. He is laying a line to Boone, forty miles away, and if the barbed wire fences hold out he will push on to Des Moines or Missouri.

The fault of others is easily perceived, but that of oneself is difficult to perceive. A man winnows his neighbor's faults like chaff, but his own faults he hides, as a cheat hides the false die from the gambler.

An evil deed is better left undone, for a man will repent of it afterward; a good deed is better done, for having done it one will not repent.

A SPRING SONG.

John Ward Stimson, of The Chestnuts, contributes the following, written from Saranac Lake, to The Independent:

A cry! a wood note from a bough:
A sweet voice on the valley hurled!
A strange, strong fragrance stealing through,
With murmurings of the under-world!

The gurgling rush in hidden nooks!
The mystic something in the air!
The melting snow, the sap, the brook!
The peeping verdure everywhere!

Oh blessed life, again renewed!
Oh tender voice without, within!
Oh sunny land, through tears bedewed
Dear Nature, purified of sin.

Ah me! Methinks, as shadows fade,
That I am "Hope" that spreads her wing.
Awake, sad heart! Be undismayed.
It is the Spring! The Spring! The Spring!

Catarrh starts in the nasal passages, affecting eyes, ears and throat, and is, in fact, the great enemy of the mucous membrane. Neglected colds in the head almost invariably precede catarrh, causing an excessive flow of mucous, and if the mucous discharge becomes interrupted the disagreeable results of catarrh will follow, such as bad breath, severe pain across forehead and about the eyes, a roaring and buzzing sound in the ears and oftentimes a very offensive discharge. Ely's Cream Balm is the acknowledged cure for these troubles.

THE EXPLOITS OF BRIGADIER GERARD.

HOW THE KING HELD THE BRIGADIER

By A. Conan Doyle.

(Copyright, 1895, by Bacheller, Johnson & Bacheller.)

IV.

One lesson which I have learned in my roaming life, my friends, is never to call anything a misfortune until you have seen the end of it. Is not every hour a fresh point of view? In this case I soon perceived that accident had done for me as much as the most profound cunning. My guards naturally commenced their search from the place where I had taken Sir Charles Meredith's coat, and from my hiding place I could see them hurrying along the road to that point. Not one of them ever dreamed that I could have doubled back from there, and I lay quite undisturbed in the little bush-covered cup at the summit of my knoll. The prisoners had, of course, learned of my escape, and all day exultant yells like that which had aroused me in the morning resounded over the moor, bearing a welcome message of sympathy and companionship to my ears. How little did they dream that on the top of that very mound, which they could see from their windows, was lying the comrade whose escape they were celebrating. As for me—I could look down upon this poor herd of idle warriors, as they paced about the great exercise yard or gathered in little groups, gesticulating joyfully over my success. Once I heard a howl of execration, and I saw Beaumont, his head all covered with bandages, being led across the yard by two of the warders. I cannot tell you the pleasure which this sight gave me, for it proved that I had not killed him, and also that the others knew the true story of what had passed. They had all known me too well to think that I could have abandoned him.

All that long day I lay behind my screen of bushes, listening to the bells which struck the hours below.

My pockets were filled with bread which I had saved out of my allowance, and on searching my borrowed overcoat I came upon a silver flask, full of excellent brandy and water, so that I was able to get through the day without hardship. The only other things in the pockets were a red silk handkerchief, a tortoise-shell snuff-box, and a blue envelope with a red seal, addressed to the Governor of Dartmouth Prison. As to the first two, I determined to send them back when I should return the coat itself. The letter caused me more perplexity, for the Governor had always shown me every courtesy, and it offended my sense of honor that I should interfere with his correspondence. I had almost made up my mind to leave it under a stone upon the roadway within musket-shot of the gate, this would guide them in their search for me, however, and so, on the whole, I saw no better way than just to carry the letter with me, in the hope that I might find some means of sending it back to him. Meanwhile I packed it safely away in my innermost pocket.

There was a warm sun to dry my clothes, and when night fell I was ready for my journey. I promise you that there were no mistakes this time. I took the stars for my guides, as every hussar should be taught to do, and I put eight good leagues between myself and the prison. My plan now was to obtain a complete suit of clothes from the first person whom I could waylay, and I should then find my way to the north coast, where there were many smugglers and fishermen who would be ready, to earn the reward which was paid by the Emperor to those who brought escaping prisoners across the Channel. I had taken the panache from my busby and had crushed it in, so that it might pass as a fur cap, but even with my fine overcoat I feared that sooner or later my uniform would betray me. My first care must be to provide myself with a complete disguise.

When day broke I saw a river upon my right and a small town upon my left—the blue smoke reeking above the roofs. I should have liked well to have entered it, because it would have interested me to see something of the customs of the English, which differ very much from those of other nations. Much as I should have wished, however, to have seen them eat their raw meat and sell their wives, it would have been dangerous until I had got rid of my uniform. My cap, my mustache and my speech would all help to betray me. I continued to travel toward the north, therefore, looking about me continually, but never catching a glimpse of my pursuers.

About midday I came to where, in a secluded valley, there stood a single small cottage, without any other building in sight. It was a neat little house, with a rustic porch and a small garden in front of it, with a swarm of cocks and hens. I lay down among the ferns and watched it, for it seemed to be exactly the kind of place where I might obtain what I wanted. My bread was finished and I was exceedingly hungry after my long journey. I determined, therefore, to make a short reconnaissance, and then to march up to this cottage, summon it to surrender, and help myself to all I needed. It could, at least, provide me with a chicken and with an omelette. My mouth watered at the thought.

As I lay here, wondering who could live in this lonely place, a brisk little fellow came out through the porch, accompanied by another older man, who carried two large clubs in his hands. These he handed to his young companion, who swung them up and down, and round and round, with extraordinary swiftness. The other, standing beside him, appeared to watch him with great attention, and occasionally to advise him. Finally he took a rope and began skipping like a girl, the other still gravely observing him. As you may think, I was utterly puzzled as to what these people could be, and could only surmise that one was a doctor and the other a patient, who had submitted himself to some singular method of treatment.

Well, as I lay watching and wondering, the older man brought out a great coat and held it while the other put it on and buttoned it to his chin. The day was a warmish one, so that this proceeding amazed me even more than the other. "At least," thought I, "it is evident that his exercise is over;" but, far from this being so, the man began to run, in spite of his heavy coat, and as it chanced, he came right over the moor in my direction. His companion had re-entered the house, so that this arrangement suited me admirably. I would take the small man's clothing and hurry on to some village where I could buy provisions. The chickens were certainly tempting, but still there were at least two men in the house, so perhaps it would be wiser for me, since I had no arms, to keep away from it.

I lay quietly then among the ferns. Presently I heard the steps of the runner, and there he was quite close to me, with his huge coat, and the perspiration running down his face. He seemed to be a very solid man—but small—so small that I feared that his clothes might be of little use to me. When I jumped out upon him he stopped running and looked at me in the greatest astonishment.

"Blow my dickey!" said he. "give it a name, guv'nor! Is it a circus, or what?" That was how he talked, though I cannot pretend to tell you what he meant by it.

"You will excuse me, sir," said I, "but I am under the necessity of asking you to give me your clothes."

"Give you what?" he cried.

"Your clothes."

"Well, if this doesn't lick cockfighting!" said he. "What am I to give you my clothes for?"

"Because I need them."

"And suppose I won't?"

"Be jabers," said I, "I shall have no choice but to take them."

He stood with his hands in the pockets of his greatcoat, and a most amused smile upon his square-jawed, clean-shaven face.

"You'll take them, will you?" said he. "You're a very leery cove, by the look of you, but I can tell you that you've got the wrong sow by the ear this time. I know who you are. You're a runaway Frenchy from the prison yonder, as any one could tell with half an eye. But you don't know who I am, else you wouldn't try such a plant as that. Why, man, I'm the Bristol Bustler, nine stone champion, and them's my training quarters down yonder."

He stared at me as if this announcement of his would have crushed me to the earth, but I smiled at him in my turn, and looked him up and down, with a twirl of my mustache.

"You may be a very brave man, sir," said I, "but when I tell you that you are opposed to Col. Etienne Gerard, of the Hussars of Conflans, you will see the necessity of giving up your clothes without further parley."

"Look here, Mounseer, drop it!" he cried; "this'll end by your getting pepper."

"Your clothes, sir, this instant!" I shouted, advancing fiercely upon him.

For answer he threw off his heavy greatcoat, and stood in a singular attitude, with one arm out and the other across his chest, looking at me with a curious smile. For myself, I knew nothing of the methods of fighting which these people have, but on horse or on foot, with arms or without them, I am always ready to take my own part. You understand that a soldier cannot always choose his own methods, and that it is time to howl when you are living among wolves. I rushed at him, therefore, with a warlike shout, and kicked him with both my feet. At the same moment my heels flew into the air, I saw as many flashes as at Austerlitz, and the back of my head came down with a crash upon a stone. After that I can remember nothing more.

Why Not make the baby fat? For the thin baby is delicate, and is not half so cunning.

Give the thin baby Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites.

Scott's Emulsion is as easy a food as milk. It is much more effective in making thin babies fat, and they like it.

If all the babies that have been made fat and chubby and well by Scott's Emulsion could only tell their story to the mothers of other sickly babies! There wouldn't be enough to go round.

Don't be persuaded to accept a substitute!

SKETCHES OF LINCOLN.

Another Strange and Amusing Love Affair.

HE MEETS MISS MARY S. OWENS.

The Lady's Letters to Herndon—Why She Refused Lincoln's Hand—The Suitor's Unique Side of the Case—Avowals of His Affection.

[From "The Life of Lincoln" by William H. Herndon and Jesse W. Weik. Copyright, 1888, by Jesse W. Weik. Copyright, 1892, by D. Appleton & Co.]

IX.

Mary S. Owens, a native of Green county, Ky., born Sept. 29, 1808, first became acquainted with Lincoln while on a visit to a sister, the wife of Bennet Able, an early settler in the country about New Salem. Lincoln was a frequent visitor at the house of Able and a warm friend of the family. During the visit of Miss Owens in 1833, though only remaining a month, she lingered long enough to make an impression on Lincoln, but returned to Kentucky and did not reappear in New Salem till 1836. Meanwhile Anne Rutledge had died, and Lincoln's eyes began to wander after the dark haired visitor from Kentucky. Miss Owens differed from Miss Rutledge in early education and the advantages of wealth. She had received an excellent education, her father being one of the wealthiest and most influential men of his time and locality. A portion of her schooling was obtained in a Catholic convent, though in religious faith she was a Baptist. According to a description furnished me by herself, she "had fair skin, deep blue eyes and dark curling hair; height, 5 feet 5 inches; weight, 150 pounds." She was good looking in girlhood, by many esteemed handsome, but became fleshier as she grew older. At the time of her second visit she reached New Salem on the day of the presidential election, passing the polls where the men had congregated, on the way to her sister's house.

One of Miss Owens' descendants is authority for the statement that Lincoln had boasted that "if Mary Owens ever returned to Illinois a second time he would marry her," that a report of this came to her ears, whereupon she left her Kentucky home with a predetermination to show him that she was not to be caught simply by the asking. On this second visit Lincoln paid her more marked attention than before, and his affections became more and more enlisted in her behalf. His honesty of purpose showed itself in all his efforts to win her hand. He told her of his poverty, and while advising her that life with him meant to her, who had been reared in comfort and plenty, great privation and sacrifice, yet he wished to secure her as a wife. She, however, felt that she did not entertain for him the same feeling that he professed for her, and that she ought to entertain before accepting him, and so declined his offer. Judging from his letters alone, it has been supposed by some that she, remembering the rumor she had heard of his determination to marry her, and not being fully certain of the sincerity of his purposes, may have purposely left him in the earlier stages of his courtship somewhat in uncertainty. Later on, however, when by his manner and repeated announcement to her that his hand and heart were at her disposal, he demonstrated the honesty and sincerity of his intentions, she declined his offer kindly, but with no uncertain meaning.

The first letter I received from Mrs. Vineyard—for she was married to Jesse Vineyard March 27, 1841—was written at Weston, Mo., May 1, 1866. Among other things, she says: "After quite a struggle with my feelings I have at last decided to send you the letters in my possession written by Mr. Lincoln, believing as I do that you are a gentleman of honor and will faithfully abide by all you have said. My associations with your lamented friend were in Menard county whilst visiting a sister who then resided near Petersburg. I have learned that my maiden name is now in your possession, and you have ere this no doubt been informed that I am a native Kentuckian."

The letters written by Lincoln not revealing enough details of the courtship, I prepared a list of questions for the lady to answer in order that the entire history of their relations might be clearly shown. I perhaps pressed her too closely in such a delicate matter, for she responded in a few days as follows:

WESTON, Mo., May 22, 1866.

Mr. W. H. Herndon:

MY DEAR SIR—Really you catechise me in true lawyer style, but I feel you will have the goodness to excuse me if I decline answering all your questions in detail, being well assured that few women would have ceded as much as I have under all the circumstances.

You say you have heard why our acquaintance terminated as it did. I, too, have heard the same bit of gossip, but I never used the remark which Madam Rumor says I did to Mr. Lincoln. I think I did on one occasion say to my sister, who was very anxious for us to be married, that I thought Mr. Lincoln was deficient in those little links which make up the chain of woman's happiness—at least it was so in my case—not that I believed it proceeded from a lack of goodness of heart, but his training had been different from mine; hence there was not that congeniality which would otherwise have existed.

From his own showing you perceive that his heart and hand were at my disposal, and I suppose that my feelings were not sufficiently enlisted to have the matter consummated. About the beginning of the year 1838 I left Illinois, at which time our acquaintance and correspondence ceased, without ever again being renewed.

My father, who resided in Green county, Ky., was a gentleman of considerable means, and I am persuaded that few persons placed a higher estimate on education than he did. Respectfully yours,
MARY S. VINEYARD.

The reference to Lincoln's deficiency "in those little links which make up the chain of woman's happiness" is of no little significance. It proved that his training had indeed been different from hers. In a short time I again wrote Mrs. Vineyard to inquire as to the truth of a story current in New Salem that one day as she and Mrs. Bowlin Greene were climbing up the hill to Able's house they were joined by Lincoln; that Mrs. Greene was obliged to carry her child, a fat baby boy, to the summit; that Lincoln strolled carelessly along, offering no assistance to the woman who bent under the load. Thereupon Miss Owens, censuring him for his neglect, reminded him that in her estimation he would not make a good husband. In due time came her answer:

WESTON, Mo., July 22, 1866.

Mr. W. H. Herndon:

DEAR SIR—I do not think you are pertinacious in asking the question relative to old Mrs. Bowlin Greene, because I wish to set you right on that question. Your information no doubt came through my cousin, Mr. Gaines Greene, who visited us last winter. Whilst here he was laughing at me about Mr. Lincoln and among other things spoke about the circumstance in connection with Mrs. Greene and child. My impression is now that I tacitly admitted it, for it was a season of trouble with me, and I gave but little heed to the matter. We never had any hard feelings towards each other that I know of. On no occasion did I say to Mr. Lincoln that I did not believe he would make a kind husband because he did not tender his services to Mrs. Greene in helping of her carry her babe. As I said to you in a former letter, I thought him lacking in smaller attentions. One circumstance presents itself just now to my mind's eye. There was a company of us going to Uncle Billy Greene's. Mr. Lincoln was riding with me, and we had a very bad branch to cross. The other gentlemen were very officious in seeing that their partners got safely over. We were behind, he riding in, never looking back to see how I got along. When I rode up beside him, I remarked: "You are a nice fellow! I suppose you did not care whether my neck was broken or not." He laughingly replied—I suppose by way of compliment—that he knew I was plenty smart to take care of myself.

In many things he was sensitive almost to a fault. He told me of an incident—that he was crossing a prairie one day and saw before him "a hog mired down," to use his own language. He was rather "fixed" [illegible] and he resolved that he would pass on without looking at the shoat. After he had gone [illegible] he said the feeling was irresistible, and he had to look back, and the poor thing seemed to say wistfully, "There now, my last hope is gone:" that he deliberately got down and relieved it from its difficulty.

In many things we were congenial spirits. In politics we saw eye to eye, though since then we differed as widely as the south is from the north. But methinks I hear you say, "Save me from a political woman!" So say I.

The last message I ever received from him was about a year after we parted in Illinois. Mrs. Able visited Kentucky, and he said to her in Springfield, "Tell your sister that I think she was a great fool because she did not stay here and marry me." Characteristic of the man! Respectfully yours,
MARY S. VINEYARD.

We have thus been favored with the lady's side of this case, and it is but fair that we should hear the testimony of her honest but ungainly suitor. Fortunately for us and for history we have his view of the case in a series of letters which have been preserved with zealous care by the lady's family. The first letter was written from Vandalia, Dec. 13, 1836, where the legislature to which he belonged was in session. After reciting the progress of legislation and the flattering prospect that then existed for the removal of the seat of government to Springfield, he gets down to personal matters by apprising her of his illness for a few days, coupled with the announcement that he is mortified by daily trips to the postoffice in quest of her letter, which it seemed never would arrive. "You see," he complains, "I am mad about that old letter yet. I don't like to risk you again. I'll try you once more anyhow." Further along in the course of the missive he says: "You recollect I mentioned at the outset of this letter that I had been unwell. That is the fact, though I believe I am about well now, but that, with other things I cannot account for, have conspired, and have gotten my spirits so low that I feel that I would rather be in any place in the world than here. I really cannot endure the thought of staying here ten weeks. Write back as soon as you get this, and, if possible, say something that will please me, for really I have not been pleased since I left you. This letter is so dry and stupid," he mournfully concludes, "that I am ashamed to send it, but with my present feelings I cannot do any better."

After the adjournment of the legislature he returned to Springfield, from which point it was a matter of easy driving to reach New Salem, where his ladylove was sojourning, and where he could pay his addresses in person. It should be borne in mind that he had by this time removed to Springfield, the county seat, and entered on the practice of the law. In the gloom resulting from lack of funds and the dim prospect for business he found time to communicate with the friend whose case was constantly uppermost in his mind. Here is one characteristic letter:

SPRINGFIELD, May 7, 1837.

FRIEND MARY—I have commenced two letters to send you before this, both of which displeased me before I got half done, and so I tore them up. The first, I thought, wasn't serious enough, and the second was on the other extreme. I shall send this, turn out as it may.

This thing of living in Springfield is rather a dull business, after all. At least it is so to me. I am quite as lonesome here as (I) ever was anywhere in my life. I have been spoken to by but one woman since I've been here, and should not have been by her if she could have avoided it. I've never been to church yet and probably shall not be soon. I stay away because I am conscious I should not know how to behave myself. I am often thinking of what we said of your coming to live at Springfield. I am afraid you would not be satisfied. There is a great deal of flourishing about in carriages here, which it would be your doom to see without sharing in it. You would have to be poor without the means of hiding your poverty. Do you believe you could bear that patiently? Whatever woman may cast her lot with mine, should any one ever do so, it is my intention to do all in my power to make her happy and contented, and there is nothing I can imagine that would make me more unhappy than to fail in the effort. I know I should be much happier with you than the way I am, provided I saw no signs of discontent in you.

What you have said to me may have been in jest, or I may have misunderstood it. If so, then let it be forgotten; if otherwise, I much wish you would think seriously before you decide. For my part, I have already decided. What I have said I will most positively abide by, provided you wish it. My opinion is you had better not do it. You have not been accustomed to hardship, and it may be more severe than you imagine. I know you are capable of thinking correctly on any subject, and if you deliberate maturely upon this before you decide then I am willing to abide your decision.

You must write me a good long letter after you get this. You have nothing else to do, and though it might not seem interesting to you after you have written it it would be a good deal of company in this busy wilderness. Tell your sister I don't want to hear any more about selling out and moving. That gives me the hypo whenever I think of it. Yours, etc.,
LINCOLN.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher, That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE.

Great Genius Displayed In Reforming France.

AT THE SUMMIT OF GREATNESS.

Created Consul For Life by Overwhelming Popular Decree—Treaty of Amiens—Roman Catholic Religion Restored—Prosperity Smiles on the French.

[Copyright, 1895, by John Clark Ridpath.]

XIV.—THE CONSULATE.

No question with which the First Consul had now to deal was more important than that of religion. France in process of restoration must have a faith. In the whirlwind of revolution, the old religious institutions of the people had been abolished. "As to me, M. le President," said Naigeon in the Convention one day, "I am free to avow myself an atheist." Procureur Chaumette had had his placard put over the gates of all graveyards thus, "Here is an eternal sleep." Atheism had been formally proclaimed. In the general anarchy, the Mother Church had been destroyed. Among the masses, however, religious beliefs and hopes were not extinguished; even Robespierre had had his ridiculous Feast of the Etre Supreme! Napoleon well calculated that reviving France must have a new religion; and what should the new be but the old?

No sooner was the new government established than the First Consul put out his hand with overtures to Rome. He proposed to Pius VII. a settlement of the religious status of the French. The celebrated Concordat, of the 15th of July, 1801, by which the Roman Catholic religion was restored in France was the result. The secular pacification by the treaty of Luneville was followed hard after by the conciliation of Rome. The essence of the agreement was that the new bishops—to be nominated by the First Consul and confirmed by the Pope—should swear allegiance to the Republic.

Nothing could surpass the activity of Napoleon in the first year of the Consulate. The energy displayed by the government was astounding. Everything was in process of reorganization. True, the ancient regime was extinct. True, the France that now arose was a new France, unlike the old. But it was the policy of the Consulate to revive as much as was valuable out of the former estate. The people were reanimated and inspired. A new life flourished on every hand. The vigor of the First Consul diffused itself through all the elements of society.

The educational system, also, felt the touch of the master hand. The schools were visited and reformed. New methods of instruction and discipline were suggested. Prizes were offered, and ambitious students were pensioned. The exiled members of the old Constituent Assembly and the Emigrants alike were invited to return. Peace was the order of the day. The civil condition was considered in all its parts. New institutions were created. A Consular Guard was established. Vaccination was introduced by the example and precept of Bonaparte. Streets, buildings, bridges, wharves, highways, parks, hospitals, cemeteries, sewers,—everything began to be planned, considered and performed with a rational activity which still surprises our century.

The First Consul was most anxious to effect a settlement with Great Britain. That done, peace might be universal. The summer of 1801 was consumed with overtures freely made by Napoleon and sullenly considered by Pitt. On the 1st of October the preliminaries of a peace were signed at London. Everything seemed to be about to subside into calm. Such, however, was the political condition of Europe that the hoped-for pacification lagged; and it was not until the 27th of March, 1802, that the TREATY OF AMIENS was finally concluded.

The parties to this famous compact, so spectacular and so specious, were Great Britain on the one side, and France, Spain and the Batavian Republic on the other. Of the last-named power Napoleon had been made vice-president two months previously—a fact indicative of his growing power south of the Alps. By the terms of the treaty, England agreed to restore all the conquests recently made by her, except Ceylon and Trinidad. These she was to retain. Malta she was to restore to the Knights of St. John. The French for their part were to relinquish Egypt, and to evacuate Naples and Rome. The Ionian Republic was to be acknowledged, and a general peace declared. For the moment it appeared that all Europe was about to emerge from the shadows of horrid war into sunshine and a new era of progress and happiness. Never was a historical situation more hopeful and hollow, more flattering and fallacious.

In the brief period of peace many things were done to arouse the enthusiasm of the French. The administration would have the nation forget the violence and sorrows of the past. That new French society, which had begun to display itself when the Societe des Victimes was organized, now burst the chrysalis and came forth in splendor. The First Consul was the center of the radiance. He had removed his residence from the Palace of the Luxembourg to the magnificent Tuileries. Paris was no longer lacking in brilliancy.

Napoleon showed the greatest genius in reforming the civil and military institutions. On the 19th of May, 1802, the Legion of Honor was authorized, and on the succeeding anniversary of the demolition of the Bastile, that famous order of soldiers was instituted. Such was the precision, the virtue, the energy, the skill and force of the administration that none might doubt or oppose it. The popularity of the First Consul became as immeasurable as the confidence in him was boundless. The industries of France flourished like a new spring spreading over May, and the funds of the Republic suddenly rose a hundred per cent!

The ambitions of any other than Bonaparte might here have made a pause. The lust for more might here have been appeased. He was really at the summit of human usefulness—and therefore at the summit of greatness. His birthday in the coming August would bring him to the end of his thirty-third year. He was young and handsome in person. He was warmed with enthusiasm. The bravest men and the most beautiful women were gathered around him—the one to flatter, and the other to adore. If the Jacobin was still fluid in his blood, it no longer expressed itself in democratic mutterings and proclamations. The long black hair of the whilom revolutionist was closely cropped. The haggard Italian face of the pauper student had given place to rosy cheek and smiling lip. Except in the incongruous black cravat of the otherwise well-dressed First Consul, the sansculotte was no longer discoverable at his evening receptions!

But the project was already on for an extension and augmentation of power. Glory must be added to honor. The "mountain devil" was busy in the breast of Bonaparte. In the alluring summer of 1802 the dream had already possessed him of a life tenure of the Consulate. The victorious general and popular chief executive would be consul ad finem. The Senate concurred in the proposal; and a consultum was prepared. There was a dispute whether it should be for ten years or for life; and in this form the question was to be submitted to the people. A plebiscite was sent forth, and the French nation was asked to pass judgment on its favorite. "Napoleon, sera-t-il Consul a Vie?" Such was the inscription prepared and put up over all the voting places in France. "Napoleon, shall he be Consul for Life?"

An extraordinary spectacle was witnessed. On the 4th of August, 1802, the election was held. The voters in France numbered 3,577,259; and of these 3,368,185 voted in the affirmative, leaving only 209,074 in the negative! It was perhaps the most overwhelming popular decree ever registered by a people. True, the soldiers voted—voted for their idol. True, the clientele of the Consulate voted!—voted for the master. True, the Revolution voted—voted for its offspring. True, the New Order voted—voted for its hope. But nevertheless, the people voted—voted for their Man! Napoleon might well matter: "Whose are the votes opposed to me? Those of ideologists, Jacobins and peculators under the Directory!" What he said was true!

But not all, in the meantime, had been well with the Republic—and with him. Fortune in some things had gone against the French. The coveted occupation of Egypt had tottered and fallen. General Menou, who succeeded to the command of the army in that country after the assassination of Kleber, had behaved with singular fatuity. Failing to perceive that eccentricity is not genius, he had turned Mohammedan, and taken the name of Abdallah Bey. He sank into inaction at Alexandria; and when, in March of 1801, Admiral Keith and Sir Ralph Abercromby landed at Aboukir and came against him, he was defeated in battle, and the prospects of the French in Egypt were ruined.

Napoleon heard of the Egyptian disaster with anger and mortification. His chagrin was little relieved by the death of Abercromby, who was fatally wounded in the battle of Alexandria, or by the foolish assurances of Menou that all was going well. It became necessary for the French colony to evacuate Egypt, and this was done on the 30th of August, 1801. The First Consul made no strenuous effort to retain his conquest in Africa; for the preliminaries of peace with England were now about to be signed; the dream of French supremacy in the land of the Pharaohs was forever dissipated.

The year 1802 has been cited as the most glorious in French history. It was certainly the most fertile in promise. Why should not the treaty of Amiens become the happy date of a new era for mankind? France was regenerated. England had gold and maritime glory. Italy had emancipation. Germany had experience—if nothing better. Russia had her pacific Alexander I., her Suwaroff, and her new provinces of Georgia. America had a democrat for President, and a possible Louisiana. But all this was as hollow as an echo of the nightwind. Strange that the vast volume of historical forces should be turned in this direction and in that by the interposition of straws and pebbles!

The fatal thing in the treaty of Amiens was that it promised—promised, and did not perform. There were things to be done; and these were not done. Preternatural suspicion seized on the cabinets of all Europe. Note the circumstances: England in the preceding war had emancipated the negroes of Hayti. Toussaint l'Ouverture, leader of the natives, had been made commander-in-chief by the French, in 1797. Independence was reached under the patronage of France; but when Bonaparte became First Consul, an act was passed in the French Council for the restoration of slavery in the island; and an army under General Leclerc, brother-in-law of Bonaparte, was sent to Samana to enforce the decree. Toussaint was put down, treacherously seized and taken to France, where he presently died in prison. The civil conflict continued in Hayti; the yellow fever broke out, and an English fleet appeared off the coast. Notwithstanding the peace of Amiens, here was war.

In the meantime, Sebastiani, Napoleon's agent in the East, came back to Paris, and published in The Moniteur a report in which there was a hint of the purpose of France to reoccupy Egypt! Moreover, the First Consul proceeded to divide Piedmont into Departments, after the French manner—as though the country were altogether French. To the complaints of Lord Whitworth, the English ambassador, he simply answered, "These things are only bagatelles." England hereupon—the treaty of Amiens to the contrary notwithstanding—refused to give back Malta to the Knights of St. John. This was flagrant. She had agreed to do so; and Napoleon insisted that she must. Moreover, the Cape of Good Hope, the "caravansary of the Indies," was not surrendered. It became apparent that Great Britain would not keep her compact; and this signified the imminent renewal of war. Bonaparte himself foresaw the coming storm. In his eagerness to prepare for it—seeing the exposures of the French empire in North America—he made haste to sell to the United States for 60,000,000 francs the vast domain stretching from the Mississippi to the Pacific.—Pitt got Malta, Napoleon an excuse, and Jefferson Louisiana!

COURT COULDN'T MOVE HIM.

Ex-Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue Murphy, Who Guarded His Records, Speaks in Praise of Paine's Celery Compound.

Ex-collector of internal revenue Thomas F. Murphy of Maine, who was brought into prominence all over the country during President Cleveland's first administration by refusing to allow certain civil officials to peruse his records, heartily indorses Paine's celery compound.

Mr. Murphy is a keen observer. He is a writer of no mean ability, has been employed as editor and editorial writer on several papers, is recognized troughout Maine as a forcible and convincing speaker, and is universally liked. At present he represents a big Boston house on the road, where his warm geniality makes him welcome to every hotel and railway train.

In the smoking compartment of a parlor car last week he was praising Paine's celery compound to a fellow passenger. The person to whom he addressed his conversation had been laid up with the grip. The malady left him in a bad way, a sort of depression of spirits and a disinclination for business.

"I felt the same way," said Mr. Murphy. "After wrestling a week with the grip it left me depressed and weak. One flight of stairs was enough to make me puff and wheeze like a leaky bellows. A mile walk would almost floor me. Headaches began the moment I got out of bed, and I felt about as mean as any one could for the whole day. Hearing so much about Paine's celery compound I made up my mind to try it, and I'll tell you how it worked. It was like close applications of soothing lotions to a scorched finger. After a few doses I found that on retiring I soon dropped into sound, refreshing sleep. In less than a week I was myself again. My eyes, which are none too strong at their best, but which burned and ached till I began taking Paine's celery compound, assumed their normal condition and really seemed stronger than before the grip marked me for a victim. I can walk five miles now and feel none the worse for it.

"My wife and boy are taking Paine's celery compound this spring."

A Remarkable Cure of Rheumatism.

From the Groton Connecticut Review.—"David Lewis, who has been afflicted all winter by rheumatism, is out again and all due to one of the medicines advertised in our columns. After trying everything possible, he used Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which has relieved him of all pain, from which he was a constant sufferer and promises to make him fit for duty soon. We know David has been a great sufferer and are glad to see him around again." For sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy.

Mr. D. Wiley, ex-postmaster, Black Breek, N. C., was so badly afflicted with rheumatism that he was only able to hobble around with canes, and even then it caused him great pain. After using Chamberlain's Pain Balm he was so much improved that he threw away his canes. He says this liniment did him more good than all other medicine and treatment put together. For sale at 50 cents per bottle at Reynolds's Pharmacy.

Agreeably Surprised.

"I had a very severe cold on my lungs that caused much soreness and gave me considerable uneasiness in regard to the result," says Mr. T. E. Smith, of Billerica, Mass. "A local druggist called my attention to Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and on his recommendation I gave the remedy a careful trial. The result surprised me; I recovered entirely in three days." 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy.

It Did the Business.

Mr. J. H. Cobb, publisher of the Mirror, at Brockton, N. Y., says: "For nearly two years the Mirror has been publishing the advertisements of Chamberlain's Remedies. A few days ago the writer was suffering from a bowel trouble and resorted to an old remedy which did not prove efficacious; finally he tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and two doses did the business, checking it completely. For sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy.

YELL, YE KRANKS, YELL!

The Y. M. C. A. Baseball Team Will Put Up the Genuine Article.

The Y. M. C. A. baseball team toyed with a picked nine at a practice game on the Crescent Oval Saturday afternoon. For six innings the Y.M.C A's ran the bases in picnic parties while their opponents chased the twirling sphere to all points of the compass, and at the end the score book recorded 18 runs for the Y. M. C. A. team and three for the players who had been running everywhere but to the bases.

The picked nine were a lot of ambitious young men who lost only becasue they were outclassed. The most interesting part of the contest was the pitching of Charles Dupee, who is to take John McLaughlin's place in the box for the Y. M. C. A's. This was the first time he had played with the team, and judging from his work Saturday afternoon he has the right sort of stuff in him to make a puzzler for the average batter he will face during the season. Cool and collected, and not easily rattled, he throws a swift ball that has all the intricate and various "shoots" which coax the batter to cut the air more often than to hit the ball. Though of course his balls will be found with greater ease by players more evenly matched, yet it is safe to say that his work, with good field support, will give the team a good record at the end of the season.

Rev. Mr. McKelvey of Warren Chapel held down first base in the game Saturday, and played with a vim that made his friends remember his work on the Princeton College team. It is probable that Mr. McKelvey will become a regular member of the team, though he will be placed elsewhere than on first base because of his small stature.

Some of the ludicrous events of Saturday's game was when George Schoonmaker got hit on the "cocanut" with a ball, but his football hair saved him from a cracked skull. "Ted" Freeman made a great sacrifice when be slid to second base on his new $7 pair of pants to escape a put out and gathered up a bushel or two of soil to take home for the spinach beds.

The players and positions were:

Y. M. C. A.	Position.	Picked Team.
Schoonmaker	Shortstop	Sprowl
Davis	Centrefield	C. P. Sutphen
Dupee	Pitcher	C. Sutphen
Eagan	Catcher	Mumford
Steiner	Third base	Giles
Freeman	Second base	Swaim
Richardson	Rightfield	Rockwell
Stevens	Leftfield	Noname
McKelvey	First base	Douglas

The score by innings was:

Y. M. C. A.	0	0	6	8	3	1	—	18
Picked Team	1	0	0	1	0	1	—	3

It is calculated that by next Saturday the uniforms of the Y. M. C. A. club will have arrived, and a game will be arranged with a good club for the afternoon.

The Crescent baseball team of this city went to Westfield Saturday afternoon, where they were defeated by a local team by a score of 13 to 5, the Plainfield boys losing through costly errors. Only two base hits were made off of Van Horn, who was in the box for the Crescents. The score:

Westfield	3	7	0	0	1	2	0	0	0—13
Crescents	0	0	0	3	0	1	0	1	0—5

The Crescents will be reorganized this week, and H. Lyons elected to the captainship.

AN INCREASE IN WAGES.

Walter Scott Gives His Employes the Benefit of Increased Business.

The employes of the Scott Printing Machine Works who accepted a reduction in wages some weeks ago, as was exclusively reported in The Daily Press, were notified last Saturday night that commencing this morning all workmen who were effected by the reduction, would receive an increase of 10 cents a day.

The announcement was received with much gratification by all who come under the scope of the new order. The decrease in salaries was made at a time when business was stagnant, but since then trade has become more brisk and Mr. Scott, with his accustomed fairness, immediately gave the workmen the benefit of it. As the volume of business increases the wages will be gradually increased until the employes are paid the old schedule of rates. The reductions that were made varied from 15 to 40 cents a day, according to the kind of work that the men were employed on.

TEMPTATION TOO MUCH.

John Hibbitts Appropriated Jersey Central Money.

MADE FALSE ENTRIES IN THE BOOKS.

The Discrepancies Were Discovered Saturday Morning by Auditor Hartney, and Hibbitts Immediately Left Town—Amount of Defalcation Not Stated—His Action a Great Surprise.

The strange and sudden disappearance of John Hibbitts, who was employed by Station Agent Joseph A. Haynes as cashier and special agent at the freight house, which occurred Saturday morning just before 11, has caused quite a sensation.

Traveling Auditor Hartney for the Central, who visits each department once a year, came to Plainfield Friday to examine the books in the freight house which have been in charge of Mr. Hibbitts.

Saturday morning he resumed the work, and while doing this he noticed there was a larger amount placed on the cash book than there was cash and receipts to show for.

He asked Mr. Haynes, who was present, to explain it, but he was unable to as he had no knowledge in detail of the accounts, having placed implicit confidence in Mr. Hibbitts's abilities and honesty. Mr. Haynes then called for the latter to explain the difference, and as he did not come immediately, it was thought that he was looking up the necessary papers to compare notes. Considerable time elapsed, and when Auditor Hartney turned around to look for him, he had disappeared.

It was thought that he had stepped out of the office and would return in a moment, but after considerable time had elapsed his absense aroused suspicion that something was radically wrong. After a little investigation it was found that he had left town as soon as the discrepancies were discovered.

No effort was made to capture him and his sureties, the Fidelity Title and Trust Company, were at once notified, and they made good the amount of the bond.

The difference in the accounts thus far discovered is the amount of a bill which was paid by Boice, Runyon & Co., but the railroad officials refuse to state the amount.

Mr. Hartney at first thought that the latter's bill had not been paid and called on the firm to make inquiries, but found their accounts straight.

Mr. Haynes told a Daily Press reporter this morning that he had no hesitation in saying that the accounts had been falsified, but he was not prepared to state the amount of the shortage.

Mr. Hibbitts has been employed at the freight house about 4 years, taking a small position at first and gradually working himself up.

When Andrew Kenney left the office Mr. Hibbitts was promoted to cashier and special agent, for which he received good compensation. He has always been steady in his habits, and fully trusted by his employer. He was well known in Plainfield and large amounts of money passed through his hands. His friends are unable to give any cause for his actions, as he never gave any appearance in his business or personal life, that would lead them to account for his strange conduct.

Chief Grant who went to Bound Brook Saturday morning on the 11 train, saw Mr. Hibbitts on the train, but thought he was going to see the wreck and nothing strange was thought of it; in fact nothing was known at the time about the affair outside of the freight office. Since that time he has not been seen and his whereabouts are a mystery.

A Daily Press reporter called at Mr. Hibbitts's home on Liberty street this afternoon and learned that no news of him had been received by his parents. They are broken hearted over the strange actions of their son and can give no reasons for them. They are hoping that he will write to them or to some of his friends.

Death of Mrs. J. S. VanHorn.

The death occurred last evening of Mrs. J. S. VanHorn in her sixty-first year, which was caused by heart trouble. A husband and one son, Samuel Proud, survive her. FOR SEWAGE PURPOSES.

The Smock Farm Has Been Purchased by the City Representatives.

A deal was consummated last Friday by the city officials whereby the Smock farm was purchased of Mrs. Dr. Penfield of Park avenue for sewage purposes. The purchase consists of 17 acres of land which is bordered on the south by West Front street, on the north by Green brook, on the west by Rock avenue, and on the east by the property of Isaac Brokaw. This purchase, together with the land bought of the Mutual Life Insurance Company some time ago, which is situated on the opposite side of Rock avenue will give the city plenty of property for sewage disposal.

Negotiations have been going on for some time between the Councilmen and Mrs. Penfield for acquiring the farm for these purposes, but until last week it was impossible for them to come to an agreement on the amount to be paid. The price finally paid was between $8,000 and $9,000.

BOWLING ON THE GREEN.

Mr and Mrs. Schepflin Provided This Pleasant Pastime Saturday.

The Middlesex Bowling Club, the New Jersey Bowling Club and a few other guests were entertained Saturday afternoon by Mr. and Mrs. Christian Schepflin at their home in Dunellen. The principal pastime enjoyed was bowling on the green.

The members of the Middlesex club were H. Brewster Willis, skip, Peter Fisk, Christian Schepflin and Dr. Richter. Those of the New Jersey club were Wm. Elliott, skip, James Smyth, John Young and Wm. Low. In the game between the two clubs Middlesex made a score of 21 and New Jersey 11.

A two-men team made up of John Winning and Alexander Murray against Col. Charles H. Moore and Ralph W. Booth, resulted in a victory for the latter by a score of 21 to 18.

A three-men team was then formed as follows: John Winning, Charles Westervelt and Ralph Booth against Col. Moore, Dr. Pettit and Alexander Murray. The first team won by a score of 21 to 16, and a second game was played which resulted in a victory for Col. Moore's team.

Mr Winning is the chief engineer of the White Star Steamship Company of England, and is a very pleasant gentleman to meet. He is considered to be the most expert bowler in England, and Col. Moore and his friends are to be congratulated on having defeated him.

HOTEL GRENADA IMPROVEMENTS.

Extensive and Desirable Alterations to Be Made at This Popular House.

Next week the ground floor of the Hotel Grenada will undergo extensive alterations, which will make it much more desirable and convenient for transient and family trade. Where the dining room is now situated a partition will be built in the centre of the room and the office and reading room removed there, making a handsome front of the centre store. The dining room will be placed back of the office, and the present small room in the rear used for this purpose. The cafe will then be extended to the street front and a screen and swinging doors built in front of the bar, thus giving its patrons access from the street, instead of walking through the cluttered office as is now the case. The rooms will be redecorated and the office carpeted so that when the alterations are completed they will make an imposing front.

FANWOOD TO BE A BOROUGH

Saturday's Election Will Give the Village a Separate Government.

The Fanwood question of "Borough" or "No Borough" was settled Saturday afternoon from 2 to 7 at the polls, when the borough advocates won a victory by polling 14 more votes than those who were opposed to the village inhabitants withdrawing from the township and forming a municipal government of their own.

The question has long been agitated among the Fanwood people and at the election Saturday afternoon the supporters of each side of the movement worked hard in canvassing for votes at the polls. All the various effects of what a seperation of the village from the township implief have been fully published in the Daily Press.

The vote was as follows: Total votes cast, 63; rejected, 1; for borough, 38; against borough, 24.

In the township there are 75 entitled to vote.

An election for Borough Commissioners will be called at an early date.

NO NEED TO WORK NOW.

A Man Looking for Work Proved to be a Thief.

CLAIMED TO BE A CARPENTER.

Secured Board With Mrs. Ralph Conover on the Strength of a Job He Didn't Have, and Then Stole the Servant Girl's Jewelry—No Trace of His Identity.

A stranger came to Plainfield last Friday seeking work. He represented himself to be a carpenter and went among several of the builders asking for work. The firm of Utzinger & Kline of North Plainfield were among those whom he asked. They told him that at present they had nothing they could employ him at, but something might turn up in a few days.

He then went to Nelson Brothers grocery store on Somerset street and inquired where he could secure board. David Conover of Manning avenue happened to be present and told him that his mother, Mrs. Ralph Conover of 16 Jackson avenue, occasionally took boarders and she might accommodate him.

The stranger called on Mrs. Conover Friday afternoon and told her he had secured employment with Utzinger & Kline to work on several new houses they are building in Watchung Park, and that he would like to get board near his work. He showed Mrs. Conover the firm's business card.

After making arrangements for board he told her he would go down town and telegraph for his trunk, which he said was in Philadelphia, and that he would be back in about a half hour. He returned as he said he would.

After supper he remained in the house talking with the Conovers until time to retire, when he was shown to his room.

He said Saturday was a short day for carpenters and he would not go to work before 8 in the morning. However, he arose about 5 and came down stairs just after Mrs. Conover did, and was in the sitting room, reading.

He had his breakfast about 7, and shortly after, while the family were in the basement, he called to them and said he was going to work, but would be back about 12 for dinner.

Shortly after his departure the girl employed at Conover's went to her room to see if her watch was right with the fire gong, when she discovered that it was missing. She informed the family, and they at once suspected the stranger, but he could not be found. Later in the day the girl missed two very valuable gold pins, which were taken at the same time.

A search was made, but nothing could be found or learned of the stranger's whereabouts.

Mr. Brown's Helpful Talk.

Charles B. Brown of Minneapolis conducted the Y. M. C. A. meeting yesterday afternoon, and was greeted by a large number of his old friends who thoroughly enjoyed his talk, which was taken from the text, Acts 26:4, relating to the conversion of Paul on his way to Damascus. His remarks were excellent and very helpful to all; he told of many interesting incidents in connection with his work in the west. At the close of the meeting many stopped to meet Mr. Brown and renew their acquaintance.

Remembered By His Scholars.

The Sunday-school class formerly taught by Charles B. Brown had a very handsome testimonial made in ink recently, and yesterday afternoon at the close of the Y. M. C. A. meeting, Clarence S. Johnson on behalf of the class presented him with it. Mr. Brown fully appreciated the gift and expressed much pleasure at being so kindly remembered.

COLLIDED WITH SENATOR ADRAIN.

Two Plainfield Cyclists Have a Narrow Escape From Serious Injury.

Niel Head and Fred Wharton, two employes of the Pond Tool Machine Works, started out Saturday afternoon to enjoy a bicycle ride to New Brunswick. As they were coasting down the hill just before entering the city Senator Adrain was driving across the bridge.

The bicyclists steered out to the right to pass the vehicle, but the Senator evidently did not see them approaching, for as he came near he turned directly in front of them to drive into a side street. The move was so sudden and unexpected to the riders that they were unable to stop or steer clear of the obstruction. Head, who was in the lead, ran into the buggy and was thrown to the ground with great force, and Wharton, who was just behind, ran into him.

Head struck on his head and was knocked insensible, remaining in that condition for a half-hour before he could be resusticated. Wharton escaped with nothing more serious than a few bruises. Both wheels were wrecked and the riders were compelled to return home by train.

On their arrival here Head went to Lister's bicycle store and purchased an Elmore wheel. Though a painful lump was formed on his head he was able to go to work this morning.

Another Bicycle Accident.

Miss Sarah Ettinger of Cottage place met with a serious accident yesterday while riding a tricycle. She was coasting down a hill on Cottage place near Richmond street, when some boys came up behind her and gave her a push. She was thrown from the wheel, and came down with much force, breaking her arm in two places. Dr. Tomlinson was called and recuced the fracture.

Bicycle Accident Number Three.

George L. Babcock, a machinist, who is training to enter the races on Memorial Day, was riding on South avenue near Netherwood yesterday at a high rate of speed. There was a horse and wagon standing in the gutter, owned by a Mr. Lambert of Scotch Plains. Mr. Babcock was leaning very low and did not see the rig. A collision resulted and the cycler received a cut three inches deep in his head. John Powers who lives nearby saw the accident and came out at once, and assisted Babcock into the house. Dr. E. W. Hedges was sent for and took the necessary stitches in the cut. He was able to reach home shortly afterward.

A GOSPEL SERMON

Rev. Dr. Booth Preaches at Pittsburg.

Christ Lifted Up To Draw the World Unto Him, His Subject—An Audience of Grey-Headed Ministers Listen to the Words of the New Moderator.

Pittsburg, May 20.—The commissioners to the one hundred and seventh Presbyterian general assembly distributed themselves yesterday over the city taking in the sermons of the churches' greatest preachers. Moderator Booth attracted the largest number. His congregation was an audience of grey-headed ministers, many of them worthy to be called fathers of the church. It was an audience such as a Presbyterian preacher may hope to face but once in his existence as it can be gathered only by the honored name of moderator. Dr. Booth departed from the rule of moderators and preached a gospel sermon. Previous moderators, led by the burning interests in the theological disputes before the assemblies which they have been called to moderate, have chosen to defend the faith of the church in the Bible and standards. But Dr. Booth picked out a theme that might suit any pastor in any pulpit far removed from the theological controversy and doctrinal strife. His subject was: "Christ lifted up to draw the world unto Him." He said in substance as follows:

Dr. Booth's Sermon.

Let it be conceded that these words are authentic and by an inevitable inference they separate Him from all other men; it must be conceded that they imply a strength and intensity of self-assertion which has no parallel in history. Consider the facts which accompanied this lofty proclamation, at the very period when an unusual agitation concerning Him was exercising the minds of His countrymen—at this very crisis of his public ministry. He begins to speak of the conclusion of His course on earth and to foretell with calmness His ignominious, painful death. In the opinion of His disciples, His life had been essential to His triumphs. But by His testimonial now, they learn that death, not life, was the condition on which His plans depended. Now, it is evident from this assertion that whatever be our estimate of Christ, His consciousness was marvelously separated from the consciousness of man. For Christ to die—as he regarded it—was to accomplish the great purpose of His life.

More Marvelous Than Miracles.

For Christ to die upon the cross, as he regarded it, was to enthrone himself upon the hearts of coming ages, and to bind the world unto His sway. On any other supposition than that He was severely conscious of something exceptional in His position—of something which raised Him above the natural experience of men; this expectation which He thus declared would seem to be more marvelous than any miracle.

His Redeeming Work.

No mere man, though He were the wisest, the holiest of His race could have cherished these expectations or assumed this claim, without forfeiting all claim to self-respect and truthfulness. But they suit well the character and the work of Christ. With this conviction solidly established let us then direct attention to the great truth which Christ proclaims, that we may impress upon our minds the meaning of His death and the world wide attraction of His cross. Let us take notice—first, that Christ here presents His death upon the cross as the indispensable necessity of his great plan, the essential means of His redeeming work.

To Draw All Men Unto Him.

He tells His hearers that He must die, must die on the cross, in order that He may accomplish the result of drawing all men unto Him. Step by step He moved on to the consumation, disclosing by one sign and another each estimate of His supreme importance to His mission and to the welfare of the race. He was lifted up upon the cross as on a lofty altar to be the sacrificial lamb of God, to make atonement for the sins of man. It is this truth alone which has forced the centuries one by one to bow their heads before His cross and has emblazoned on the standards, temples and and shrines of an advancing civilization, that sign of Roman infamy, making it the symbol of reconciliation to the world.

The Future of the Cross.

Lifted to the cross as a propitiation from sins and rising thence to carry on His great redeeming work before the throne, Christ is thus qualified and only thus—to be the centre of attraction to a race which reels under the burden of transmitted, and voluntary sins—to an eternal doom—does not imply compulsion against which the free will cannot struggle, but intense moral persuasion making an appeal which can be accepted or withstood. Nor does it teach that all will actually come to Christ, but that an appeal shall go forth from His cross, which shall enter as a consoling element into the institutions of the world, into the hopes and destinies of men and be the mightiest force in human history. This is the future of the cross as He predicted it. Now let us trace the scene of the amazing prophecy and its fulfillment.

Spread Far and Wide.

There can be no question that Christ crucified, has attracted to Himself the attention of mankind in all the ages and never more than in the nineteenth century. In less than fifty years from the death of Christ the tidings that He died on Calvary had spread far and wide over the Roman empire. Before 300 years had passed the attraction of the cross had triumphed over the traditions of the Jew—the culture of the Greek—the persecution of the Roman and was acknowledged as the glory of the empire.

The Supremacy of Christ.

A thousand things have flourished since that seemed immortal—nothing of all that held dominion in those far off ages now commands the serious thoughts of man—except the cross of Christ. But that stands at the center yet—the cross with its ideas and influences are standing now as the great moral force whose domain is the world. On the side of the supreme authority, the supremacy of Christ the crucified and ascended Savior is solidly established. But when we shift our standpoint and look at the practical reality of power as exercised by Christ, do we not find another state of things? I answer no—not in the least, for consider these tangible elements of power which Christ is exercising now on earth.

The Christian Faith.

It cannot be denied that the races who control the world are thoroughly committed to the Christian faith. It cannot be denied that the great impulses to move the world are also emanating from the cross of Christ. When the doctrine of the cross is preached—freedom awakes to consciousness and the life-giving spirit of liberty to organize the institutions which defend the rights of men. Satan's empire feels no shock from any quarter but that which comes from the steady penetration of the cross—that is the lever which is underneath the world.

JUDGMENT FOR MRS. DANIELS.

A Suit Which Recalls the Defalcation of Treasurer Dann.

Buffalo, May 20.—Justice Green has handed down a decision in an action brought by Mary E. Daniels, wife of Congressman Charles Daniels, against the Empire State Savings bank, which recalls the defalcation of Treasurer Dann and the wreck of the old National Savings bank. The case is decided in Mrs. Daniels' favor. In June, 1892, Mrs. Daniels deposited with the National Savings bank $10,000 which she had received for the discharge of a mortgage. When the bank suspended it was found that the amount had not been credited to Mrs. Daniels' account and the only record of it was a memorandum found in the vault. The main question to be determined was whether the money was deposited for the account of the plaintiff or only left with Mr. Dann for safe keeping. The trustees of the reorganized bank refused to pay Mrs. Daniels' claim and the suit was brought to recover the amount with interest. The judge holds that the trustees had no right to refuse payment of the claim and directs judgment in her favor.

AFFAIRS AT ST. JOHNS.

Death of Hon. Moses Monroe, a Leading Figure in Politics.

St. Johns, N. F., May 20.—The Whiteway party have decided to present a retrenchment scheme involving reductions amounting to $400,000 yearly to the legislature to-morrow. It is regarded as impossible to retrench to that extent, and the supposition is that the introduction of the scheme is merely a preliminary to the acceptance of a royal commission. The Whiteway ites are despondent over Secretary Boad's failure to obtain a loan. The Hon. Moses Monroe, for many years a member of the legislative council, and one of the largest merchants in St. Johns, died yesterday. He was a leading figure in politics and was also the largest employer of labor in city. His death will probably throw a large number of persons out of employment. It is regarded as the greatest loss to the country since the financial disaster. Mr. Monroe was the only sufferer from that disaster who agreed to pay his creditors in full. All others compromised with their creditors.

GUILTY OF INTOXICATION.

Republicans Report That Charge—Populists Say Medicine.

Topeka, May 20.—The legislative committee appointed by Gov. Morrill to investigate the charge against Senator Rogers, a regent of the state university, charged with drunkenness by Chairman Leland, of the republican state central committee, made its report yesterday, finding Rogers guilty of using intoxicating liquors to excess. This was the report of the Republican majority, while the populist minority reported that Rogers took whisky and quinine for medicinal use. Rogers will fight his removal in the courts.

NEVER ON A RAILROAD TRAIN.

Parsley Was a Remarkable Character in Many Respects.

Baltimore, May 20.—Gen. W. Parsley, jr., who died at Brookville, Montgomery county, Thursday, and whose funeral took place yesterday, was, in some respects, a remarkable character. He was 41 years of age, a shoemaker by trade, and had accumulated considerable means, yet he had never been on a railroad car nor in a court room. Once in his life he had driven to Washington, eighteen miles distant, the only time he was outside the confines of his native county.

RECALLED TO THE VATICAN.

Mgr. Agliardi To Be Succeeded at Vienna by the Brussels Nuncio.

Vienna, May 20.—Monsigner Agiardi, the papal nuncio here, whose utterances in Hungary in opposition to the ecclesiastical bills precipitated the recent political crisis in that kingdom and led to the resignation of Count Kalnoky, the imperial foreign minister, has been recalled by the vatican. It is said that the nuncio at Brussels will succeed him.

Indicted for Embezzlement.

Dayton, O., May 20.—The grand jury has returned indictments against Charles E. Swadener and Charles Deadoing, attorneys, on a charge of embezzlement. A short time ago these lawyers were disbarred from practice for misappropriating clients' funds to the amount of $50,000. William M. Douglas, another attorney, has been arrested and three new counts of forgery returned against him.

Will Take Des Moines' Bond Issue.

Des Moines, Ia., May 20.—G. Nelson Pannell, representing the banking firm of Farson, Leach & Co. of Chicago and New York, has accepted an option given by the city council and will take the entire issue of Des Moines bonds. These are $555,000 in refunding bonds and $300,000 of warrant bonds, all to draw 4 per cent. interest.

Temporarily Appointment Clerk.

Washington, May 20.—James A. Wetmore, of New York, a clerk in the chief clerk's office, treasury department, has been designated to act temporarily as appointment clerk of the treasury department, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Herman Kretz.

CUBANS ARE ELATED

De Quesada Will Command Their Forces.

Believed To Have a Large Supply of Troops, Ammunition and Money—Spain Knows Him and Fears Him—Well Acquainted with the Situation, Having Done Service Before.

New York, May 19.—Gen. Ricardo De Quesada was about the most sought after man at the Fifth Avenue hotel Sunday. As ex-secretary of war of Venezuela and a brother of the president of that republic under the first revolution, he would naturally attract attention, but when the news became generally known that he was here to offer himself to the Cuban insurgents as a volunteer, and that he was bringing large supplies of troops, ammunition and money to them, and that he would in all probability receive charge of the insurgent forces, the interest is materially deepened. Many Cubans and South Americans called on the general during the day, and it is understood that he received many offers of financial and personal assistance.

Cubans Highly Elated.

The Cubans are highly elated over their new ally and say that Spain already knows him and fears him. During the last war he landed four of the biggest expeditions that went to Cuba. He was personally in many of the pitched battles that took place during that war, and, considering the odds against him, made a wonderful showing.

To Command the Rebel Forces.

General Quesada when seen this morning said: "I came here as a volunteer. My plans are not settled, and if they were I would not tell you, for I do not want the Spanish government to sidetrack me. I shall have command of the troops, in all probability, and shall play only the part of sympathizer who believes in downing oppression at every opportunity." General Quesada's friends are more outspoken than he and declare confidently that he will have entire charge of the insurgent forces.

Enjoys Perfect Peace.

Continuing, the general said: "Venezuela to-day enjoys perfect peace. General Crespo, who is at the head of the government, has selected lately such a competent cabinet that it has re-established confidence in the country and placed on an excellent footing the credit of the country through the securities of good administration, inspired by the men who control the reins of government. Business has resumed its habitual activity, and the national debt rises continually in value on account of the confidence which is noticeably growing in the republic.

Rely on the Monroe Doctrine.

"As to the Guiana question and the pretensions of England, Venezuela is confident of her rights because she does not believe that at the end of this century, usurpation and conquests can be realized that recall memories of the dark ages. It is generally believed in Venezuela that the United States' loyalty to the Monroe doctrine would shield the republic against English invasion, and would obtain the concession that England would accept the solution of the question through arbitration that Venezuela has asked for during past years.

Will Fight if Necessary.

"But should the republic see itself unaided and in the necessity of defending its territory by force of arms, I, who know the people from having lived in close contact with them for twenty years, assure you that they would all die at the barriers before acceding to England's pretensions. If this happens, all the glory would be for Venezuela, but the shame would be for those nations who permitted the consummation of such a sacrifice without fulfilling the duties imposed on them by justice, right and unity of the civilized world."

Endorse the Insurgents.

Boston, May 20.—The Central Labor union yesterday adopted the following: Resolved, that we, the representatives of organized labor extend our sympathy to the patriots of Cuba, in their efforts to throw off the yoke of a tyrannical and despotic monarchy and trust that their efforts to free their native land may be successful.

Died for Love.

St. Paul, Minn., May 20.—Nettie Ordemann, a pretty girl of 17, died at the Velo house yesterday from an overdose of arsenic taken with suicidal intent. The deed was the result of the expressed purpose of her lover to marry another girl.

A Baron a Murderer.

St. Petersburg, May 20.—Baron Dzanowiez yesterday shot and killed Count Ostrorog, a rich landowner of Minsk. The cause of the shooting is as yet a mystery, but it is supposed to have been done to obtain revenge. The baron was arrested.

Mayor Hurt Acquitted.

Caspar, Wyo., May 20.—In a crowded court room Saturday evening the jury selected to try ex-State Senator Joel Hurt for the murder of William Milne, his wife's betrayer, rendered a verdict of not guilty. Hurt is mayor of Caspar.

TREASURY'S DILEMMA

Aggravated by Defeat of the Income Tax.

No Extra Session of Congress Is Likely—The President, It Is Understood, Would Prefer a New Issue of Bonds if Any Action at All Is Needed.

Washington, May 20.—The supposition that the United States supreme court will declare the entire income tax law unconstitutional has created considerable talk about an extra session of congress. President Cleveland is unqualifiedly opposed to the calling of an extra session. He thinks that it would upset the business of the country, and that the new congress would be apt to remain in session all summer, discussing the silver question and useless legislation. If it comes to the dilemma of calling an extra session or making another bond issue he would unquestionably decide upon the latter, but even the nullification of the income tax law, with its consequent reduction of revenue does not, in Mr. Cleveland's mind, render necessary either an extra session or another issue of bonds.

Another Bond Issue Probable.

Ex-Representative Coombs said yesterday that he was inclined to believe the government would find it necessary to make another bond issue before the fifty-fourth congress convened in regular session. Between an extra session and a bond issue he heartily favors the latter course. The secretary of the treasury, however, will do everything in his power to prevent another issue of bonds during the recess. To personal friends of late he has expressed himself in most emphatic terms against such an issue.

A Big Deficit.

The government receipts are $6,000,000 behind the expenditures so far for the present month. This indicates a total shortage for the fiscal year of over $57,000,000. There is constant wonder expressed at the difference between the figures now appearing in the daily statements of the treasury and those given in the estimate made last December. Then it was confidently expected that the effect of the tariff legislation would produce a shortage, which, on June 30, 1895, would amount to nearly $70,000,000, and then would rapidly return a surplus. This prediction was supported in the house of representatives. By the efforts of the senate the rates of the house schedules were increased so as to yield $70,000,000 more than the house was then willing to supply the government with. What the deficit would have been by this time had not the senate increased the house rates, no one can tell. It is certain, however, that deficiency instead of being $51,000,000, as it is today, would have been much greater. By means of bond sales there is a cash balance on hand amounting to $183,000,000, $47,000,000 of which is gold, leaving $86,000,000 of silver certificates, United States notes and treasury notes, fractional silver and minor coins.

HER BROTHERS SWORE TO KILL

Meeting in the Mountains Which Cost Two Lives.

Middlesboro, Ky., May 20.—A few days ago Henry Cooley, of this place, eloped with Sallie Dains, the two crossing over into West Virginia, where they were married. The bride's brothers had long opposed the suit of Cooley, and when they learned of the elopment they were furious, and declared their intention of killing their sister's husband. Marshall Cooley, a brother of Henry, intercepted the newly married couple at Pound Gap, five miles from here, and warned them of the fate in store for them. While they were deliberating the best course to pursue the Dains brothers came up and a fight instantly ensued. Marshall Cooley and George Dains were killed outright. Henry and his bride escaped injury.

The kaiser's suit declare that those accompanying him find the work productive of profuse perspiration.

HEPPENHEIMER'S STATEMENT.

Denies That He Profited Through New Jersey State Contracts.

Jersey City, May 20.—Gen. William C. Heppenheimer, who for some years under Gov. Abbett's administration was comptroller of the state, and upon whose administration of his office testimony was taken by the Voorhees investigating committee at Trenton, has issued a statement in which he explains several matters which, he says, he had not an opportunity to do before the committee on account of the absence of important witnesses. The insinuations made by the testimony before the committee were that Gen. Heppenheimer had profited by payments made to Mullins & Co. for furniture supplied to the newly constructed state house and that he was financially interested in what is alleged to have been large overpayments to the A. B. Dick company, of Chicago, for steel casings fitted into the state house vaults for several official departments. Mr. Heppenheimer says that John Mullins & Co. were employed to furnish his residence after his marriage, but that his official position gave him no advantages in that relation that would not have been enjoyed by anyone else. To substantiate this statement the general produced the invoice of the furniture sent by the firm to his house, also the checks with which he paid the bill. In regard to his relations with A. B. Dick & Co. at Chicago Gen. Heppenheimer says that the fittings with which the state house vaults were furnished were of the Hoffman-Keefe pattern and that the A. Dick company, which drew the money for them from the state treasury, was the agent through which the contract for that service was made with the state, and that the charge that the then comptroller permitted the Dick company to draw excessive allowances from the state treasury for the work it did is based on the testimony of H. N. Booz, who was agent for a rival concern and felt disappointed at not securing the contract.

WANTS NO ASSISTANCE.

O'Brien Refuses Aid in His Financial Difficulties.

London, May 20.—William O'Brien, M. P., has asked his friends not to collect the subscriptions left to them by Viscount Wolmer for the purpose of paying the claim of Patrick A. Chance, M. P., which, if not paid, will result in Mr. O'Brien being declared a bankrupt and his consequent retirement from the house of commons. Mr. Chance acted as Mr. O'Brien's solicitor in the action for libel brought against him by Lord Salisbury, and Mr. O'Brien contends that Mr. Chance was to be paid out of the Irish parliamentary fund. Mr. Chance did not take this veiw of the matter, and upon Mr. O'Brien's refusal to settle with him, brought an action against him. Mr. O'Brien refuses to satisfy the judgment and the only apparent result will be his being declared a bankrupt, in which event, according to the rules of the house, his seat becomes vacant.

IRON ORE STATISTICS.

The Product in the United States Increased Only 2 1-2 Per Cent.

Washington, May 20.—Iron ore statistics prepared for the United States geological survey by John Birkinbine, of Philadelphia, state that in 1894 the product of iron ore in the United States for 1894 increased only about 1 1-2 per cent. over the product of 1893, and most of this increase came from the Lake Superior region, Minnesota showing the greatest increase, ranking second among the iron ore producing states, while in 1893 she was third. Alabama has fallen from second place in 1893 to third in 1894; Virginia has improved her standing, rising from fifth in 1893 to fourth in 1894, while Pennsylvania has fallen from fourth in 1893 to fifth in 1894. The prices realized averaged only $1.14 a ton in 1894 to $1.66 a ton in 1893.

TERROR AT FLORENCE

Houses Swayed Like Ships at Sea by Earthquake.

Panic-Stricken Audiences Rushed from Theatres Into the Streets, Trampling Women—Wild Excitement in Several Italian Towns Where the Shocks Were Felt.

Florence, May 20.—The population of this city was thrown into a state of panic Saturday night by a series of earthquakes that did much damage here and other places. People who were in their houses when the first shock came ran terror-stricken into the streets. Their wild cries could be heard everywhere. The shocks were so violent that houses swayed like ships in a sea. In a number of cases roofs fell in, injuring many persons who had not sought safety in flight.

Terror in Theatres.

The wildest scenes were at the theatres, where performances were going on as usual. The first shock caused those in the audience to look wonderingly at each other. Then the earth swayed, and, amid shouts of "Earthquake!" the crowds made rushes for the exits. Mad with terror, no respect was shown for the women, weak or aged, and, in the crush, many were badly hurt. Upon reaching the streets, the crowds from the theatres met those who had fled from their dwellings, and the excitement that ensued made confusion worse confounded.

Omnibus Overturned.

At Grassina, a suburb of Florence, the shocks were very violent. The extent of the earth movement may be judged from the fact that a loaded omnibus was overturned. Twelve residents of Grassina were hurt. A number of persons refused to re-enter their house during the night. They remained on the streets until after daylight in the morning. Many of them took shelter in vehicles. After the first severe shocks there were repeated lighter ones. The seismic disturbance was felt in Lucca, Pontedera, and generally throughout Tuscany. The centre of the movement was at Florence, where for many years nothing similar has occurred.

Many Lives Lost.

Around Florence a number of houses were destroyed and four persons killed. At the time of sending this dispatch full details are wanting, but it is believed that later reports from the country affected will show that there has been a considerable number of lives lost. The prince of Naples, the crown prince, who is residing in the royal palace here, visited several points during the night, inspecting the damage that had been done. At 4 o'clock in the morning he started for Grassina.

Young Mother's Sad Fate.

As further reports of the disaster come to hand, the extent of the disaster widens. At Lappaggi, a village near Grassina, no less than forty houses were thrown from their foundations and completely wrecked. A sad feature of the disaster at this place was the finding of the body of a young mother with her infant clasped to her heart. She had evidently attempted to flee, but together with her child, was crushed to death beneath the falling walls of her home. An investigation was made by the municipal authorities in Florence, who estimated that 3,000 houses were damaged. The cathedral (La Cattedral di Santa Maria del Fiore), an imposing example of Italian Gothic architecture and probably the most remarkable building of its kind in Europe, was somewhat damaged.

More Shocks Feared.

The director of the observatory, of whom many anxious inquiries were made, does not venture to prophesy as to a recurrence of the disturbances, but further shocks are feared. The seismic manifestation of Saturday night was the most violent that Florence has known since 1445, the earthquake of 1730, which is historical in the annals of the city, having been slighter. The population of the city is awed by the disaster. Crowds wander about the streets, their only topic of conversation being the shocks. Everybody was anxiously awaiting the coming of the night, the fear being general that the quakes would then again occur. Many persons intend to pass the night in places where there will be no danger of buildings falling upon them. A dispatch received from Naples, the scene of so many disastrous earthquakes, says there has been no disturbance in that district.

CYCLING COMMENT.

The Crescent Oval will be ready for training purposes this week.

Walter Probasco of East Front street is now riding a Wilhelm safety.

The F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company received nine Cleveland Swell Specials by the United States Express this morning.

Lyman R. Allen teacher of sciences in the High School rode to Paterson on his wheel Friday afternoon at which city he spent Saturday with friends.

Several of the High School cyclists have been riding about the surrounding country posting notices for the field day of the P. H. S. A. A. to be held on tee Crescent Oval, Saturday, June 8.

The Elizabeth Daily Journal says: Johnson of Rahway, George Cobb and Charlie Carpenter will ride at the Plainfield meet on Decoration Day afternoon. The two former are at Plainfield, training on the track.

The entries for the Irvington-Milburn road race, which will take place Memorial Day morning, numbers 137, 13 less than those of last year. They include the crack long distance riders of the country. The entries from the Crescent Wheelmen of this city are E. T. Hand and A. H. Barnett.

Yesterday was a great day for biclying and the wheelmen—and the wheelwomen, too—knew it and took advantage of it. All the county roads were alive with the fast flying cyclists, who came from every direction. Many club runs centered to Plainfield, as was evidenced in the array of wheels that stood in front of McVey's restaurant during the dinner hour. The atmosphere was just bracing enough to make riding a pleasure and not a perspiring task, though at times when up grade and the strong east wind were encountered, the riders were obliged to hump themselves to move along at a fair gait.

The New York Times of yesterday said: The publication of the big prize list for the opening meet of the National Circuit, under the auspices of the Crescent Wheelmen of Plainfield on May 30, has brought in an avalanche of entries for the various events. The popular track of the Crescent Wheelmen will be the objective point of many runs today. The club has expended a large sum upon the track this year, and it is now in fine condition. Many local fliers will train on it in preparation for the Memorial Day meet.

Details of what promises to be one of the largest century runs ever started from Newark were arranged Friday night. The start will be at 5 a. m. on July 6, and the route will be through Belleville, Passaic, Paterson, Montclair, Orange, Elizabeth, Westfield, Plainfield, New Brunswick, Matawan, Keyport, Red Bank, Little Silver and Long Branch to Asbury Park. The checking will be done by the number system, the checks being dropped in boxes at the several places designated. Plainfield and New Brunswick will be the dinner stops.

THE EXPLOITS OF BRIGADIER GERARD.

HOW THE KING HELD THE BRIGADIER

By A. Conan Doyle.

(Copyright, 1895, by Bacheller, Johnson & Bacheller.)

V.

When I came to myself I was lying upon a truckle bed, in a bare, half-furnished room. My head was ringing like a bell, and when I put up my hand there was a lump like a walnut over one of my eyes. My nose was full of a pungent smell, and I soon found that a strip of paper soaked in vinegar was fastened across my brow. At the other end of the room this terrible little man was sitting with his knee bare, and his elderly companion was rubbing it with some liniment. The latter seemed to be in the worst of tempers, and he kept up a continual scolding, which the other listened to with a gloomy face.

"Never heard tell of such a thing in my life," he was saying. "In training for a month, with all the weight of it on my shoulders, and then, when I get you as fit as a trout, and within two days of fighting the likeliest man on the list, you let yourself into a bye-battle with a foreigner."

"There, there! Stow your gab!" said the other, sulkily. "You're a very good trainer, Jim, but you'd be better with less jaw."

"I should think it was time to jaw," the elderly man answered. "If this knee don't get well before Wednesday, they'll have it that you fought a cross, and a pretty job you'll have next time you look for a backer."

"Fought a cross!" growled the other. "I've won nineteen battles, and no man ever so much as dared to say the word 'cross' in my hearin'. How the deuce was I to get out of it when the cove wanted the very clothes off my back?"

"Tut, man, you knew that the beak and the guards were within a mile of you. You could have set them on to him as well then as now. You'd have got your clothes back again all right."

"Well, strike me!" said the Bustler, "I don't often break my trainin', but when it comes to givin' up my clothes to a Frenchy who couldn't hit a dint in a pat of butter, why, it's more than I can swaller."

"Pooh, man, what are the clothes worth? D'you know that Lord Rufton alone has five thousand pounds on you? When you jump the ropes on Wednesday, you'll carry every penny of fifty thousand into the ring A pretty thing to turn up with a swollen knee and a story about a Frenchman!"

"I never thought he'd ha' kicked," said the Bustler.

"I suppose you expected he'd fight Broughton's rules, and strict P. R.? Why, you silly, they don't know what fighting is in France."

"My friends," said I, sitting up on my bed, "I do not understand very much of what you say, but when you speak like that it is foolishness. We know so much about fighting in France that we have paid our little visit to nearly every capital in Europe, and very soon we are coming to London. But we fight like soldiers, you understand, and not like gamins in the gutter. You strike me on the head, I kick you on the knee—it is child's play. But if you will give me a sword, and take another one, I will show you how we fight over the water."

They both stared at me in their solid, English way.

"Well, I'm glad you're not dead, Mounseer," said the elder one at last. "There wasn't much sign of life in you when the Bustler and me carried you down. That head of yours ain't thick enough to stop the crook of the hardest hitter in Bristol."

"He's a game cove, too, and he came for me like a bantam," said the other, still rubbing his knee. "I got my old left-right in, and he went over, as if he had been poleaxed. It wasn't my fault Mounseer. I told you you'd get pepper if you went on."

"Well, it's something to say all your life, that you've been handled by the finest light-weight in England," said the older man, looking at me with an expression of congratulation upon his face. "You've had him at his best, too—in the pink of condition, and trained by Jim Hunter."

"I am used to hard knocks," said I, unbuttoning my tunic, and showing my two musket wounds. Then I bared my ankle also, and showed the place in my eye where the guerrilla had stabbed me.

"He can take his gruel," said the Bustler.

"What a glutton he'd have made for the middle-weights," remarked the trainer; "with six months' coaching he'd astonish the fancy. It's a pity he's got to go back to prison."

I did not like that last remark at all. I buttoned up my coat and rose from the bed

"I must ask you to let me continue my journey," said I.

"I NEVER THOUGHT HE'D HA' KICKED," SAID THE BUSTLER.

"There's no help for it, mounseer," the trainer answered. "It's a hard thing to send such a man as you back to such a place, but business is business, and there's a twenty pound reward. They were here this morning looking for you, and I expect they'll be round again."

His words turned my heart to lead.

"Surely, you would not betray me," I cried. "I will send you twice twenty pounds on the day that I set foot upon France. I swear it upon the honor of a French gentleman."

But I only got head shakes for a reply. I pleaded, I argued, I spoke of the English hospitality and the fellowship of brave men, but I might as well have been addressing the two great wooden clubs which stood balanced upon the floor in front of me. There was no sign of sympathy upon their dull faces.

"Business is business, mounseer," the old trainer repeated. "Besides, how am I to put the Bustler into the ring on Wednesday if he's jugged by the beak for aidin' and abettin' a prisoner of war? I've got to look after the Bustler, and I take no risks."

[illegible] the end of all my plottings. I was to be led back again like a poor, silly sheep which has broken through the hurdles. They little knew me who could fancy that I should submit to such a fate. I had heard enough to tell me where the weak point of these two men was, and I showed, as I have often showed before, that Etienne Gerard is never so terrible as when all hope seems to have deserted him. With a single spring I seized one of the clubs and swung it over the head of the Bustler.

"Come what may," I cried, "you shall be spoiled for Wednesday."

The fellow growled out an oath, and would have sprung at me, but the other flung his arms round him and pinned him to the chair.

"Not if I know it, Bustler," he screamed. "None of your games while I am by. Get away out of this, Frenchy. We only want to see your back. Run away, run away, or he'll get loose!"

It was good advice, I thought, and I ran to the door, but as I came out into the open air my head swam round, and I had to lean against the porch to save myself from falling. Consider all that I had been through, the anxiety of my escape, the long, useless flight in the storm, the day spent amid wet ferns, with only bread for food, the second journey by night, and now the injuries I had received in attempting to deprive the little man of his clothes. Was it wonderful that even I should reach the limits of my endurance? I stood there in my heavy coat and my poor, battered busby, my chin upon my chest, and my eyelids over my eyes. I had done my best, and I could do no more. It was the sound of horses' hoofs which made me at last raise my head, and there was the gray-mustached Governor of Dartmoor Prison not ten paces in front of me, with six mounted warders behind him.

"So, Colonel," said he, with a bitter smile, "we have found you once more."

When a brave man has done his utmost and has failed, he shows his breeding by the manner in which he accepts his defeat. For me, I took the letter which I had in my pocket, and, stepping forward, I handed it with such grace of manner as I could summon to the Governor.

"It has been my misfortune, sir, to detain one of your letters," said I.

He looked at me in amazement, and beckoned to the warders to arrest me. Then he broke the seal of the letter. I saw a curious expression come over his face as he read it.

"This must be the letter which Sir Charles Meredith lost," said he.

"It was in the pocket of his coat."

"You have carried it for two days?"

"Since the night before last."

"And never looked at the contents?"

I showed him by my manner that he had committed an indiscretion in asking a question which one gentleman should not have put to another.

To my surprise he burst out into a roar of laughter.

"Colonel," said he, wiping the tears from his eyes, "you have really given both yourself and us a great deal of unnecessary trouble. Allow me to read the letter which you carried with you in your flight."

And this is what I heard:

"On receipt of this you are directed to release Colonel Etienne Gerard of the Third Hussars, who has been exchanged against Colonel Mason of the Horse Artillery, now in Verdun."

And as he read it he laughed again, and the warders laughed, and the two men from the cottage laughed, and then, as I heard this universal merriment and thought of all my hopes and fears, and my struggles and dangers, what could a debonair soldier do but lean against the porch once more and laugh as heartily as any of them? And of them all was it not I who had the best reason to laugh, since in front of me I could see my dear France, and my mother, and the Emperor, and my horsemen; while behind me lay the gloomy prison and the heavy hand of the English king?

HOW MANY WOMEN DO YOU KNOW

Who Can Say They Are Thoroughly Well? How They Can Be Strong.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

I don't feel very well; I am so tired all the time; I don't know what is the matter with me.

You hear these words every day.

As often as you meet your friends, just so often are the words repeated. More than likely you speak the same pregnant words yourself, and there is no doubt but that you do feel far from well most of the time.

There is a cause,

And—

There is a remedy for all that is covered by those words so constantly spoken by women.

Lydia E. Pinkham discovered the source of nearly all the suffering endured by the sex.

"Women's Complaints,"—these two words are full of more misery to women than any two words that can be found in the language of the world.

Sudden fainting, depression of spirits, reluctance to go anywhere or to do anything, backache, "bearing down," and kindred symptoms of serious disturbance seldom imagined by your family physician, and reluctantly mentioned by you.

The remedy is found; the same noble woman who discovered the cause of all your misery also worked out the remedy. All druggists have it.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the greatest blessing that ever came into the lives of suffering women.

SKETCHES OF LINCOLN.

More Unique Letters to Mary S. Owens.

AN UNFORTUNATE COMPOSITION.

The First Letter After the Drawn Battle. He Seems Easily Satisfied—A Peculiar Screed to a Friend—Miss Owens' Opinion After Her Marriage.

[From "The Life of Lincoln" by William H. Herndon and Jesse W. Weik. Copyright, 1888, by Jesse W. Weik. Copyright, 1892, by D. Appleton & Co.]

X.

During the warm, dry summer months Lincoln kept up the love siege without apparent diminution of zeal. He was as assiduous as ever, and in August was anxious to force a decision. On the 16th he had a meeting with her which terminated much like a drawn battle—at least it seems to have afforded him but little encouragement, for on his return to Springfield he immediately indulged in an epistolary effusion stranger than any that preceded it:

FRIEND MARY—You will no doubt think it rather strange that I should write you a letter on the same day on which we parted, and I can only account for it by supposing that seeing you lately makes me think of you more than usual, while at our late meeting we had but few expressions of thoughts. You must know that I cannot see you or think of you with entire indifference, and yet it may be that you are mistaken in regard to what my real feelings towards you are. If I knew you were not, I should not trouble you with this letter. Perhaps any other man would know enough without further information, but I consider it my peculiar right to plead ignorance and your bounden duty to allow the plea.

I want in all cases to do right, and most particularly so in all cases with women. I want at this particular time, more than anything else, to do right to you, and if I knew it would be doing right, as I rather suspect it would, to let you alone, I would do it. And for the purpose of making the matter as plain as possible I now say that you can drop the subject, dismiss your thoughts—if you ever had any—from me forever, and leave this letter unanswered without calling forth one accusing murmur from me. And I will even go further and say that if it will add anything to your comfort or peace of mind to do so it is my sincere wish that you should. Do not understand by this that I wish to cut your acquaintance. I mean no such thing. What I do wish is that our further acquaintance shall depend upon yourself. If such further acquaintance would contribute nothing to your happiness, I am sure it would not to mine. If you feel yourself in any degree bound to me, I am now willing to release you, provided you wish it, while, on the other hand, I am willing and even anxious to bind you faster if I can be convinced that it will in any considerable degree add to your happiness. This indeed is the whole question with me. Nothing would make me more miserable, nothing more happy, than to know you were so.

In what I have said I think I cannot be misunderstood, and to make myself understood is the sole object of this letter.

If it suits you best to not answer this—farewell—a long life and a merry one attend you. But if you conclude to write back speak as plainly as I do. There can be neither harm nor danger in saying to me anything you think just in the manner you think it. My respects to your sister. Your friend, LINCOLN.

A Ludicrous Letter.

For an account of the final outcome of this affaire du cœur the reader is now referred to the most ludicrous letter Mr. Lincoln ever wrote. It has been said, but with how much truth I do not know, that during his term as president the lady to whom it was written, Mrs. O. H Browning, wife of a fellow member of the legislature, before giving a copy of it to a biographer, wrote to Lincoln asking his consent to the publication, but that he answered warning her against it because it was too full of truth. The only biographer who ever did insert it apologized for its appearance in his book, regarding it for many reasons as an extremely painful duty. "If it could be withheld," he laments, "and the act decently reconciled to the conscience of a biographer professing to be honest and candid, it should never see the light in these pages. Its grotesque humor, its coarse exaggerations in describing the person of a lady whom the writer was willing to marry, its imputation of toothless and weather beaten old age to a woman really young and handsome, its utter lack of that delicacy of tone and sentiment which one naturally expects a gentleman to adopt when he thinks proper to discuss the merits of his late mistress—all these and its defective orthography it would certainly be more agreeable to suppress than to publish. But, if we begin by omitting or mutilating a document which sheds so broad a light upon one part of his life and one phase of his character, why may we not do the like as fast and as often as the temptation arises? And where shall the process cease?"

I prefer not to take such a serious view of the letter or its publication. My idea is that Mr. Lincoln got into one of his irresistible moods of humor and fun—a state of feeling into which he frequently worked himself to avert the overwhelming effects of his constitutional melancholy—and in the inspiration of the moment penned this letter, which many regard as an unfortunate composition. The class who take such a gloomy view of the matter should bear in mind that the letter was written by Mr. Lincoln in the fervor of early manhood, just as he was emerging from a most embarrassing situation, and addressed to a friend who, he supposed, would keep it sacredly sealed from the public eye. As a matter of fact, Mr. Lincoln was not gifted with a ready perception of the propriety of things in all cases. Nothing with him was intuitive. To have profound judgment and just discrimination he required time to think, and if facts or events were forced before him in too rapid succession the machinery of his judgment failed to work. A knowledge of this fact will account for the letter, and also serve to rob the offense, if any was committed, of half its severity.

How He Got Out of It.

The letter was written in the same month Miss Owens made her final departure from Illinois:

SPRINGFIELD, April 1, 1838.

DEAR MADAM—Without apologizing for being egotistical, I shall make the history of so much of my life as has elapsed since I saw you the subject of this letter. And, by the way, I now discover that, in order to give a full and intelligible account of the things I have done and suffered since I saw you, I shall necessarily have to relate some that happened before.

It was, then, in the autumn of 1836 that a married lady of my acquaintance and who was a great friend of mine, being about to pay a visit to her father and other relatives residing in Kentucky, proposed to me that on her return she would bring a sister of hers with her on condition that I would engage to become her brother-in-law with all convenient dispatch. I of course accepted the proposal, for you know I could not have done otherwise had I really been averse to it; but, privately, between you and me, I was most confoundedly well pleased with the project. I had seen the said sister some three years before, thought her intelligent and agreeable, and saw no good objection to plodding life through hand in hand with her. Time passed on, the lady took her journey, and in due time returned, sister in company sure enough. This astonished me a little, for it appeared to me that her coming so readily showed that she was a trifle too willing, but on reflection it occurred to me that she might have been prevailed on by her married sister to come without anything concerning me ever having been mentioned to her, and so I concluded that, if no other objection presented itself, I would consent to waive this. All this occurred to me on hearing of her arrival in the neighborhood, for, be it remembered, I had not yet seen her except about three years previous, as above mentioned. In a few days we had an interview, and although I had seen her before she did not look as my imagination had pictured her. I knew she was oversize, but she now appeared a fair match for Falstaff. I knew she was called an "old maid," and I felt no doubt of the truth of at least half of the appellation, but now, when I beheld her, I could not for my life avoid thinking of my mother, and this not from withered features, for her skin was too full of fat to permit of its contracting into wrinkles, but from her want of teeth, weather beaten appearance in general, and from a kind of notion that ran in my head that nothing could have commenced at the size of infancy and reached her present bulk in less than 35 or 40 years, and, in short, I was not at all pleased with her. But what could I do? I had told her sister I would take her for better or for worse, and I made a point of honor and conscience in all things to stick to my word, especially if others had been induced to act on it, which in this case I had no doubt they had, for I was now fairly convinced that no other man on earth would have her, and hence the conclusion that they were bent on holding me to my bargain. "Well," thought I, "I have said it, and, be the consequences what they may, it shall not be my fault if I fail to do it." At once I determined to consider her my wife, and, this done, all my powers of discovery were put to work in search of perfections in her which might be fairly set off against her defects. I tried to imagine her handsome, which, but for her unfortunate corpulency, was actually true. Exclusive of this, no woman that I have ever seen has a finer face. I also tried to convince myself that the mind was much more to be valued than the person, and in this she was not inferior, as I could discover, to any with whom I had been acquainted.

Shortly after this, without coming to any positive understanding with her, I set out for Vandalia, when and where you first saw me. During my stay there I had letters from her which did not change my opinion of either her intellect or intention, but, on the contrary, confirmed it in both.

All this while, although I was fixed, "firm as the surge repelling rock," in my resolution, I found I was continually repenting the rashness which had led me to make it. Through life I have been in no bondage, either real or imaginary, from the thraldom of which I so much desired to be free. After my return home I saw nothing to change my opinion of her in any particular. She was the same, and so was I. I now spent my time in planning how I might get along through life after my contemplated change of circumstances should have taken place, and how I might procrastinate the evil day for a time, which I really dreaded as much, perhaps more, than an Irishman does the halter.

After all my suffering upon this deeply interesting subject here I am, wholly, unexpectedly, completely, out of the "scrape," and now I want to know if you can guess how I got out of it, out, clear, in every sense of the term, no violation of word, honor or conscience. I don't believe you can guess, so I might as well tell you at once.

As the lawyer says, it was done in the manner following—to wit: After I had delayed the matter as long as I thought I could in honor do—which, by the way, had brought me round into the last fall—I concluded I might as well bring it to a consummation without further delay, and so I mustered up my resolution and made the proposal to her direct; but, shocking to relate, she answered no. At first I supposed she did it through an affectation of modesty, which I thought but ill became her under the peculiar circumstances of her case, but on my renewal of the charge I found she repelled it with greater firmness than before. I tried it again and again, but with the same success, or rather with the same want of success. I finally was forced to give it up, at which I very unexpectedly found myself mortified almost beyond endurance. I was mortified, it seemed to me, in a hundred different ways. My vanity was deeply wounded by the reflection that I had been too stupid to discover her intentions, and at the same time never doubting that I understood them perfectly, and also that she, whom I had taught myself to believe nobody else would have, had actually rejected me with all my fancied greatness. And, to cap the whole, I then for the first time began to suspect that I was really a little in love with her. But let it all go. I'll try and outlive it. Others have been made fools of by the girls, but this can never with truth be said of me. I most emphatically in this instance made a fool of myself. I have now come to the conclusion never again to think of marrying, and for this reason—I can never be satisfied with any one who would be blockhead enough to have me.

When you receive this, write me a long yarn about something to amuse me. Give my respects to Mr. Browning. Your sincere friend,
A. LINCOLN.

Mrs. O. H. Browning.

As before mentioned, Miss Owens was afterward married and became the mother of five children. Two of her sons served in the Confederate army. She died July 4, 1877. Speaking of Mr. Lincoln a short time before her death, she referred to him as "a man with a heart full of kindness and a head full of sense."

Not According to the Code.

While at the rendezvous at Rushville and on the march to the front Lincoln, of course, drilled his men and gave them such meager instruction in military tactics as he could impart. In marching one morning at the head of the company, who were following in lines of 20 abreast, it became necessary to pass through a gate much narrower than the lines. The captain could not remember the proper command to turn the company endwise, and the situation was becoming decidedly embarrassing when one of those thoughts born of the depths of despair came to his rescue. Facing the lines, he shouted: "Halt! This company will break ranks for two minutes and form again on the other side of the gate." The maneuver was successfully executed.

Good Story About Lincoln's Hair.

"When I was nominated, at Chicago, an enterprising fellow thought that a great many people would like to see how Abe Lincoln looked, and, as I had not long before sat for a photograph, this fellow, having seen it, rushed over and bought the negative. He at once got out no end of woodcuts, and so active was their circulation they were selling in all parts of the country. Soon after they reached Springfield I heard a boy crying them for sale on the streets. 'Here's your likeness of Abe Lincoln!' he shouted. 'Buy one. Price only 2 shillings! Will look a good deal better when he gets his hair combed!'"—Conversation Between Lincoln and Colonel le Grand B. Cannon.

Lincoln at the Bar.

He never took advantage of a man's low character to prejudice the jury. Mr. Lincoln thought his duty to his client extended to what was honorable and high minded, just and noble—nothing further. Hence the meanest man at the bar always paid great deference and respect to him.—David Davis, Sept. 10, 1866, MS.

Discouraging Outlook.

While dressing for his wedding in his room at Butler's house the latter's little boy Speed, seeing Lincoln so handsomely attired, asked him where he was going. "To hell, I suppose," was Lincoln's reply.

A QUAINT COLORED BISHOP.

He Tells the "Boys" at Conference to "Gin-Up" and Gives Good Advice.

Bishop Wesley Gaines, of Georgia, who has presided over the conference of the African Methodist Episcopal Church at Baltimore, has attracted much attention by his quaint and effective oratory. One of his ways of calling the conference together was this:

"Get together boys! Get together! And some of you fellows better drop those long faces you've been carrying around here. Why, isn't it just as easy to smile as to weep?"

One of the incidents of the general election was the large number of persons who received one vote each. After making a side splitting remark concerning one of the "lonesome votes," as he characterized it, the Bishop dryly said that he "knew no law to prevent a man voting for himself at a church election." To another laugh which greeted one of these lonesome votes, the Bishop said: "Never mind, boys; I've know many a horse that was way behind in the back stretch to come in first under the wire."

The advice of the Bishop to his ministers to be alive in the pulpit created a profound impression. "Ginger up, boys! get lives. Aim high; shoot at the moon, even if you can't hit it. Never go into the pulpit unless you are prepared to preach. Never attempt to say anything unless you know something about it. It is said that if you open your mouth wide God will fill it. He will—with wind. Above all, boys, when you get into the pulpit to preach put some snap into your sermons. Don't allow any of your congregation to go to sleep on your hands. Don't preach a sermon that will make a man feel that perhaps he would prefer taking a chance of going to the hot place to being compelled to listen to your sermon."

The Bishop, in one of his short sermons paid his respects to the preacher's helpmates—the wives. "You women," he said, "cut mighty cunning capers before you catch the man of your choice. You crimp up and gimp up and manage to look too sweet for anything, and no wonder a man thinks to himself: 'Why, that woman is the only one on earth that I can ever love.' Then when you get your man do you keep on looking sweet? Not by a good deal. A great many of you allow yourselves to get slipshod and slouchy, and, I dare say, a man begins to wonder after awhile what he has ever saw in you in the first place. You ought to keep yourself up to the standard of good looks. Don't neglect it. I want my wife to look as sweet today as she did the day I met her and fell in love with her. It's a good deal like a bunco game to sweeten up to catch a husband and then souring down after you catch him."

Little Tommy's Kite and the Sparrows.

Tommy Caruthers, the son of a well known resident of Nashville, Tenn., was the proud possessor of a kite which had been the envy of his playmates the whole flying season. In point of fact, the kite was a thing of beauty, representing a big brown bird with spread wings of gorgeous hue. Recently while Tommy was flying his kite it struck a plane of air not more than fifty feet up and went skimming along on it like a real live bird, now and then darting a little to right or left, but bearing straight on till it rested squarely over a neighboring barnyard. Then the fun began. The yard was full of fowls, clucking and scratching and nesting, and when one of the more alert cocks spied the big bird outspread overhead he sent the news of danger circulating around the inclosure to the tune of double quick. In a moment the whole lot was in a commotion. Roosters crowed, hens cackled and squawked and gathered their broods around them, running hither and thither for safety. The poor things expected every minute to be their last, perhaps, and were not a little astonished when the hovering bird failed to swoop down upon them and scatter death and destruction in their camp.

At this stage of the game, while the chickens were still uncertain as to their fate, re-enforcements arrived in the shape of a flock of English sparrows. The spry little fellows were game from tip to tail, and stood not upon the order of their going either, but lit into that gorgeous Japanese kite like animated hailstones pelting a spread sail. It was fun to see the evident enjoyment those sparrows took in putting that kite to rout. They pecked and dabbed and tore and clawed the poor paper wings, literally riddling the kite before Tommy knew what was happening, and could draw it in.

THE DAILY PRESS

ESTABLISHED MAY 10, 1887. PLAINFIELD, N. J., TUESDAY, MAY 21, 1895. TWO CENTS A COPY—$5 A YEAR.

HIGH SCHOOL FIELD DAY.

The Event Will Bring Student Athletes From All Over Jersey.

Active preparations are now being made for the field day of the Plainfield High School Athletic Association which is to be held at the Crescent Oval, Saturday, June 8. For the last four years, a field day has been held every Spring and Fall; last Spring a very successful one, both financially and otherwise, took place. This year, however, the field day is expected to far outshine any of its predecessors. The events are as follows: 2-mile bicycle race; 1 mile bicycle race; ¼-mile bicycle race; 100 yards dash; 440 yards run; running high jump; pole vault; putting the shot. They are open to all Preparatory and High Schools within 20 miles of Plainfield. The Rutgers' and Steven's Preparatory Schools both expect to enter their teams in the contests, while many other schools will also be represented. Despite the loss of some of the High School's best athletes, it is hoped that this institution will continue to hold its usual high position in athletics among the New Jersey schools.

The committee in charge of the arrangements consists of Charles B. Morse, chairman, Lewis H. Rand, Carlos C. Gallup, George P. Smith, and Edgar I. Serrell. C. C. Gallup acts as corresponding secretary of the committee, and Charle Noble as recording secretary.

It Is Always Thus.

Once more the results of what The Daily Press can do in finding lost articles appear in evidence. One day last week an item was published exclusively in The Press that George O. Stevens, the West End coal merchant, had lost a horse blanket through theft. A day or two after he received word that if he would call at a West Third street saloon he could regain the property, where it had been left by some one. Mr. Stevens called at the place and recovered the blanket. However, Mr. Stevens would have still been out the blanket except that the saloon keeper saw the item in The Press and sought the owner in that way.

To Visit Sewage Farms.

Councilmen Frost, Ginna, Fisk, Moore and Frazee will leave New York this afternoon at 5:30 by Fall River boat for Brocton and Framingham, Mass., to inspect the system of sewerage in use at those places, and which system is proposed for Plainfield. The councilmen will make a thorough inspection and no doubt when they return Friday they will have something of interest to report.

Sir Knights to Be Addressed.

Rev. Dr. Stockton of Orange will deliver an address to the members of Trinity Commandery, Knights Templar, in the Grace Episcopal Church Thursday evening. The Knights of St. John's Commandery of Elizabeth will be the guests of the Plainfield Knights. The members will march in full uniform from the asylum to the church at 7.

Patriotism in Scotch Plains.

The citizens of Scotch Plains are planning for an enjoyable celebration of Memorial Day, and have taken steps to assist the Sons of Veterans materially. It is proposed to have the fire department and lodges turn out and act as an escort. The school children have been interested, and will collect flowers for the decoration of the graves.

Sewer Work Being Pushed.

Contractor Prout has doubled his force of men working on the Front street sewers, and is pushing the work hard to finish by June 1, as his contract calls for. Excavations have been made as far as Somerset street. Front street, between the Music Hall and Somerset street, is completely blocked to all traffic.

Bitten By a Dog.

Alfred Noel, a young son of Charles Noel of Netherwood, was attacked by a vicious dog, owned by L. W. Wright of Leland avenue, between 5 and 6 last night, and bitten in the calf of the leg. The young lad was brought to this city, where Dr. Endicott cauterized the wound.

Grease the Wheel.

A young man from Oak Tree going home this morning with a heavy load of crushed stone, was obliged to stop for a while on Watchung avenue owing to a hot box. It was remedied, however, and he was able to proceed on his journey.

The Whist Trophy Coming.

The Park Club whisters will receive the four men team championship trophy of the New Jersey Whist League in a day or two. It consists of a large silver mug. The Parks are the first club to hold it.

FOR A SEWAGE FARM.

Necessary Steps Taken in the Council Last Night.

COUNCILMAN FRAZEE OPPOSED IT.

Corporation Counsel Marsh Receives $1,500 Extra Compensation for Work in Connetion With Sewer Matters—Hotel Netherwood Asks For a Liquor License—Other Business.

Outside of the subject of sewers little business was transacted at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council last evening, and the session was unusually brief. All the members were present except Councilmen Erickson and Stockton.

After the reading of the minutes Councilman Fisk stated that Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh was present and could remain only a few minutes, and moved that the regular business be dispensed with to allow him to hear the report of the Sewer Committee. It was so decided, and Councilman Frost who was in attendance for the first time since his return from Europe, presented the report of the committee of the work already done and that to be finished according to contract. With it was a report from Engineer A. J. Gavett, recommending the purchase of the Smock farm and that offered by the Mutual Life Insurance Company as the best that could be secured for sewage purposes. With the report of the Sewer Committee the committee advised the purchase of this property in the form of a resolution. The reports and resolution were received and filed.

Mr. Frazee asked the Council whether the resolution was intended to give power to buy the property, and when informed it was not, stated that he was not in favor of the proposed system and thought it would only tend to depreciate the value of property in the neighborhood of the beds. The resolution was adopted, Mr. Frazee voting no. Mr. Frost then offered an ordinance relating to the purchase of the above-mentioned property for the sewage beds, which was offered for first reading and ordered advertised in the proper manner. It was so ordered, and Monday evening, June 3, at 8, was the time set for the adoption of the ordinance, and that the Corporation Counsel give proper notice of same. Mr. Frost then submitted plans and specifications for the work on the sewers and beds from Grant avenue to the property where the proposed beds are to be located, and offered a resolution that the same be advertised in the Plainfield papers and in the Engineering News of New York. It was so ordered.

It was decided that Wednesday evening, June 19, at 8, be set to consider the proposals. Mr. Frazee voted no on the resolutions.

Residents of Putnam and Woodland avenues petitioned the Council for the street railway, stating that they had been misrepresented. It was signed by a large majority of the residents of these avenues, who stated that they desired the trolley through the streets named. It was referred to the Street Committee.

A communication was received from William Addis and other residents of Orange street asking that their street be accepted by the city. It was referred to the proper committee.

Residents of Watchung avenue, near Crescent avenue, petitioned Council for a crosswalk. It was referred to the Street Commmittee.

The Crescent Wheelmen asked for the privilege of running stages for the National Circuit meet on their tracks, Memorial Day. After due consideration it was decided that the request could not be granted, as it did not comply with the city ordinance.

The list of officers elected at recent meetings of the fire companies were submitted, and on motion of Mr. Fisk were confirmed.

Mr. Dumont offered a resolution that Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh receive a compensation of $1,500 for his work in connection with the sewer matter, for '94 and '95. The resolution was adopted.

John Spitler, lessee of Hotel Netherwood, asked the Council to grant him a license to sell liquor at the hotel. The application was referred to the License Committee.

Several licenses were granted to truckmen, on the recommendation of the License Committee.

There being no further business Council adjourned.

Additional Day Policeman.

Martin Vanderweg has been appointed a regular day policeman, and is now doing duty in the west end. Policeman McCue now looks after the east end residents.

LITTLE EDITH'S FUNERAL.

Impressive Services Over the Remains of a Beloved Child.

The funeral services of little Edith VanWinkle, the four-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward T. VanWinkle, were held yesterday afternoon at 4, from the residence of her parents on Elm place, and were very impressive.

Seldom has such a large concourse of people been present at a similar service. The life of the little one that had so suddenly gone out had left its influence among a large circle of friends.

Rev. Cornelius Schenck conducted the service, which was preceded by the singing of "Precious Jewels" by Elmer E. Runyon. It was a favorite hymn of the little one who had passed away and every evening it was her request before retiring that her mother sing it for her.

The Scripture lesson was read by Mr. Schenck followed by a beautiful prayer. He then spoke very touchingly of her death and in relation to her life said:

"Her character had ripened very quickly, and though young she was wise beyond her years and knowing beyond her days. She was remarkable for her great love of Spiritual things, and when God's mission was perfected in her life He called her home to Himself."

Words of consolation were spoken for the bereaved parents who are so deeply afflicted. At the conclusion of his remarks Mr. Schenck repeated very impressively Longfellow's beautiful poem "The Reaper and the Flowers".

An opportunity was then given those present to look for the last time on the little form that rested so peacefully in the white casket, around which was surrounded a large bank of flowers.

A beautiful floral gift was a small armchair, made of white roses, with the name "Edith" on the back of it. This was presented by Postmaster Hetfield, and the employes of the postoffice.

The burial took place this morning at 11 in the North Plainfield Cemetery. Rev. Cornelius Schenck was present and offered prayer.

Sleep on dear child,
With folded hands upon thy breast.
Sleep on and take thy rest.
The Shepherd of the Heavenly sheep
Hath called thee home, while loved ones weep.
In pastures green, by waters still,
Lambs of His flock shall know no ill.

But, thou art gone!
And the hearth is desolate and lone.
No more the patter of tiny feet.
The childish prattle low and sweet
Shall greet the ear. All's hushed in death.
With bated breath, we cry, Oh! why?

Ah! none can tell
Save He, who doeth all things well.
Sleep on dear child.
With folded hands upon thy breast.
Sleep on, 'tis thy eternal rest. L. V. L.

INNS AND OUTS.

Diamond Dashes That Will Interest the Kranks.

The members of the Y. M. C. A. baseball team were measured for their uniforms last night by a representative of A. G. Spalding, New York. It is expected that they will be here in time for Saturday's game, when they will meet the Woodbridge team on Crescent Oval.

The Arlington baseball team will play the Westfields at the latter place, Memorial Day, in the morning.

The Boys Club team will play Sutphen's nine Saturday afternoon.

McLaughlin brothers will be the battery for the Somerville team when they will play the Rutgers College aggregation.

The diamond on the Crescent Oval grounds will be rolled and leveled off in a few days, so as to make it a better fielding ground.

All managers and captains of local clubs are solicited to furnish items concerning their contests and players for use in this column.

To Attend a Church Convention.

Rev. Dr. Lewis, Editor Livermore of the Sabbath Recorder, and Mrs. Livermore, leave tomorrow morning for Marlboro, N. J., to attend the Eastern Seventh-Day Baptist Association which will be in session Thursday and Friday. Dr. Lewis will return in time for the Grand Army service in the Seventh-Day Baptist Church next Sunday evening.

To Read Papers.

Mrs. W. M. Maxson and Miss Lou Clawson will go to Marlboro, Friday morning, to attend the Seventh-Day Baptist Association. They both have papers to present before that body; Mrs. Maxson on the Junior Christian Endeavor work, and Miss Clawson on Christian Endeavor work.

COL. MOORE IS OUT.

He and Col. Waring Clash Again and the Plainfielder Retires.

Deputy Street Cleaning Commissioner Charles K. Moore decided yesterday that he would n't wait for June 1 to leave the department of street cleaning in New York. He wrote the following letter to Col. Waring:

In view of the financial difficulties which have beset the Street Cleaning Department for which, by the way, I am in no manner responsible, I do not wish to remain in the employ of the department another day. I accordingly ask you to let my resignation, which was to go into effect on Monday, the 3d proximo, go into effect immediately.

Mr. Moore then put on his hat and left the building. He declined to discuss his differences with Col. Waring. After he had gone Col. Waring sent the following to Mr. Moore:

Dear Sir:—Your resignation of this date is hereby accepted, to take immediate effect.

His successor has not yet been appointed, but there is little doubt that Capt. Gibson, assistant superintendent of stables, is slated for the place. He is a Pennsylvania Democrat.

THE LONE STAR DISSENTS.

Councilman Frazee Is Opposed to the Proposed Sewage Beds.

After the session of the City Council last evening Councilmen Frost and Frazee met in the ante-room when the subject of sewers was brought up in relation to the proposed system. Of course Mr. Frost has made an examination of the system somewhat in detail and is a firm believer in it, while Mr. Frazee thoroughly believes that the only and best way would be to run a trunk line to tidewater.

The discussion became very interesting, as each would make their point. Finally Mr. Fisk appeared and in his usual happy manner explained matters to the satisfaction of all, except that Mr. Frazee who still believes that he is right and voices the sentiment of the majority of Plainfield citizens.

A Good Performance.

The Howard Stock Company who are booked for a weeks engagement at Music Hall, played "Forgiven" to a fair sized audience last evening, and all were well pleased with the company. Tonight they will present "Arrah-No-Pogue." The Times of Cortland, N. Y., says the following of the company:

"There have been many high priced companies at Cortland which have not begun to do as well or give the satisfaction in their plays as did this repertoire company last night playing at popular prices. They have a very fine orchestra and its playing between the acts added much to the enjoyment of the evening."

Mr. Groendyke's Expert Horsemanship.

Yesterday afternoon as D. N. Groendyke of Mercer avenue and his little grandchild were out driving the horse became unmanageable on Somerset street and ran with astonishing speed from Emily street as far as Wilson's stone crusher in the Notch before he was conquered. Mr. Groendyke is an expert horseman and had he been alone the horse never would have gone as far as he did.

Blair Against Douglass.

The case of Blair against Douglass, in tort, was tried before Justice Newcorn yesterday. Action was brought against the defendant for damage done to a horse and cutter last Winter. There were nine witnesses sworn for the plaintiff. A motion was made for non-suit, which was denied, and the defendant rested. Justice Newcorn reserved his decision till Wednesday morning at 10.

Westfield Sewer Muddle.

Petitions are being circulated in Westfield indorsing the action of the Township Committee in the sewer matter. Many who signed the original petition for a sewer are refusing to sign these petitions, claiming that facts were misrepresented at first. The case of certiorari will be heard at Trenton Thursday.

Highway Damages.

The Court of Common Pleas, at Elizabeth, will appoint three freeholders today in the matter of reviewing the assessment of damages lately made by the Surveyors of Highways for the taking of land belonging to N. R. Day in Westfield in laying out a public road.

Administrator Martine.

Judge Thomas F. McCormick yesterday appointed James E. Martine of this city administrator of the estate of the late Anna M. Balen.

H. S. Thomas, secretary of the Crescent Wheelmen, very kindly presented the printed cards to be used by the wheelmen in advertising the meet for May 30.

THE BIG BICYCLE MEET.

Crescent Wheelmen Almost Ready for the Great Event.

RED-LETTER DAY FOR PLAINFIELD.

The New York Times Recognizes the Importance of the National Circuit Meet and Offers a $50 Gold Medal for a Special Mile Scratch Race—More Committees Appointed.

The Crescent Wheelmen turned out in full force at their adjourned business meeting last evening, and no end of enthusiasm was manifested concerning the big cycle race meet Decoration Day. The various committees appointed to look after the details of the great affair made most satisfactory and encouraging reports.

The offer of the New York Times to give a $50 gold medal for a special mile scratch race to be run at the end of the meet, the starters to be only those who had ridden first, second or third in the four Class A events of the day, was unanimously accepted with the thanks of the club. This winner's race, which is a brand-new departure, promises to be the most interesting and exciting of all, as it will be a case of first place or nothing.

All the various committees reported progress in their particular lines of work.

The following were appointed a committee of three to look after the checking of wheels: F. J. Pope, Lon Titsworth and Harry Coward. There are accommodations for 400 wheels in the racks at the grounds.

A committee composed of Samuel Wilbur, Vincent W. Nash and Harry Coward were appointed to confer with the Plainfield Bicycle Club with reference to occupying rooms with them, it being necessary to vacate the present quarters in the Board of Trade Building July 1.

The Transportation Committee reported that arrangements would be made to carry the people to and from the grounds.

A music bill for last year which had been overlooked, and amounting to $25, was raised in a few minutes among the members.

Chairman Teal of the Racing Board stated that the Union County Roadsters were not in opposition to the meet as had been reported, and that they intended being present in a body. He also stated that the track was now ready for use, but no person would be allowed on the grounds without a ticket.

Thirty entries thus far had been received, and the list will be closed tomorrow evening.

The prizes for the various events will be received and placed on exhibition this week. Large triangular cards bearing the talismanic words: "National Circuit Race Meet, Plainfield, May 30," were distributed among the members to be placed in the frames of their wheels, as announcements of the great time coming in case anyone in this part of the world has not already heard all about it, and secured his seat already in the grand stand. Reserved seats are going fast at Mallinson's North Avenue pharmacy, and the sooner one secures his sitting, the better will he see the wheels go 'round and the best men win. Admission tickets are to be had at the bicycle stores and of the club members, and these too may be at a premium before a week has passed, because there is a limit to the capacity of the Crescent Oval bleachers and, it is estimated by the New York papers, that no less than 5,000 wheelmen will blow into Plainfield after the Irvington-Milburn road race on May 30, to take in the track events.

The meeting adjourned to meet Thursday evening, May 28.

At the conclusion of the club meeting the Board of Governors met and elected the following to membership: Harry C. Adams, Frank Day, J. S. Higham, C. E. Pearsall, and A. C. Blair.

The members who had been posted for non-payment of dues were dropped from the rolls.

STUDENT GEOLOGISTS.

A High School Party Enjoy a Trip into the Country.

Geology is being taken up with a good deal of interest by the High School students after George Fountain's talk of Friday morning. Yesterday afternoon a party of young people from the High School, under the leadership of George Fountain and Lyman R. Allen, teacher of the sciences, went on a tour of investigation towards Netherwood and Fanwood. After an interesting search that proved fairly successful the party broke up, some going to visit the water works, others taking the train at Fanwood, and the rest visiting the Fanwood cut and returning home on foot. Among those who spent the afternoon with Mr. Fountain and Mr. Allen were the Misses Florence L. Spaulding, Marie Bourgeois, Helen Osgood, Mabelle Force, Charles Noble, Thomas D. Blair, Edgar I. Serrell, Charles B. Morse, Walter Raynolds, Frederick Coriell, Paul Kimball, Henry Eggerding and Ernest F. Suffren.

NEW BRIDGE AT CLINTON AVENUE.

Joint Committee of Freeholders Decided This Yesterday.

A joint committee from the Union and Somerset County Board of Freeholders visited Plainfield yesterday to investigate as to the need and advisability of building new line bridges over Green brook at Clinton and Giraud avenues. At Clinton avenue the representatives of both boards were in favor of building a new bridge and it was decided to recommend to their respective boards that an iron structure, 24 feet wide, be ordered. Wm. T. Kirk was employed to prepare the necessary plans and specifications. As to the improvement at Giraud avenue the committee was divided, the Union County members favoring the same action as taken at Clinton avenue, and the Somerset members declining to sanction it, claiming that the present structure was serviceable for some time to come. Nothing will be done, therefore, at that point.

Bicycler Crowded Into the Gutter.

Rob't A. Grant of Rheaume's lumber and coal yard, had a narrow escape from serious injury this morning while riding his wheel on Watchung avenue. Ballantine's meat wagon came down Third street at a rapid gait and another wagon was going down Watchung avenue. Mr. Day in attempting to keep clear of both vehicles which seemed to him would collide, was oblidged to run in the gutter. Those who saw the affair felt sure that Mr. Day would be seriously injured, but he fortunately escaped.

Better Quality of Pipe Now.

The rejection of much of the sewer pipe which has been consigned to Honan & Sons has been owing to the manufacturers not having time to make it and have it ready for delivery by May 1, as the contract called for. They were compelled, therefore, to fill the orders with odd pieces, much of which would not stand the inspection of Chief Engineer Gavett. But latterly the consignments have been of much better quality and but little has been rejected. This allows the contractors to proceed with their work much more rapidly.

Bowling at Dunellen.

The following will play in the two-men bowling tournament at Dunellen this evening; Sauer Brothers against Taylor and Giles; Sauer Brothers against Lindslay and Giles; Sauer Brothers against Bamberger and Neal; Krewson and Kippel against Bamberger and Neal; Thiers and McConnell against Reynolds and Price.

Charged With Not Paying for Clothes.

Frank Hale was yesterday arrested by Constable Mattox on a warrant sworn out by the Sherman Outfitting Company charging him with making purchases of them and not paying for them. He was taken to Newark, where Judge Rapp placed him under $100 bonds for appearance at examination Thursday.

She Demands Protection.

Complaint is being made that bicyclers are riding on the sidewalks on South Second street and Clinton avenue. A woman called at the Press office yesterday and stated that she had been knocked down twice in one week. She was very indignant and demands protection by the enforcement of the city ordinances in relation thereto.

Those who have listened to the enjoyable music rendered by a college glee club will be glad to hear the Rutgers boys at the Y. M. C. A. Hall this evening. Admission, 25 cents. Reserved seats, 10 cents extra.

CONTROL OF SEMINARY

General Assembly Still Considering the Subject.

Winthrop S. Gilman's Famous Letter Denounced by Drs. White and Page—Ex-Gov. Beaver Makes One of the Best Speeches of the Day. Favors the Committee's Report.

Pittsburg, May 21.—The end of the debate on seminary control, which has occupied the time of the Presbyterian assembly since its session began, is in sight. The conservative forces are still stronger to-day. This is largely the result of the publication of the letter sent out by Winthrop S. Gilman, opposing the candidacy of Dr. Booth for moderator and reflecting unfavorably on the conservatives.

Dr. Page Denounced It.

As soon as the preliminary proceedings were over the question of the circular came up. Dr. E. E. White, of Columbus, whose name Mr. Gilman used as being opposed to Dr. Booth and in favor of Dr. Page, of Kansas, denouced the letter as an outrage and the use of his name entirely unauthorized. Dr. Page himself addressed the assembly, saying that the use of his name was not warranted and he repudiated the whole affair.

Laws of Ohio Against It.

The assembly proceeded with the debate and Dr. Wm. O. Thompson, presiden of Miami university, spoke against the report of the committee. Dr. Thompson believed in assembly supervision over the seminaries, but was opposed to the report. He argued that the Ohio constitution was such that the charter of Lane could not be changed. The Rev. Dr. Francis Monfort of Cincinnati, the only trustee of Lane seminary to favor the report, created a sensation. He said that in 1870 a $5,000,000 fund for general educational benevolent purpose was raised. Winthrop S. Gilman and John Crosby Brown were members of the committee which had charge of the funds.

An Example of Need of Protection.

The next year it was reported that $1,500,000 had been raised for the educational purposes of the Presbyterian church, and $350,000 of it had been given to Union as part of its endowment fund. Union seceded from the church, Dr. Monfort said, but the $350,000 still remained in its endowment fund. He gave this as an example of the need of protection.

Ex-Governor Beaver Speaks.

The most rousing speech of the morning was made by ex-Governor James A. Beaver, who appeared as a director of Princeton seminary and an enthusiastic advocate of the committee report. "This is not a ques ion," he said, "of assembly control. The seminaries belong to the Presbyterian church, and it is a question of the church caring for her ministers. I am glad to see that we all want the same thing and I am glad to see that some of us think we really have got the same thing."

To Continue the Movement.

The assembly, by a vote of 432 to 98, decided to continue the movement which is intended to give the assembly absolute control over its theological seminaries. The resolutions and recommendations were adopted by overwhelming majorities. An attempt to get a yea and nay vote failed for lack of a vote of one-third of the commissioners in its favor, only 105 responding to the demand. Jubilation marked the faces of those who supported the resolutions of the conference committee, and the features of the moderator and clerk were wreathed in smiles.

Loses His Seat in the Commons.

London, May 21.—The committee appointed by the house of commons in connection with Lord Coleridge's succession to the peerage have adopted a report affirming the fact that succession to a peerage disables the successor from being elected to, or sitting or voting in the house of commons.

CARLISLE AT COVINGTON.

Given a Hearty Reception and His Speech Listened To With Interest.

Cincinnati, May 21.—At Central garden in Covington last night Secretary Carlisle received an ovation uparalleled in the history of politics in that section of Kentucy. It was a magnificent tribute to the high esteem in which he is held by political friends and foes alike. Of the 3,000 who jammed themselves into a space hardly large enough for two-thirds that many were men of all parties, classes and conditions. Women were there, too, notwithstanding the fact that it was urged that they stay away and let the voters hear the distinguished speaker. Packed in almost as tightly were many thousands more who could not get beyond the gates, all prepared to give the secretary the most enthusiastic reception he has ever received at the hands of those who have honored him so often.

A Grand Reception.

When he appeared at the garden there was wild cheering and a general din. It, however, was hardly more enthusiastic than that given him at the home of his friend, Mr. Queen, a few minutes before. There the parade of thousands from Covington, Newport and the suburban villages stretching up and down the river augmented by 800 from Cincinnati, with bands and horns, passed in review before him.

Repeatedly Cheered.

The secretary was vociferously cheered throughout his speech against the free coinage of silver. His elaborate and eloquent argument was listened to attentively, and at its conclusion the secretary was again cheered most heartily.

MORE GOLD FOR BONDS.

Receipts from Abroad and Deposits by Members of the Syndicate.

New York, May 21.—About $1,000,000 in gold was deposited in the United States Assay office yesterday, whence it will find its way to the United States treasury in payment for the European half of the United States new 4 per cent. bonds. The gold was brought from England on the Cunard steamship Etruria, and was consigned to August Belmont & Co. There was also deposited in the United States treasury on account of the Belmont-Morgan syndicate $575,000 in gold (with more in sight) by banks which were called upon to deposit the balance of the extra gold they agreed to furnish the syndicate in consideration of being admitted to participation therein. This gold does not go into the government's account, and is, therefore, not reckoned as free gold.

I., indicted for bribery in connection with the Campbell ice-cutting bill, before the circuit court in this city at the term beginning on Tuesday, June 4. He has finished the work of preparing the case on behalf of the people, and declares that he shall oppose any effort of counsel for the defense to put the trial over to the next term.

Florence, May 21.—The inhabitants of this city have entirely recovered from the fright caused by the earthquakes Saturday night, there having been no recurrence of the movements. MEADE REPRIMANDED

Retired from Service by the President.

Mr. Cleveland Indorses His Regrets on the Document Sorry That the Former Brilliant Service of the Admiral Should at Its Close Be Tarnished by Indiscretion.

Washington, May 21.—Rear Admiral Meade was placed on the retired list yesterday with a reprimand for criticising the administration. Secretary Herbert recommended the retirement, and the president indorsed thereon as follows:

The President's Rebuke.

"The within recommendation is approved, and Rear Admiral Richard W. Meade is hereby retired from active service pursuant to section 1,443 of the revised statutes. The president regrets exceedingly that the long active service of this officer, so brilliant in its early stages and so often marked by honorable incidents, should at its close be tarnished by conduct at variance with a commendable career and inconsistent with the example which an officer of his high rank should furnish of subordination and submission to the restraints of wholesome discipline and manifest propriety. GROVER CLEVELAND."

Worked Hard on the Papers.

Secretary Herbert, Admiral Ramsay, Judge Advocate General Lemly and a number of clerks were at the navy department nearly all day Sunday and worked upon the papers in the Meade case until 2 o'clock in the morning. Secretary Herbert came to the navy department at 9 o'clock, gathered up all the papers in the Meade case and took them to the White house at 10 o'clock, where he was joined by Secretary Lamont.

Comes Out Ahead.

After an hour's conference with the president Secretary Herbert returned to the department, and, when asked what news there was in the case, said that he would make an official statement later in the day. Admiral Meade requested to be retired yesterday. The president's rebuke does not have the effect that an official reprimand from the navy department would have had. Mead is admitted to have come out ahead of the administration, and those who know him say he will not mind the slight strictures cast on him by the president.

THE WASHINGTON INVALIDS.

Ex-Secretary McCulloch Worse—Gen. Coggeswell Growing Weaker.

Washington, May 21.—Ex-Secretary McCulloch is reported much worse this morning. He is in a precarious condition. Gen. Coggeswell did not rest very well last night. Secretary Gresham's condition, while not appreciably worse, has not improved for two days. He suffers a great deal from restlessness at night. Miss Dodge (Gail Hamilton) is decidedly worse this morning, and it is thought she cannot live many hours longer.

Harrisburg, Pa., May 21.—The spectators in the gallery of the house last evening who expected to hear something out of the common when the members were called to the bar of the house to purge themselves of contempt for their absence on Friday last without leave, were disappointed. When the house met Mr. Ritter of Philadelphia offered a resolution that as all the members who had been absent on Friday without leave were present, they be excused and the proceedings against them be discontinued. The resolution was unanimously adopted.

New York, May 21.—The counsel for Inspector McLaughlin late yesterday afternoon filed in the supreme court a notice of appeal from Justice Ingraham's decision of yesterday morning forcing McLaughlin to trial and refusing him a change of venue. Some lawyers think that this acts as a stay and will stop the trial.

The Football Apology.

New Haven, Conn., May 21.—The opinion now seems to prevail among the Yale football men that the graduates will take a more active hand in the new football difficulty, and that probably Yale will be satisfied with a mild disclaimer on Harvard's part. It is understood that on the part of Yale the negotiations have been left largely to S. J. Elder, of Boston.

men may find a positive cure for Consumption, but it is a great thing to be able to prevent it, and in its early stages even to cure it. The only remedy yet known to prevent, as well as to cure in the early stages of the disease, is Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil with the Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda.

It acts in two ways—as a medicine destroying the germs which cause the disease, and as a food stopping the wasting (the consuming), and replacing the lost flesh and tissue.

WILL BE RESENTENCED

Probably Buchanan's Last Chance Is Gone.

To Be Arraigned on Monday in the Court of Appeals To Show Cause Why He Should Not Be Again Condemned To Die—Opposing Counsel's Action Denounced.

Albany, May 21.—District Attorney Fellows made a motion yesterday before the court of appeals that an order be issued directing the warden of Sing Sing prison to produce Dr. Buchanan before the court of appeals to show cause why he should not be resentenced. This is the first case of its nature that has ever come before the court of appeals in this state. Yesterday was motion day in the court, and the court room was filled with distinguished lawyers, including United States Senator David B. Hill.

Accused of Bad Faith.

District Attorney Fellows and Deputy District Attorney John D. Lindsay appeared on behalf of the application, and George W. Fitzgibbons and David T. Kimball in opposition. The district attorney, in making the application, reviewed the facts of the case and accused the attorneys for Dr. Buchanan of bad faith in the proceedings. He reviewed the granting of the first respite by Gov. Morton on the application of Mrs. Buchanan, and said he would not at that time go into the details of what was charged to have been a scheme on the part of Buchanan's lawyers in sending Mrs. Buchanan up to Albany to plead with the governor.

Shut Off by the Court.

Referring to the appeal which Buchanan's attorneys took from the decision of Judge Brown of the United States district court in refusing to entertain an application for a writ of habeas corpus, he cited an opinion of the United States supreme court to the effect that such a denial was not appealable. In answer Attorney Fitzgibbons made an effort to go into the details of the case, but was stopped by Chief Judge Andrews, who said that the only question before the court was whether there was any litigation pending in the United States supreme court or not. He gave Buchanan's attorney two days to file a brief on the point.

Must Appear Next Monday.

He then announced that the court would issue an order returnable at one o'clock on Monday afternoon next, requiring the warden of Sing Sing prison to produce Dr. Robert W. Buchanan before that court to show cause why he should not be resentenced.

Over 100,000 Visitors Expected During the Odd Fellows' Week.

Philadelphia, May 21.—The buildings of the principal streets of Philadelphia are profusely decorated with flags and bunting to-day in honor of the Odd Fellows, who will own this city during the present week. The most important event on the programme will be the dedication to-day of their handsome temple at Broad and Cherry streets, which has just been finished at a cost of more than $500,000, and an immense parade, in which 50,000 marchers will be in line. It is estimated that over 100,000 visitors are in the city, and the three links, Friendship, Love and Truth, are very much in evidence.

NOTICE TO COLLECTORS.

Ordered To Stop All Income Tax Work and Return Books.

Washington, May 21.—Internal Revenue Commissioner Miller last night sent the following telegram to all collectors of internal revenue: "Income tax law declared unconstitutional by supreme court. Stop all work in connection therewith, and send to this office at once under seal all books, assessment lists, returns, and records in your office or hands of deputies relating to income tax."

Will Lose Their Jobs.

New Haven, Conn., May 21.—Collector of Internal Revenue Byxbe says that the decision of the supreme court in the income tax matter will necessitate the discharge of the following deputies who were appointed to collect the tax: C. W. Mersey and Edward McGlyn, Providence, R. I.; W. H. Harty, Bridgeport; T. K. Dun, New Haven; Samuel Raymond, Hartford; H. G. Parson, New Britain; C. S. Starr, New London, and G. K. Dennison, Chester. The returns received in Connecticut represented about $600,000 in taxes.

SENATOR HILL ELATED.

In Receipt of Many Congratulatory Telegrams.

Albany, May 21.—United States Senator David B. Hill was much pleased when he learned that the United States supreme court had declared the income tax law unconstitutional. The senator has received many congratulatory telegrams from all sections of the country, some of them recalling the fact that he was the only democratic senator who refused to vote for the tariff bill on account of the incorporation of the income tax feature in the measure. John Boyd Thacher, who was among the senator's callers last evening, recalled the senator's closing words of his speech opposing the income tax, when he said: "Sink or swim, live or die, survive or perish, I cannot and will not vote for the measure in its present shape."

Best Decision in This Decade.

In speaking of the decision Senator Hill said: "I never believed the income tax provision to be constitutional and hence sincerely regretted its unwise and foolish insertion in a tariff reform bill. The decision that it is unconstitutional will afford relief everywhere and tend to increase business prosperity which is slowly but surely reviving. Undoubtedly in some sections of the country there will arise a demand for an amendment of the constitution so as to enable an income tax law to be passed, but it will be unavailing, spasmodic, and silly. The battle has been fought and won; no direct taxes will ever hereafter be imposed by the federal government, but such taxes will be reserved to the several states. The supreme court of the United States is entitled to the thanks of the country for its decision. The decision will do more for our country, will be of more lasting benefit to our free institutions, will clear the political atmosphere better than anything that has occurred in this decade."

Gen. Harrison's Views.

New York, May 21.—In an interview on the income tax decision to-day ex-President Harrison said: "I have no special comment to make, but I believe it is better that the law should be declared unconstitutional rather than that it should be left in the tangled shape in which it was placed by the previous decision. That decision sandbagged people into paying their money. It levied a tax on merchants and mercantile interests while it let the bond clipper and rent taker go free."

ORDERED THEM OUT.

Chicago's Mayor Makes Quick Work of an Italian Delegation.

Chicago, May 21.—Mayor Swift's prompt action averted serious trouble and possibly bloodshed in the city hall yesterday. A mob of nearly 200 Italians from the 23d ward, led by Antonio Philippi, called at the mayor's office to demand work and assumed a threatening attitude besides blocking the corridors. When the mayor heard the men wanted to see him he summoned the leader before him and gave him two minutes to get out of the city hall with his gang or be thrown out by the police. Philippi meekly called to his noisy followers and left the building in one minute.

CORRESPONDENTS WARNED.

Havana, May 21.—The goverment has granted a civil trial to Maj.-Gen. Julio Sanguily, the rebel leader, who is now under arrest here. An offici l warning has been issued to newspaper correspondents stating that if they cross into the rebel lines and return they will do so under penalty of being shot.

IS THE FIGHT ENDED?

Treasury Officials Can Reopen Income Tax Case.

A Refusal To Refund the Money Already Received Would Throw the Matter Again Into the Courts—Comsioner Miller Telegraphs Instructions to Deputies To Stop All Work.

Washington, May 21.—The abrogation of the income tax has revived the rumor that an extra session of congress will be necessary in order to supply more revenue by increased taxation or else that another issue of bonds will be made to meet the situation. There is now a grave question whether the treasury can be sufficiently sustained by its present current receipts until the regular session of congress assembles and provides measures for raising additional revenue.

Will Refund All Money.

Commissioner Miller said to-day that under section 3,220, of the revised statutes, all the money paid in on account of the income tax will be refunded to the payers by the treasury department without delay. Acting under this section internal revenue taxes wrongfully collected, are daily refunded by this office, and the same action will be taken as to repaying the income tax collected. It amounts to only $73,000.

Fight May No. End Here.

Attorney General Olney, when he returned to the department of justice from the supreme court, said he had no opinion one way or another to express on the decision of the court on the income tax. There was no further move for the government to take in the matter. It is intimated however in official circles, that with the personnel of the supreme court changed, as it may be by the retirement of one of the justices, the whole subject might be tried over again. This could be done, it was said by the treasury officials refusing to refund the income tax collected, and having the party enter suit to recover the money.

Secretary Curtis Not Uneasy.

Assistant Secretary Curtis is of the opinion that the revenue will be sufficient, unless there is a decided decrease in receipts, which he does not anticipate. At the close of business yesterday the available treasury balance was $85,000,000, exclusive of the gold reserve of $97,000,000. The Belmont-Morgan syndicate owe the treasury about $10,000,000 on the last sale of bonds, which if added would swell the total of available funds, including the gold reserve, to $192,000,000. The deficit for the year to date is $51,000,000 with the expectation that it will be reduced by June 1 to $47,000,000, or $46,000,000, and by July 1, the beginning of the fiscal year, the total deficit is not expected to exceed $52,000,000 or $53,000,000.

No Bond Issue May Be Necessary.

Because of the heavy appropriation that then becomes available, notably $5,000,000 for the sugar bounty, the deficit for the five months to December 1, with the receipts running no heavier than now, it is estimated will be about $35,000,000. If this estimate is correct and there is no raid on the treasury gold reserve, the best opinion of treasury officials is that no bond issue will be necessary.

May Increase Beer Tax.

Congress will, of course, be expected to raise additional revenue to replace the amount calculated to be derived from the income tax. Many government officials favor increasing the tax on beer to $2 per barrel to provide the additional necessary revenues. This will yield, it is said, between $20,000,000 and $25,000,000, which with current receipts will provide sufficient revenue to make the receipts and expenses meet.

NOT A SURPRISE TO MANY.

Decision Declaring the Income Tax Law Unconstitutional.

Washington, May 21.—The vote of the United States supreme court yesterday declaring the income tax law unconstitutional was not a surprise to many. Those who voted against the law were Chief Justice Fuller and Judges Field, Gray, Brewer and Shiras. For the law, Judges Harlan, White, Brown and Jackson. Chief Justice Fuller read the decision for the court. Judges Harlan, Jackson and Brown read dissenting opinions. The conclusions of the court were as follows:

Direct Taxes.

"(1.) We adhere to the opinion, already announced, that taxes on real estate being undisputably direct taxes, taxes on the rents or income of real estate are equally direct taxes. (2.) We are of the opinion that taxes on personal property or on the income of personal property are likewise direct taxes. (3.) The tax imposed by sections 27 to 37, inclusive, of the act of 1894, so far as it falls on the income of real estate and on personal property, being a direct tax within the meaning of the constitution, and therefore unconstitutional and void, because not apportioned according to representation, all the sections, constituting one entire scheme of taxation, are necessarily invalid. The decrees hereinbefore entered in this court will be vacated. The decrees below will be reversed and the cases remanded, with instructions to grant the relief prayed."

The Entire Law Void.

Sections 27 to 37 of the tariff act of 1894, referred to in the conclusions of the court in the opinions, are all that section of the act relating to the income tax, so that the entire tax law is declared void specifically. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the main opinion of the court, which consisted of about 7,000 words. The fact that Judge Jackson was in the city and that he had participated in the consultation did not become generally known until a few minutes before the court came in. He occupied his seat with the other members of the court, making a full bench present at the delivery of the opinion, as there was at the hearing.

HIS FIDDLE TALKED FOR HIM.

An Old Negro's Proof That He Had a Right to Be Carrying the Instrument.

Several nights ago in Louisville, as Patrolman Charles Rommel was patrolling his beat he discovered an old negro walking down the street with a violin under his arm. When he had gotten even with him he stopped him and began questioning him. The policeman was not satisfied with the negro's account of where he had gotten the instrument, and he placed him under arrest. The negro went on without a word, and at the station gave his name as James McCloskey.

The violin was worth perhaps forty or fifty dollars. During the course of the trial the policeman told the Judge that the negro had admitted to him that he could not play on the instrument, and that was one reason why he made the arrest as he knew that a man would not pay a large sum for a thing he could not use.

Up to this time the prisoner had remained silent. He had sat with downcast eyes and did not seem to hear what was going on. When he heard this he looked up and said:

"He's mistaken, oo' Honor. I didn't say that I couldn't play on the violin."

The Judge remained silent a moment and then asked that the instrument be handed the negro. A light came in the negro's face as he took the instrument into his hands. He looked it over carefully and then fondled it under his arm. He then took it from under his arm and began tuneing it. He had scarcely struck the first note when the crowd in the court room began to stir and move closer to the prisoner's dock.

In a few moments the instrument was tuned, and in the sweetest strains the "Arkansas Traveler" echoed and re-echoed through the court room. The crowd began to pat their feet in time with the music, and the Judge had to order the negro to stop playing. While the prisoner was playing his hand trembled and his eyes shone with unusual brightness. It was with reluctance that he stopped playing and the crowd looked disappointed.

The negro sat still a moment, but he could stand it no longer. Again he placed the violin to his shoulder and began playing "I'se gwine back to Dixie." The crowd in the court room could contain themselves no longer, and it was with difficulty that order was restored. Again the negro was stopped from playing. The Judge looked at the Prosecuting Attorney and then at the arresting officer.

"Do you say this man cannot play?" he said. The arguing of the case was finished and the negro was dismissed.

Use it in Time.

Catarrh starts in the nasal passages, affecting eyes, ears and throat, and is, in fact, the great enemy of the mucous membrane. Neglected colds in the head almost invariably precede catarrh, causing an excessive flow of mucous, and if the mucous discharge becomes interrupted the disagreeable results of catarrh will follow, such as bad breath, severe pain across forehead and about the eyes, a roaring and buzzing sound in the ears and oftentimes a very offensive discharge. Ely's Cream Balm is the acknowledged cure for these troubles.

THE EYE OF BEATRICE.

BY EDWARD J. WHEELOCK.

I.

Shortly before 3 o'clock on the morning of the 7th of May, 1881, four young men sat playing whist in an upper room of one of the best-known clubs of New York.

For obvious reasons we will, in the present narrative, disguise the title of this organization under the name of "The Myrtle."

Of the four young men we are concerned with but one. This was Roger Laroue, a black-haired, black-eyed young fellow, with a shifting gaze and uncommonly good luck at cards. He was dressed faultlessly, appeared sufficiently wealthy for all mundane purposes, lived in a state of careless bachelorhood, had no known relatives living, and had dropped into Gotham society a year or so before from Paris or Berlin or some other place where it would be equally impossible to hunt up his antecedents.

In London such a man would be promptly black-balled at any respectable club. But in New York things are done differently, and Roger's application for membership in "The Myrtles" had been backed by two of the foremost leaders of the ultra-gilded set.

The room in which the quartet sat was in nowise different from dozens of such semi-private rooms in fashionable clubs the world over. It was papered in deep maroon. The furniture and wainscotting were of heavy oak. Upon one side of the room was the door, hung with a rich Oriental portiere. Upon another were two broad windows overlooking the electric-lighted square. Upon another there simply hung an etching or two in broad white and gilt frames.

Upon the fourth was an antique mantel with oak paneling. Over this mantel hung a beautiful copy in oils of the Beatrice Cenci, with those calm, lucid eyes following every movement of the inmates of the room.

Through the disposition of the whist players Roger Laroue sat with his back to the mantel, and the Beatrice Cenci gazed down upon the top of his head.

The game had been in progress since midnight.

One of the players, at the end of a certain hand, touched an electric bell, and a moment later a club waiter appeared.

"Alfonse, some more brandy, and some cigars."

"A dash of absinthe with mine," muttered Roger Laroue, absorbed in the hand which had fallen to his lot in the new deal.

Alfonse was not the typical club waiter. His dress suit was irreproachable, his face was clean-shaven, his attitude was respectful. But his cadaverous face was disquieting, and he had big green eyes that made him an uncomfortable man to look full in the face. He claimed to be a Pole, and spoke English with a barbarous accent. He was not a favorite with the members, but as he had been with "The Myrtle" for six months, and no specific fault could be found with him, he was tolerated.

If the four young men had been less interested in the painted bits of pasteboard to-night they might have noticed that Alfonse's green eyes were fastened upon Roger Laroue's face during the entire time he was in the room.

WITH A SCREAM OF AGONY HE THREW UP HIS HANDS.

And there was an ominous light flickering in the depths of those catlike orbs.

The brandy and cigars were brought, and the game proceeded. For some minutes the silence was only broken by the shuffle and flip of the cards upon the table.

Three was chimed by the silvery bell of a dainty ormulu clock beneath the Beatrice Cenci.

Suddenly there was a sharp, swift swish in the air like the flight of a heavy whip.

With a scream of agony, Roger Laroue threw up his hands, raining the cards about him, and, with a single moan, dropped heavily to the floor.

When his friends went to his assistance he was dead.

When one of the most skillful surgeons in New York came to make the post-mortem this was what he found.

A jagged wound about a quarter of an inch in diameter, situated in the back of the dead man's head almost directly over the suture between the occipital and parietal bones.

Imbedded deeply in the brain a small, hard bullet, of evidently some composition of lead with antimony or copper, and nearly square in shape.

Beyond this, nothing.

At the inquest the only relevant testimony was that given by the three other card players, and this was mainly negative in character so far as the question as to what killed Roger Laroue was concerned.

They had seen their friend sitting before them one moment; had heard him scream and seen him fall the next. There had been no report, as of a gun or revolver, no smoke, no smell, no sound, saving that mysterious swishing of the air which had preceded the catastrophe. There had been nobody else in the room but the four whist players, nor, so far as was known, had there been anybody else in that portion of the clubhouse, the maroon-papered room being in the third story.

This was the standing of the case when it was put into the hands of Sergeant Detective Stacey of Inspector Byrnes' staff for solution.

Stacey was not a shrewd detective by any means, but he had acquired the reputation of being one of the most brilliant guessers on the metropolitan force. That is to say, by putting together in his mind the scattered facts of a puzzling case he could hit at the solution as by inspiration, without the troublesome necessity of running down all manner of insignificant clews.

Two weeks later another young man was killed in the maroon-papered room of the "The Myrtle" in precisely the same way. His name was Hugues Narbon. He was a Parisian artist, had been in New York but a few months on a visit, and was not a member of "The Myrtle," but had free entree there on a privilege card.

He, too, had sat with his back to the oaken mantel and the Beatrice Cenci: he, too, had fallen dead with a jagged wound in the head made by a square bullet; and his death had been preceded by the same mysterious swishing sound that had been heard before Roger Laroue's fall.

About this time there lived amid the wilderness of upper Fifth avenue the Countess Claire Brodsky of Saint Petersburg.

The Countess Claire was about 35, blond, supple, wealthy and widowed. Her social status was undoubted, because traveled Americans had attended her salon in the Czar's capital, had met her late husband, who was of the Czar's diplomatic suite, and all the world had heard of the tragedy of December, 1879 when the Count Nicolai Brodsky, having unwittingly stumbled into a nest of Nihilists in the lower quarters of Moscow while on a midnight roistering bout, had fallen with twenty knife wounds in as many parts of his body.

It is a natural deduction, therefore, that the Countess Claire had no particular love for Nihilists or the principles they represented, and it was surprising to her friends that after her husband's death she should voluntarily have shifted her residence first to Paris and afterward to New York—the two cities above all others which teem with the varied elements of republicanism and democracy.

New York society could find no fault with her. Her establishment was magnificent, her entertainments were conventionally superb, and she was received everywhere. She was a society queen so far as any woman can be in a country where "society" is but a relative term and is applied indifferently to every stratum of the community.

But behind all this worldliness was the woman's heart and soul, the depths of which no one had thus far sounded. She had no intimate friends; she had no lovers.

She had been passionately devoted to her husband, and the shadow of his death hung over her still.

What had brought her to America?

If any one were impertinent enough to ask her she would unhesitatingly reply that it was to escape the memories of her happy married life which tormented her among the familiar scenes of St. Petersburg and Moscow, Cracow and Vienna, and other cities where her husband's diplomatic duties had called him. Besides, she averred an intense admiration for the Americans and the American character.

"But there are Nihilists in America," ventured an acquaintance one day.

"I know it," she replied, in a low voice, with a repressed shudder.

It really did not appear as though Stacey had made much progress on the case after a week's work. From the point of view of the average mortal this was what he had done:

Made a casual inspection of the maroon-papered room, and found—nothing.

Questioned the club servants one by one, and, of course, obtained—nothing.

Not exactly, either, for there was one point which Stacey seized and made use of as a possible foundation for some of his characteristic keen official guessing. This was the fact that both men had been in New York but a comparatively short time before their death, and that both had previously lived in Paris.

Relative to this point a cablegram was forwarded upon Supt. Byrnes' authority to the prefect of police of the Department of the Seine asking for information as to the lives and connections of Roger Laroue and Hugues Narbon in the French capital.

Men possessed of the true detective instinct—the instinct of burrowing beneath the surface of things and interpreting appearances in an entirely different sense from that they seem to warrant—have a highly useful faculty of picking out from amid a crowd certain individuals who, to the ordinary observer, appear in no way distinguished from the average run of mortals, but who, to the acute official mind, give promise of rich results if properly developed.

Through the exercise of this faculty Stacey, upon his second visit to "The Myrtle," had picked out Alfonse, the Polish waiter, as the one man among the score or so of employees of the club upon whom he wanted to keep an eye. Not that there was the slightest evidence connecting Alfonse in any way with the death of the two young men, or that there was anything suspicious in the man's appearance or actions. He was the same imperturbable, obsequious individual as ever.

SKETCHES OF LINCOLN.

He Begins Law Practice at Springfield.

MOVING HIS GOODS AND CHATTELS.

His Entry Into the Law Office—A Tilt With Douglas—Dramatic Scene on the Stump. He Makes an Apology For His Scathing Ridicule.

[From "The Life of Lincoln" by William H. Herndon and Jesse W. Weik. Copyright, 1888, by Jesse W. Weik. Copyright, 1892, by D. Appleton & Co.]

XI.

After serving in the legislature for several terms with no great distinction Lincoln moved to Springfield, and in March, 1837, he was licensed to practice law. His name appears for the first time as attorney for the plaintiff in the case of Hawthorne verses Woolridge. He entered the office and became the partner of his comrade in the Black Hawk war, John T. Stuart, who had gained rather an extensive practice, and who, by the loan of sundry textbooks several years before, had encouraged Lincoln to continue in the study of law. Stuart had emigrated from Kentucky in 1828, and on account of his nativity, if for no other reason, had great influence with the leading people in Springfield. He used to relate that on the next morning after his arrival in Springfield he was standing in front of the village store, leaning against a post in the sidewalk and wondering how to introduce himself to the community, when he was approached by a well dressed old gentleman, who, interesting himself in the newcomer's welfare, inquired after his history and business. "I'm from Kentucky," answered Stuart, "and my profession is that of a lawyer, sir. What is the prospect here?" Throwing his head back and closing his left eye, the old gentleman reflected a moment. "Young man, d——d slim chance for that kind of a combination here," was the response.

A Modest Law Office.

At the time of Lincoln's entry into the office Stuart was just recovering from the effects of a congressional race in which he had been the loser. He was still deeply absorbed in politics and was preparing for the next canvass, in which he was finally successful, defeating the wily and ambitious Stephen A. Douglas. In consequence of the political allurements Stuart did not give to the law his undivided time or the full force of his energy and intellect. Thus more or less responsibility in the management of business and the conduct of cases soon devolved on Lincoln. The entries in the account books of the firm are all in the handwriting of Lincoln. Most of the declarations and pleas were written by him also. This sort of exercise was never congenial to him, and it was the only time, save a brief period under Judge Logan, that he served as junior partner and performed the labor required of one who serves in that rather subordinate capacity. He had not yet learned to love work. The office of the firm was in the upper story of a building opposite the northwest corner of the present Courthouse square. In the room underneath the county court was held. The furniture was in keeping with the pretensions of the firm—a small lounge or bed, a chair containing a buffalo robe, in which the junior member was wont to sit and study, a hard wooden bench, a feeble attempt at a bookcase and a table which answered for a desk. Lincoln's first attempt at settlement in Springfield, which preceded a few days his partnership with Stuart, has been graphically described by his friend, Joshua F. Speed, who generously offered to share his quarters with the young legal aspirant. Speed, who was a prosperous young merchant, reports that Lincoln's personal effects consisted of a pair of saddlebags containing two or three lawbooks and a few pieces of clothing.

STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS.

"He had ridden into town on a borrowed horse," relates Speed, "and engaged from the only cabinet maker in the village a single bedstead. He came into my store, set his saddlebags on the counter and inquired what the furniture for a single bedstead would cost. I took slate and pencil, made a calculation and found the sum for furniture complete would amount to $17 in all. Said he: 'It is probably cheap enough, but I want to say that, cheap as it is, I have not the money to pay. But if you will credit me until Christmas, and my experiment here as a lawyer is a success, I will pay you then. If I fail in that, I will probably never pay you at all.' The tone of his voice was so melancholy that I felt for him. I looked up at him, and I thought then, as I think now, that I never saw so gloomy and melancholy a face in my life. I said to him, 'So small a debt seems to affect you so deeply, I think I can suggest a plan by which you will be able to attain your end without incurring any debt. I have a very large room and a very large double bed in it, which you are perfectly welcome to share with me if you choose.' 'Where is your room?' he asked. 'Up stairs,' said I, pointing to the stairs leading from the store to my room. Without saying a word he took his saddlebags on his arm, went up stairs, set them down on the floor, came down again, and, with a face beaming with pleasure and smiles, exclaimed, 'Well, Speed, I'm moved.'"

A Reply to Douglas.

One evening, while the usual throng of loungers surrounded the inviting fireplace in Speed's store, the conversation turned on political matters. The disputants waxed warm and acrimonious as the discussion proceeded. Business being over for the day, I strolled back, and seating myself on a keg listened with eager interest to the battle going on among these would be statesmen. Stephen A. Douglas, I recollect, was leading on the Democratic side. He had already learned the art of dodging in debate, but still he was subtle, fiery and impetuous. He charged the Whigs with every blunder and political crime he could imagine. No vulnerable spot seemed to have escaped him. At last, with great vehemence, he sprang up and abruptly made a challenge to those who differed with him to discuss the whole matter publicly, remarking that "this store is no place to talk politics."

In answer to Douglas' challenge the contest was entered into. It took place in the Presbyterian church. Douglas, Calhoun, Lamborn and Thomas represented the Democrats, and Logan, Baker, Browning and Lincoln, in the order named, presented the Whig side of the question. One evening was given to each man, and it therefore required over a week to complete the tournament. Lincoln occupied the last evening, and, although the people by that time had necessarily grown a little tired of the monotony and well worn repetition, yet Lincoln's manner of presenting his thoughts and answering his Democratic opponents excited renewed interest. So great was the impression he created that he was asked to furnish his speech to the Sangamon Journal for publication, and it afterward appeared in the columns of that organ.

No sooner had the legislature adjourned than he decided—if he had not already so determined—to run for the same place again. He probably wanted it for a vindication. He was pursued now more fiercely than ever, and he was better able to endure the vilification of a political campaign than when he first offered himself to the voters in New Salem.

Among the Democratic orators who stumped the county at this time was one Taylor, commonly known as Colonel Dick Taylor. He was a showy, bombastic man, with a weakness for fine clothes and other personal adornments. Frequently he was pitted against Lincoln and indulged in many bitter flings at the lordly ways and aristocratic pretensions of the Whigs. He had a way of appealing to "his horny handed neighbors" and resorted to many other artful tricks of a demagogue. When he was one day expatiating in his accustomed style, Lincoln, in a spirit of mischief, and, as he expressed it, "to take the wind out of his sails," slipped up to the speaker's side, and catching his vest by the lower edge gave it a sharp pull. The latter instantly opened and revealed to his astonished hearers a ruffled shirt front glittering with watch chain, seals and other golden jewels. The effect was startling. The speaker stood confused and dumfounded, while the audience roared with laughter. When it came Lincoln's turn to answer, he covered the gallant colonel over in this style: "While Colonel Taylor was making these charges against the Whigs over the country, riding in fine carriages, wearing ruffled shirts, kid gloves, massive gold watch chains with large gold seals and flourishing a heavy gold headed cane, I was a poor boy, hired on a flatboat at $8 a month, and had only one pair of breeches to my back, and they were buckskin. Now, if you know the nature of buckskin, when wet and dried by the sun, it will shrink, and my breeches kept shrinking until they left several inches of my legs bare between the tops of my socks and lower part of breeches, and while I was growing taller they were becoming shorter and so much tighter that they left a blue streak around my legs that can be seen to this day. If you call this aristocracy, I plead guilty to the charge."

He Champions a Friend.

It was during this same canvass that Lincoln by his manly interference protected his friend E. D. Baker from the anger of an infuriated crowd. Baker was a brilliant and effective speaker and quite as full, too, of courage as invective. He was addressing a crowd in the courtroom, which was immediately underneath Stuart & Lincoln's office. Just above the platform on which the speaker stood was a trapdoor in the floor, which opened into Lincoln's office. Lincoln at the time, as was often his habit, was lying on the floor looking down through the door at the speaker. I was in the body of the crowd. Baker was hot headed and impulsive, but brave as a lion. Growing warm in his arraignment of the Democratic party, he charged that "wherever there was a land office there was a Democratic newspaper to defend its corruptions." This angered the brother of the editor of our town paper, who was present, and who cried out, "Pull him down!" at the same time advancing from the crowd as if to perform the task himself. Baker, his face pale with excitement, squared himself for resistance. A shuffling of feet, a forward movement of the crowd, and great confusion followed. Just then a long pair of legs were seen dangling from the aperture above, and instantly the figure of Lincoln dropped on the platform. Motioning with his hands for silence and not succeeding, he seized a stone water pitcher standing near by, threatening to break it over the head of the first man who laid hands on Baker. "Hold on, gentlemen!" he shouted. "This is the land of free speech. Mr. Baker has a right to speak and ought to be heard. I am here to protect him, and no man shall take him from this stand if I can prevent it." His interference had the desire effect. Quiet was soon restored, and the valiant Baker was allowed to proceed.

The "Long Nine."

The canvass of 1840 was Mr. Lincoln's last campaign for the legislature. Feeling that he had had enough honor out of the office, he probably aspired for a place of more distinction. Jesse B. Thomas, one of the men who had represented the Democratic side in the great debate in the Presbyterian church, in a speech at the courthouse during this campaign, indulged in some fun at the expense of the "Long Nine," reflecting somewhat more on Lincoln than the rest. The latter was not present, but being apprised by his friends of what had been said hastened to the meeting, and soon after Thomas closed stepped upon the platform and responded. The substance of his speech on this occasion was not so memorable as the manner of its delivery.

He felt the sting of Thomas' allusions, and for the first time, on the stump or in public, resorted to mimicry for effect. In this, as will be seen later along, he was without a rival. He imitated Thomas in gesture and voice, at times caricaturing his walk and the very motion of his body. Thomas, like everybody else, had some peculiarities of expression and gesture, and these Lincoln succeeded in rendering more prominent than ever. The crowd yelled and cheered as he continued. Encouraged by these demonstrations, the ludicrous features of the speaker's performance gave way to intense and scathing ridicule. Thomas, who was obliged to sit near by and endure the pain of this unique ordeal, was ordinarily sensitive, but the exhibition goaded him to desperation. He was so thoroughly wrought up with suppressed emotion that he actually gave way to tears. I was not a witness of this scene, but the next day it was the talk of the town, and for years afterward it was called the "skinning" of Thomas. Speed was there, so were A. Y. Ellis, Ninian W. Edwards and David Davis, who was just then coming into prominence. The whole thing was so unlike Lincoln it was not soon forgotten.

He was selected as an elector on the Harrison ticket for president in 1840, and as such stumped over a good portion of the state. In debate he frequently met Douglas, who had already become the standard bearer and exponent of Democratic principles. These joint meetings were spirited affairs sometimes, but at no time did he find the Little Giant averse to a conflict. "He was very sensitive," relates one of his colleagues on the stump, "where he thought he had failed to meet the expectations of his friends."

UNHAPPY RICH MEN.

WEALTH DOES NOT BRING PEACE AND CONTENTMENT.

Millionaires Carnegie, Rockefeller, Pullman, Sage, Mackay, Morton and Corbin Give Remarkable Opinions as to the Pleasure of Possessing Much Money.

Does wealth bring happiness? This question was recently put by the New York World to a number of prominent American millionaires—men who have known both poverty and riches, and, having been the architects of their own fortunes, have in a practical way tested the matter for themselves. Their answers will be found below:

No American rich man ever had such a wonderful career as Andrew Carnegie, the Pittsburg iron and steel manufacturer. Mr. Carnegie has written and delivered addresses on wealth and its obligations. His reply was as follows:

"Wealth can only bring happiness in the sense that it brings us greater opportunities of making others happy. Great wealth is a sacred trust which the possessor should hold and administer to the best possible advantage for the benefit of his fellow men. The truest happiness, indeed the only happiness, in this life worth the name is to make others happy, or at least by improving their condition in some way to make them happier than they otherwise would be.

ANDREW CARNEGIE."

John D. Rockefeller, the Standard Oil magnate, whose wealth is estimated at upwards of $100,000,000, replied:

"Wealth does not bring happiness for many reasons. One of these is that no man thinks himself wealthy. No man can ever be so rich that there will not be others wealthier than he is, and the knowledge of that fact will make him feel poor, no matter how great his possessions. Practically, then, there is no such thing as wealth. That is, there is no such thing as a wealthy man.

"Whether a man is rich or poor must always be determined by the relation of his desires and expenditures to his income. If a man believes himself rich, and has everything he desires and feels that he needs, he really is rich, no matter if he is worth only ten dollars. On the contrary, if he is worth ten millions and yet has desires and needs which he is unable, or thinks himself unable to gratify or supply, he is poor.

"As most men grow richer their ambitions, tastes and desires expand largely, even to an extent wholly disproportionate to their acquisitions, and many men have felt much poorer when they had accumulated a fortune of five million dollars than they did when they had but one million, for the reason that their ideas had so enlarged that they desired to live in such magnificence or to carry out such great schemes of business enterprise or philanthropy as the income from ten million dollars could not possibly compass.

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER."

George M. Pullman, the palace car king, writes the following remarkable reply:

"For my own part, I can only say that I am not one iota happier now than I was in the days when I had not a dollar that I could call my own, save that for which I worked from sunny morn to dewy eve. Now that my circumstances have improved, I can only wear one suit of clothes at a time, and that suit is no better than the one I wore then.

"I ate three square meals daily at that time and cannot eat any more now. Then I had no responsibility and no cares. I only had to be at my post and do my duty, and when my hours of work were over my mind and body were free as those of a bird. I could go to sleep as soon as my head touched the pillow and sleep soundly till morning.

"Now that I have the weight of vast interests and business cares constantly resting upon me, both in and out of working hours, I do not sleep so well as then. All things considered, I believe I was quite as happy, if not much happier, when I was poor. Therefore, with all the great advantages and privileges which wealth confers, I do not believe that it brings happiness.

GEORGE M. PULLMAN."

"Uncle" Russell Sage, the wizard of Wall street, replied as follows:

"Few people have any idea of the many inconveniences which wealth brings. Those who have will never ask such a foolish question as 'Does wealth bring happiness?' First of all, there are the begging letter writers. Once let people think you are rich and before a year has passed you will have received from people you never heard of before requests for loans, gifts and offices of profit sufficient to exhaust the combined patronage of all the Lord Chancellors Great Britain has ever had and to break the Bank of England.

"A rich man is compelled to live constantly in the public eye. Privacy is practically impossible for him. The public are curious to know more about him, and the newspapers teem with paragraphs about him telling how he opens his letters, how he puts on his shoes and what he has for breakfast. An incognito is an impossibility for him. Everybody knows him, and his entrance into a shop is often the signal for an addition of at least 25 per cent. to the price of any articles he may desire to purchase.

RUSSELL SAGE."

John W. Mackay, the California bonanza king, wrote:

"I am surprised that any one should think for a moment that happiness depends upon wealth. I was very happy during my early struggles with poverty. I enjoyed the toil, privation and hardship I endured to win wealth. When a laborer in a New York ship yard, when swinging a pick and shovel as a miner, I was as happy as I can ever be.

"I had faith in, and hope for the future, and when I began to realize that hope by working hard, saving my money and watching my opportunities, what a happiness I experienced—such a happiness as the possession of my subsequent fortune has failed to give me. I do not think wealth brings happiness.

JOHN W. MACKAY."

Governor Morton is another millionaire who regards his days of poverty as especially happy ones. His reply was:

"When I was a poor young man of 20 years of age, clerking in a country store, I used to think that if, by any wild freak of fortune, I could ever accumulate $100,000 I should be the happiest man alive. Now that I possess that amount, and possibly a little more, I do not think I am really any happier than in my poorer early days.

"Happiness is in no sense dependent upon wealth, for the fact is that when any of us snatch an hour from life's cares to enjoy any of its pleasures we enjoy them just as much whether we are millionaires or paupers, and for the time being we forget that we are either.

LEVI P. MORTON."

Jay Cooke, famous in the old days of Wall street, now an old man, living in Philadelphia, but forgotten, replied:

"My answer to the question 'Does wealth bring happiness?' is emphatically 'No!' Wealth hampers a man in so many ways and brings with it so many anxieties that it is more often a destroyer of happiness. A man who has once mounted to the summit of fortune's hill, and then has fallen from that dizzy height, experiences much greater happiness when he has accumulated wealth for the second time, should he be so fortunate, than when he first became wealthy. He then has the happiness of paying his debts. The happiest moment of my life was when I paid the last dividend on all proved claims against me, and squared myself with the world on the 17th of November, 1890. JAY COOKE."

Austin Corbin, the millionaire railroad man, replied:

"I never realized more forcibly that wealth does not bring happiness than one day at Newport. I had been tooling along the fashionable drive, scanning the faces of passers by. All were evidently bored to death. The ladies, arrayed in richest carriage toilets, seemed afraid to move lest they should disarrange their apparel. Not a ripple of laughter did I hear. All seemed to have arrayed themselves in their best and gone out to drive because it was a duty they owed to their social position to be seen among the other fashionables. Everybody's spirits seemed completely bowed down beneath the weight of fashion, decorum and etiquette, so inseparable from wealth.

"Leaving the Four Hundred element, I drove to an unfashionable and remote part of the beach. There, in an eligible situation, at just the right distance from the water for enjoyment, I saw a neat cottage adorned with the legend: 'Mrs. O'Donnelly's Ladies' and Gents' Boarding House. Terms $6 per week.' A number of athletic looking young men and a bevy of buxom, rosy cheeked young girls were congregated on the porch and lawn. What a contrast the charmingly healthful and natural appearance of these young people to that of the blighted, artificial victims of fashion I had just left! They were all in negligee costume, and merriment, playfulness and health sparkled in every eye and rang out heartily from every lip.

"'Oh,' I thought, 'if I could only escape from the fashionable prison called a hotel by courtesy, where I am confined, with what inexpressible joy I would take board at Mrs. O'Donnelly's.'

"There are so many reasons why wealth does not bring happiness that I cannot take time nor space to enumerate them. One thing I may mention, and that is that his reputed wealth makes a rich man more or less an object of envy to every one not so well off, and he is very apt to be annoyed with threatening letters from socialists and cranks, if not actually made a target for their bullets. The whole life of Baron Nathan Rothschild was made miserable in that way, and the late William H. Vanderbilt is said to have received many such letters.

AUSTIN CORBIN."

The Cleanest Town in the World.

The cleanest town in the world is said to be in Broek, in Holland. It is only a few miles from the capital and has been famous for its cleanliness from time immorial. It is also notable on account of the fanciful style of its houses and yards and gardens and streets.

The people, though only peasants, are all well to do, and all feel a pride in their town. It seems to be the first business of their lives to keep their houses freshly painted, their gardens in perfect order and their yards and streets as clean as a parlor.

No carts are allowed in the streets and no cattle. Though the raising of stock and the making of butter and cheese are their occupations a stranger would never imagine that there were any cattle in the region, unless he went to the beautiful green meadows at the back of the houses or the stables out there where cows are kept in stalls scrubbed and washed like a kitchen.

The streets are too fine and neat for the feet of the animals to step on; all are paved with polished stones, intermingled with bricks of different colors and kept so scrupulously clean that a lady could walk anywhere in white satin slippers. —Pall Mall Gazette.

The Death of Douglas.

"The gods are dead, and all the godlike men
Are dying, too! How fast they disappear!
For death seems discontent to fill the grave
With common bones, but downward to his den
Drags, like a greedy monster, year by year
The men most missed, the good, the wise, the brave!"

—Theodore Tilton.

He's getting long and slim;
He's feeling mighty easy for Better Than Gossip.

"Well, Mrs. Dorcaster, what did they talk about at the tea last evening?" said a lady who had unfortunately been absent. "Any gossip?" "No, not a thing talked about but Peck and Peck's shirt waists. But after all I don't know but that's better than talking gossip, for everybody who trades with Peck seems to have a good word for him."

Delay in Arrival of Sewer Pipe.

The reason of Honan & Sons jumping from Central to Park avenue on Fourth street with their sewer work is that between these two streets ten-inch pipe will be used, while in other sections eight-inch is used, and the larger size has not yet arrived.

Agreeably Surprised.

"I had a very severe cold on my lungs that caused much soreness and gave me considerable uneasiness in regard to the result," says Mr. T. E. Smith, of Billerica, Mass. "A local druggist called my attention to Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and on his recommendation I gave the remedy a careful trial. The result surprised me; I recovered entirely in three days." 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy.

Mr. D. Wiley, ex-postmaster, Black Breek, N. C., was so badly afflicted with rheumatism that he was only able to hobble around with canes, and even then it caused him great pain. After using Chamberlain's Pain Balm he was so much improved that he threw away his canes. He says this liniment did him more good than all other medicine and treatment put together. For sale at 50 cents per bottle at Reynolds's Pharmacy.

It Did the Business.

Mr. J. H. Cobb, publisher of the Mirror, at Brockton, N. Y., says: "For nearly two years the Mirror has been publishing the advertisements of Chamberlain's Remedies. A few days ago the writer was suffering from a bowel trouble and resorted to an old remedy which did not prove efficacious; finally he tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and two doses did the business, checking it completely. For sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy.

A Remarkable Cure of Rheumatism.

From the Groton Connecticut Review.—"David Lewis, who has been afflicted all winter by rheumatism, is out again and all due to one of the medicines advertised in our columns. After trying everything possible, he used Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which has relieved him of all pain, from which he was a constant sufferer and promises to make him fit for duty soon. We know David has been a great sufferer and are glad to see him around again." For sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy.

MEET AND DEFEAT ALL COMERS.

The Park Whisters Latest Victims Are the Harlem Experts.

The Park Club whisters have got so in the habit of conquesting every team with whom they play that it was simply a matter of course with them last night when they defeated the 12-men team of the Harlem Experts, who came out for a friendly game, and incidentally to win whatever laurels they might from the Jersey champions.

The 12-men team was a little change from the games of four and six men which the Parks have been indulging in principally during the season, and was therefore conducive to more interest than it would have been otherwise.

The "N. and S." and "E. and W." in the following score designate the positions of the players at the various tables, whether sitting north and south or east and west:

Parks.		Harlem.
Howell and Rogers	N. and S. 159	Hebbard and Spear	E. and W. 153
Townsend and McCutchen	E. and W. 170	Delmoise and Hildredth	N. and S. 142
Dupee and McGee	N. and S. 153	Adams and Grace	E. and W. 159
Reed and Reed	E. and W. 159	Daniels and Coffin	N. and S. 153
Sandford and Leonard	N. and S. 147	Todd and Withington	E. and W. 165
Matthews and Peck	E. and W. 165	Crall and Kopper	N. and S. 147
	953		919

The difference in the total scores between the two clubs is divided by 2 and this gives the correct number of points by which the game was won by the Parks, which is 17.

After the game a light lunch was served by Steward Jones.

THE WORK THAT COUNTS

Warren Chapel Endeavorers Hear Good Reports.

THEY ARE ACTIVE AND ALERT.

Young Christians Celebrate Their Seventh Anniversary with Appropriate Exercises, Which Show that They Practice What They Preach—Dr. Richards Addresses Words of Advice.

Christian Endeavorers are not afraid of threatening weather as was shown by the good attendance at the seventh anniversary exercises of the Christian Endeavor Society of Warren Chapel last evening. The home society turned out in full force, while a number of visitors from other other societies added to the attendance.

After several hymns were sung, John Herman, president of the society, read a Scripture selection which was followed by a prayer by the pastor, Rev. Joseph O. McKelvey. Rev. Mr. McKelvey then spoke a few words of welcome to all in his usual bright manner. Henry Seader, the retiring president, who was acting as leader of the meeting, next announced the report of the secretary, Miss Sadie M. Searing. She told of the flourishing condition of the society with its total of about 100 and an average attendance at each meeting of 43. The sociables and entertainments held during the year were spoken of, while in the line of missionary work she named the pledging of $50 a year for the support of a missionary in a foreign field.

The treasurer's report came next and showed that the society had aided the excursion fund materially and also assisted in the purchase of a new carpet and new books for the library besides the missionary appropriations.

The Missionary Committee's report dealt more fully with them and told of the success of the two cent a week plan.

The report of the Junior Society was given by its President, Miss Hattie Squiers, and showed the unusually large average attendance of 45. The missionary work was discussed, while the carrying of flowers to the hospital showed another important line of service.

After another hymn, Gilbert Lovell, one of P. Ludwig Conde's bright pupils, rendered a violin solo.

The address of the evening by Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards next interested the audience. He took for his topic "Courage". He spoke of the Christian Endeavor pledge, and remarked that it was a pretty big contract.

Many take it not thinking, and only because others do, never realizing the full extent of it, but signing it on an instant without truly making up their minds to be true Endeavorers. He closed with a plea to all to sign it, earnestly in their hearts now, if they had not before.

At the close of the address President Herman presented a book from the society to the retiring president, Henry Seader, for his faithful services in the past, and another to Miss Maggie Shepherd for her faithful service.

Mr. Seader then announced that this part of the programme had been concluded, but that a more substantial entertainment would commence.

After a general handshaking everybody settled down to enjoy the cake and lemonade that was passed around, and a social chat with their friends.

The efficient committee in charge of the refreshments consisted of Miss Anna Searing, chairman; Miss Louise Keller, Miss Minnie Zeisz, Miss Minnie Bolsterli, Miss Lilly Myers, Miss Hattie Squier, Miss Kate Dyke, Miss Maggie Shepherd, A. R. Johnson, and Frank Splain.

Relic of the Battle.

"Clint" Shannon, of Woolston & Buckle's, secured a trophy at the circus grounds after the battle (?) between the police and the gamblers following the Wild West Show, on Monday last. He has varnished it and hung it up behind Manager Weaver's desk.

Road Improvements.

Street Commissioner Meeker is cutting down the roadbed of Berkley avenue to the grade so as to carry the surface water to the clay pits instead of towards Belvidere avenue, where it considerably damaged the macadamizing of that thoroughfare.

Another Field Day.

A field day is being arranged between the Hope and Monroe Avenue Chapel Leagues, to take place some time during July.

How the Sunday-school Will Grow.

Hope Chapel expects to distribute 600 free tickets for their anuual excursion to the seashore in August

MARSH TO DEFEND.

Judge McCormick Appoints the Plainfielder as Counsel for the Murderer.

Judge McCormick this morning appointed Craig A. Marsh of this city to defend Frank Freehill, the tramp who shot and killed Special Officer Alfred Jewell at Rahway, Sunday, March 2. Freehill has been indicted by the Grand Jury and his trial will be commenced June 17. The facts of the murder are well known to the reading public, and at the trial the prosecution will make a determined effort to convict Freehill of the crime, and in the appointment of today the indicted tramp can consider himself very lucky. He could have secured no better counsel.

MERRY DANCERS.

Daughters of Liberty Have a Pleasant Event in Red Men's Hall.

A jolly party of 150 young people attended the dance of Lucetta Council, No. 21, Daughters of Liberty, in Red Men's hall last night and enjoyed themselves until the small hours of this morning. The hall had been patriotically hung with the Stars and Stripes, which were tastefully arranged. The women who were on the committee of arrangements also wore red, white and blue aprons as a symbol of their order.

Though the Daughters of Liberty were the hostesses they were obliged to fall back on a Son of Liberty to head their committee of arrangements, and this duty devolved upon Gilbert S. Martin, who performed the various functions of the place in a manner that was as graceful as efficient. He was assisted by Mrs. A. Angleman, Mrs. J. W. Robinson, Mrs. W. W. Stratton, Mrs. A. K. Mattis and Miss Laura Johnson. The floor manager was W. W. Stratton, assisted by T. A. Kurzhals.

During the intermission refreshments were served in the banquet room on the floor above. Guttman's orchestra furnished the music.

GAVE THE OFFICER A RUN.

Sergeant Kiely Chased a Fleeing Culprit Into the Brook.

While scuffling in the entrance of Music Hall yesterday afternoon with a lot of young street companions, William Sodard was thrown against the large lithograph picture frame of the Howard Stock Company and demolished the glass. Manager Preston swore out a warrant for his arrest, and placed it in the hands of Sergeant Kiely. As soon as the officer started for the culprit he ran through the theatre and out over the stage into the open lot in the rear of the hall. Here he plunged into the brook, but the Sergeant was close onto his heels and soon captured him. He was taken before Judge Coddington, where he made arrangements to settle for the broken glass. After reprimanding the youngster the Judge suspended sentence on him.

Mr. Spangenberg's New Work.

Ex-Councilman L. Spangenberg of Netherwood has sold his rubber, medal and badge business, 11 Park Row, New York, to the National Stamp Works, 61 Cortland street, and accepted the position of out-door salesman with W. J. Tunison, the Watchung avenue produce dealer. Mr. Spangenberg is especially fitted for his new position by his well-known affibility and thorough business like manner, and his success in this line of work is assured among the Plainfield people, for whose public interests he has gratiously devoted much of his time in past years.

Traffic Blocked.

Somerset street from Front street is closed today, while the sewer pipes are being laid at that point. It is expected that by tomorrow the electric cars will be running on the regular schedule. Passengers are now transferred near the First National Bank to and from Front and Somerset streets. A very large gang of men are now working on the sewers and the work is being pushed rapidly.

Babcock Building to Be Finished.

The executors of the Babcock estate have decided to go ahead and finish all portions of the Babcock Building. Their first conclusion was to only finish the rooms on the upper floors as they were rented, but it has since been decided that the rooms would find occupants much more rapidly if they were completed.

Disturbed the Farmers.

The Rutgers College Glee Club came to Plainfield and returned to New Brunswick last night by stage. On their way home they woke the rural inhabitants from deep slumber with their merry songs.

NO WORD FROM HIBBITTS.

The Amount of His Shortage is Already Over $800.

Further investigations in regard to the disappearance of John Hibbitts, shows no trace of his whereabout.

A Daily Press reporter interviewed the missing son's parents this afternoon and learned that a representative from the Fidelity Title and Trust Company of New York had been to see him in regard to making good the amount short.

Mr. Hibbitts took the representative to his son's property in the West End and told him that he could levy on it if he desired, as he was not willing to mortgage his property for that purpose. He preferred that an effort be made to capture John and hold him good for it.

The representative and Mr. Hibbitts are this afternoon in consultation over the matter. Mr. Hibbitts said that on Friday last John drew $150 from the bank where he was a depositor.

The investigation of the accounts show that the deficiency amounts to $800, and Auditor Hartney is still at work on the books.

No news has yet been received that would indicate the whereabouts of the missing man.

SWEET MUSIC.

Rutgers College Glee Club Provide a Delightful Entertainment.

The lovers of good vocal music who attended the concert given in the Y. M. C. A. hall last evening by the Rutgers College Glee Club heard the rendition of the songs in a manner that is not often listened to in this city.

The club is composed of twelve young men whose efforts last night displayed careful training and frequent rehearsals, so that their clear-toned voices blended and harmonized into a volume of sweet music. No better evidence of how well their hearers appreciated their songs is needed than the fact that they were obliged to respond to every number on the programme with from one to three encores.

The programme was composed mostly of pieces of the familiar college character—more topical than sentimental—and were thoroughly enjoyed by the audience. The members of the Glee Club are: George Wilmot, leader; Alfred Gregor, Waldo Rosencrans, Stanley Jones, Isaac Enyard, George Vaules, Alexander Way, William Van-Dyke, Lester E. Inglis, John B. Vorhees, Herbert Wyckoff, John LeMoine Damer. The accompanist was George Nutman.

THE "FLOWER QUEEN."

The Cantata to be Given in Vincent Chapel, June 11.

Root's cantata of the "Flower Queen" is to be given for the benefit of the Ladies Aid Society of the M. E. Church in Vincent Chapel, Tuesday evening, June 11. An effective chorus has been organized and soloists have been secured. Mrs. Metta Horton Cook, a graduate of the New England Conservatory of Music, who has given the cantata with great success in several New England cities, will have full direction, and a fine performance may be assured. The ladies will serve cake and ice cream at the close of the entertainment, and as the tickets will be placed at a popular figure the chapel should be crowded on that occasion. Further particulars will be given in the advertisement to appear in The Daily Press at a later date.

Deserve to Be Patronized.

May Mulford, Louise Gilmore, Isabelle Edwards and Violet Beerbower, four bright, active girls, called at The Daily Press office today and gave a glowing account of an elaborate fair that is going to be held on the lawn at the residence of Louise Gilmore, 117 West Secoud street, Saturday afternoon and evening. Lots of good things will be on sale and there will be music in the evening. The proceeds will be given to the poor. If stormy it will be postponed one week.

A WORK OF SACRIFICE.

Efforts of College-Bred Girls Among Less Fortunate.

MISS TYLER'S INTERESTING TALK.

No Idea of Establishing a College Settlement in Plainfield at Present, But Nevertheless the Remarks Prove Helpful to Those Who Heard Them—Education and Common Sense.

The Woman's Home Missionary Society of the Park Avenue Baptist Church listened to a highly entertaining talk at the residence of one of the members, 821 First place, yesterday afternoon at 3:30. It was given by Miss Tyler of Philadelphia, on college settlements. There are many people, perhaps, who have never heard of this important work which is being carried on in New York, Boston and Philadelphia, where large settlements are established and doing an incalculatable amount of good. Miss Tyler in her very interesting way told in detail of the work that is being done.

The women that form these settlements are all college bred and refined, and their love for their less fortunate fellow-women has increased so rapidly that it has been the means of a large number entering this field of labor, with the hope of raising them to a higher plane of living They go among the poorer class of women, and live with them, teaching them how to keep house as it should be, and also how to cook, sew, and in fact do all the work that rightfully falls to the lot of womankind.

Of course there are many discouraging features in the work, but education, coupled with the right proportion of common sense, finally triumphs and the receivers of this knowledge cannot express too much appreciation of the kindness and help received.

It is a work that should engage the attention of all earnest Christian people, for not among the least important branches taught is that of Christianity. The high ideals taught by our Saviour are given a most prominent place in the curriculum, and the women thereby helped to lead lives of influence that will be an incentive to future generations. The homes are made brighter, happier, and more healthful after the earnest labors of these faithful women whose only aim and purpose is to bring unfortunate women up to a high standard of excellence where God intended they should be.

The society were very grateful to Miss Tyler for her helpful talk and though there is no idea at present of establishing a college settlement here, the talk will be of value for the excellent advice and suggestions given.

Plainfield offers good advantages for such a settlement and it seems as though one might be started with good results.

A Summer Camp for Boys.

READY FOR MEMORIAL DAY.

John Hand Camp Has Lots to Do on the 30th.

The meeting of John Hand Camp, No. 28, Sons of Veterans, last evening was the last before Memorial Day, and considerable business in relation to its observance was transacted.

A detail of two members was assigned to each cemetery in the vicinity, and early Thursday morning, May 30, they will meet and with flowers and minature flags visit the cemeteries and mark the graves of all Sons of Veterans whether or not they were members of a camp.

In connection with this the Camp desires all persons who know where Sons of Veterans are buried to communicate with First Sergeant Horace J. Martin on Somerset, either by letter or in person. The Memorial committee made a report stating what had been done. It was learned that the citizens of Scotch Plains were planning a programme to supplement the one of the Sons of Veterans and would be followed out in connection with the latter.

As the first anniversary of the Camp will soon be here, a committee was appointed to arrange for proper celebration of it.

A communication was received from a committee of the Red Men, in regard to the celebration of the Fourth of July, who asked that a committee be appointed to confer with a large committee that would meet June 3, to form plans for the celebration. A committee of three was appointed.

THE CASE OF WALLER

France Transfers the Matter to the Courts.

Indicating Either His Trial by the Civil Judiciary or His Ultimate Release from Prison—Ample Evidence for a Claim Against France and a Demand for Indemnity.

Washington, May 22.—The French government, acceding to the demand of the United States, has transferred the case of ex-Consul John L. Waller to ordinary or civil jurisdiction. This action apparently nullifies the sentence of twenty years' confinement imposed on Waller by a French military court in Madagascar, and indicates either his trial by the civil judiciary or his ultimate release from prison. The matter has now reached a stage where the United States government has ample evidence on which to base a claim against the government of France, possibly involving the payment of indemnity for the treatment accorded Waller and the abrogation of the concession obtained by him of valuable rubber forests.

Startling Facts.

Waller is still in prison at Marseilles, but may be transferred to some civil penal institution. The evidence in the case received at the state department is practically complete, and it is understood to contain some rather startling facts that have not heretofore become public. Edward Telfair Wetter, of Georgia, who succeeded Waller as United States consul at Tamatave, it has been claimed, did not put forth his best efforts to extend relief of his government to a distressed citizen of the United States.

Said We Were After a Coal Station.

It is shown by the correspondence sent to the state department that the French government was suspicious that the rubber concession secured by Waller from the Hovas was obtained for the purpose of providing a coaling station for the United States naval vessels. Such an accusation was openly made in Madagascar by partisans of the French.

Taking Away the Rubber.

Whether or not this belief was actually entertained by the French authorities cannot be learned, but the documents now on file at the state department assert that after the French authorities had refused to confirm the concession of the Hovas, French citizens took possession of the rubber forests transferred to the ex-consul and the French vessels have been taking away great quantities of the product to the island of Mauritius and Bourbon. The concession is situated on the sea coast in the southeast part of the island of Madagascar and affords many excellent locations for a coaling station.

The Charge Against Waller.

The exact charge on which Waller was tried has not yet become definitely known in the United States, except to a few of the officials of the state department and they decline to give any information on that subject. Newspaper dispatches have stated that Waller was charged before the military court with sending a letter to the Hovas containing a suggestion of a revolutionary project against the French authorities.

Bray at the State Department.

Paul Bray, Waller's stepson, who recently arrived in New York from Madagascar via Marseilles, spent nearly the entire official day at the state department yesterday, reading the papers concerning the case, and late in the afternoon had an interview with Assistant Secretary Uhl. He declined to discuss Waller's case, holding that he might say something to prejudice it, but expressed himself as highly pleased with the steps the state department was taking in the matter.

CLYMER'S TRIAL STOPPED.

The Prosecutor Insisted on the Presence of a Supreme Court Justice.

Mount Holly, N. J., May 22.—Prosecutor Budd created a sensation in the Burlington county criminal court yesterday by refusing to proceed with the trial of Alfred Clymer, of Burlington, for the murder of Bridget Doyle, in the absence of supreme court Justice Garrison from the bench. Without the justice's attendance Mr. Budd expressed doubt of the county clerk's jurisdiction, and, if a verdict of guilty was rendered, the case would certainly go before all the higher courts at an expense of thousands of dollars.

Queensberry and Son in Court.

London, May 22.—The Marquis of Queensberry and his son, Lord Alfred Douglass, appeared in the Marlborough street court this morning to answer the charge of disorderly conduct and fighting on the street. 5 WHITES, 9 CHINAMEN KILLED.

A Nitro-Glycerine Factory Explosion in California.

Pinole, Cal., May 22.—The nitro-glycerine house of the California Powder works at Pinole blew up yesterday, killing five white men and wounding two others. Nine Chinamen were killed and three others injured. The names of the white employes killed are: O. C. Jones, Pinole, married; David Dean, jr., Pinole; Harry Minugh, married, with a family at Oakland; Charles Venages, Martinez; Walter Taylor, Pinole, all unmarried. Taylor was foreman of the mixing house. The remains of Jones and Harry Minugh are recognizable, although in a mutilated condition. Their faces and upper parts of the bodies only are intact. Their legs and arms are either gone or crushed into a shapeless mass.

Blown Into Bits.

The other white men were blown into bits as were also the Chinamen. Below where the powder house stood, and on the hillsides around, white men and Chinamen were hunting all day among the debris which covers the ground for the remains of the victims. Bits of flesh were gathered in gunnysacks and taken to the boarding house where the few remains that can be found are being saved for burial.

Probable Cause of the Explosion.

Where the glycerine house stood is now a heap of rubbish surrounding a great hole blown into the earth by the force of the explosion. How the explosion occurred is a mystery, but it is believed that a Chinaman dropped a can of nitro-glycerine. Seventy-five Chinamen and one hundred white men were employed. The loss is estimated at $250,000. The work of rebuilding will commence to-day.

Fragments of Bodies Miles Away.

Huge trees were thrown half a mile into the bay. Nitro-glycerine tanks weighing a ton a piece are 500 yards distant from the scene. Toes, hands and other parts of bodies were picked up miles away.

BELIEVE THEM INNOCENT.

Dexter Citizens Petition for the Pardon of Stain and Cromwell.

Augusta, Me., May 22.—At the meeting of the governor and council yesterday something of a sensation was created by Hon. Josiah Crosby of Dexter, who presented the petition of sixty-six prominent Dexter citizens for a pardon for David L. Stain and Oliver Cromwell, now serving life sentences for the murder of cashier John Wilson Barron. The petition says in part: "At first and for several months we had no doubt of the murder of Mr. Barron, but subsequent developments and further reflection have satisfied us that there was no murder in the case and consequently Stain and Cromwell are innocent." It was finally decided that a hearing should be given in July at a date to be fixed at the meeting of council in July.

POLICE SERGEANT MURDERED.

Shot Down in a Station House by an ex-Officer.

Manchester, N. H., May 22.—Sergeant Henry McAllister was brutally and deliberately murdered in the police station last night by ex-Patrolman Fred A. Stockwell. Stockwell resigned from the force a week ago, and came into the station to get some property belonging to him about 11 o'clock. While engaged in packing his goods Sergeant McAllister came in, and Stockwell, without saying a word, fired five shots at McAllister, three taking effect. One of the bullets reached the heart, and McAllister died almost immediately. Stockwell surrendered and was locked up. Stockwell, it is understood, had made threats against the sergeant and other members of the department.

NAPOLEON,

ONCE ASKED FOR AN OPINION,

Gives a Graphic Description of His Ideal Woman. Mothers Please Note.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

In response to a question asked by a lady, the great Napoleon replied, —

"My ideal woman is not the beautiful-featured society belle, whose physician tries in vain to keep her in repair, nor the fragile butterfly of fashion, who gilds the tortures of disease with a forced smile.

"No! my ideal is a woman who has accepted her being as a sacred trust, and who obeys the laws of nature for the preservation of her body and soul.

"Do you know, my knee involuntarily bends in homage when I meet the matron who reaches middle age in complete preservation.

"That woman is rendered beautiful by perfect health, and the stalwart children by her side are her reward. That's my ideal woman."

To grow to ideal womanhood the girlhood should be carefully guarded.

Mothers owe a duty to their daughters that in too many cases is neglected.

Nature has provided a time for purification; and if the channels are obstructed the entire system is poisoned, and misery comes.

At a mothers' meeting the wife of a noted New York divine said to her listeners: "Watch carefully your daughters' physical development.

"Mothers should see that Nature is assisted, if necessary, to perform its office, and keep their daughters well informed as to matters concerning themselves."

Irregularities, from whatever cause, are sure indications of organic trouble. With irregularities come disturbance of the stomach and kidneys.

Violent headaches often attack the victim; pains shoot everywhere. Extreme irritability follows quickly, and then utter despondency overwhelms the already over-burdened life. Unless the obstruction is removed at once, your daughter's whole future will be darkened.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will accomplish the work speedily. It is the most effective remedy for irregular or suspended action known.

INCOME TAX REFUNDS

How the Money Paid in Can Be Recovered.

All You Have To Do Is To Make a Demand on the Deputy Collector and the Matter Will Soon Be Attended To—Entire Receipts of the Country Only About $80,000.

New York, May 22. — The internal revenue collectors in the districts situated in New York anticipate little or no trouble in the matter of returning to its rightful owners the money paid into their office as income tax. But a small amount of money has been paid into the treasury from the whole country. Up to May 1 the figures were: From corporations, $16,642.50; from individuals, $56,521.54. Since that date about $7,000 more has been paid in. Since the decision of the supreme court, declaring the income tax law unconstitutional, there has been considerable interest in the question as to just when and how the money will be returned. The question has arisen as to whether or not an act of congress will be required to effect the rebate.

No Trouble About the Refund.

Speaking on this point this morning Collector Sullivan, of the Second district—one of the most important in the country, as it has within its boundaries the majority of the great corporations whose offices are in this city—said: "I see that this question has been raised, but it seems to me that there will be no trouble about the return of the money. Section 3,220 of the revised statutes of the United States appears to amply cover the case. It provides for the return of taxes unjustly levied and paid into the treasury. The person paying the tax has simply to file a demand for his money at the office of the collector of his district.

Rebate an Every Day Occurrence.

"The collector can quickly find if the claim is properly made, and send the claim, with his indorsement, to the commissioner of internal revenue. The commissioners are empowered by the statute to send the taxpayer a warrant for the money if they find that the tax has been paid. Every day in our office this rebate business is carried on. Money paid is being refunded. If a man wants to make a still to ship out of this country he has to pay on it an internal revenue tax. Then when he exports his still he goes to the collector, demands back the amount paid in, and in a few days gets his warrant from the treasury.

To Be Adjusted at Washington.

"The total amount of income tax paid in our office will not exceed $10,000. This was paid largely by persons who were going away for several months. We have had no demands for its return yet. The treasury department notified me to forward all the returns of the district to Washington. They will look them over and make the necessary arrangements there about what to do with the returns and money. I think they will expedite the return of the tax as much as possible.

Want Returns Given Back.

"There have been some persons calling who asked that the returns on their income tax be given back. We have not been able to do this, as they are in the possession of the treasury department. The department will decide what to do with the declarations. They may be totally destroyed, placed among the archives or returned.

Talking About the Old War Tax.

"A question has arisen since the decision declaring the income tax unconstitutional as to whether there is not ground for contests for returns of income tax paid during the late war. There are plenty of lawyers who would willingly bring in such claims and fight them. The refunding of the money would involve the government in an endless amount of litigation. But to my mind all possibility of such litigation has been cut off by section 3,227 of the revised statutes, which provides that two years after the paying of a tax alleged to have been unjustly collected, is the limit of time in which the claim for a rebate can be filed. The statute seems most explicit and ought to completely cover the case."

GEN. COGGSWELL DEAD

The End Came in Washington This Morning.

Unconscious for Several Hours, He Passed Away Peacefully—His Career as a Soldier and in Congress. Seconded the Nomination of Gen. Harrison at Minneapolis.

AMERICAN LINE CONTRACTS.

Denial of Reports Concerning the Postmaster-General's Intentions.

Washington, May 22.—It is learned on competent authority that the reports to the effect that the postmaster-general has determined to break the contract made by Postmaster-General Wanamaker with the American Line Steamship company, on the ground that Mr. Wanamaker exceeded his powers in making the agreement read per statute mile instead of per marine mile, is entirely without foundation. The matter has not been discussed.

DISGUSTED KICKAPOO RUSTLERS

All Good Land in the Reservation Is Reserved for Schools.

Guthrie, Okla., May 22.—Kickapoo settlers who started in a rush after hearing of the proclamation are disgusted to find that nearly all the good land in the reservation is reserved for school lands. Shawnee, on the eastern side of the reservation, will be the starting point of the greatest crowd; and the town is already booming. All the boomers are on hand with schemes to bleed the "tenderfoot," and the Indians are moving off their allotments and taking claims to hold them for certain parties in the ring. The opening will be of little value to bona fide settlers.

BRIGGS MEN GET BACK

Returned to the Presbyterian Home Board.

Liberals, Led by Dr. John Hall, Sweep the Conservatives from Their Moorings—The Struggle To Be Resumed To-day in Respect to the Foreign Board.

Pittsburg, May 22.—The general assembly was swept from its conservative moorings yesterday by the hand of the great Fifth avenue pastor, John Hall. The previous day on a vital issue upon which there had been heated and bitter debate, the liberals were defeated by a vote of four to one. Yesterday upon a question involving the self-same principles of assembly control of the church institutions, the liberals in the twinkling of an eye changed their defeat to an overwhelming victory.

Home and Foreign Mission Board.

The right to nominate and elect the members of the Home and Foreign Mission boards was a right secured by the assembly after a long and heated controversy which began in the Portland assembly three years ago. The work was finished at a great cost to the boards, new charters having been secured from legislatures to make that end possible.

Disruption Narrowly Averted.

In the foreign board the matter of consent to the charter changes almost caused disruption. But that misfortune was averted only by the diplomacy of the present moderator, Dr. Booth, and having secured this power to nominate and elect men to its board who should be in sympathy with its own acts and utterances, the assembly actually throws away the first opportunity for its exercise.

Briggs Men Get Back.

It was to reach these very men who have abused and belittled the general assembly for its condemnation of Dr. Briggs, and for its inerrancy deliverance, that the mission boards were ordered to change the charters. Yet yesterday these men were put back into the board by the unanimous vote of the general assembly.

Success of Dr. Hall's Efforts.

Dr. John Hall accomplished this amazing result. By courtesy of the vice-moderator he took the floor as president of the Home Mission board to speak upon the year's work of the board. He used this opportunity to defend and protect his liberal associates upon the board. He argued as a commissioner of the assembly might have argued upon the merits of a question upon which there was division of sentiment. He made it a personal matter that these men whose loyalty and Presbyterianism had been attacked should receive endorsement, urging the assembly for his sake to return them to service in the board, and when the vote was taken the commissioners voted practically as one man to return them.

Not Complete Surrender Yet.

Notwithstanding the collapse of their plans to retire the Briggs men from the Home board, the New York delegation declare that they will attempt the same thing with respect to the Foreign board. Elder Sterry will make the same motion if the committee nominates John Balcom Shaw and Ezra Kingsley for re-election.

BRIGADE TOO EXPENSIVE.

Jersey's Military Board Decides on Regimental Encampments.

Trenton, N. J., May 22.—The state military board has decided in favor of regimental, instead of brigade, encampments for the future. The regiments of the first brigade will, therefore, go into camp separately this year, the fourth regiment on July 13, the first regiment on July 20 and the second regiment on July 27. It is calculated that by the regimental system the encampment will come $20,000 a year cheaper.

Pennsylvania Against Poolselling.

Harrisburg, Pa., May 22.—Pennsylvania is in line on the anti-betting question. The bill prohibiting bookmaking, poolselling and betting of any kind, which has already gone through the senate, was passed by the house yesterday by an overwhelming majority—yeas 156, nays 19. The bill now goes to the governor and will undoubtedly be signed.

Governor-General of Formosa.

THE DAILY PRESS.

A. L. FORCE. Publisher and Proprietor.
WALTER IRVING CLARKE. Managing Editor.

TOWN AND HOME FAVORITE.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., MAY 22, 1895.

The Daily Press gladly gives space in its columns to the following communication and welcomes the effort to provide a pleasant and respectable place for working girls to go after their day's work:

"The generous people of Plainfield are asked to help in the organization of a Girls Club by contributing articles of furniture that will make two rooms pleasant and homelike. This club, which will be opened Tuesday evening at 309 West Second street, is to be used during the Summer as a reading and recreation room. The evenings will be spent in a social way, and will be varied by music, pleasant talks, and other entertainments or amusements. In the Fall various classes will be started, as dressmaking cooking, etc.

It will readily be seen that they need tables, easy-chairs, book shelves and lamps, also plenty of magazines and books, while money will not come amiss at any time. Our greatest need at present is a piano, and for that we wish to start a fund. We feel that this club will be helpful and pleasant to those who join, but as it is an experiment we wish to give others the privilege of helping, so that it can be made a great success.

There are dogs and dogs. Some dogs would save a man's life; other dogs would kill him if they got a chance. The Press is not informed that any man's life in Plainfield was ever saved by a dog; neither has it been recorded that any human being was ever saved from the grim-reaper by a Towser. Therefore it must be concluded that these two breeds of canines are foreign to this locality. But the snooping dog seems to be in evidence. Whether it is best to shoot the snooping cur or to build fences, and keep him from snooping—that is about your place at least—is a question. "Good Morals" says that if the cur nuisance is not abated he will have to swear. Then "Aliquis" advises him to build fences for protection to his property and to his morals. Now The Press is in receipt of another communication on the subject from "Fencer", which is given below. The only regret The Press has with reference to the discussion is the point made that the fence is said to be advantageous in keeping dogs away, and, also, in keeping the women from gossiping, via: the back yard. But the women are able to look out for themselves. "Fencer" says:

"I read 'Aliquis' effusion on the subject of dogs and fences with mild indignation that rose to a fever heat, when, a little later, two dogs broke through my fence and assailed two peaceable old hens who were staked out with their broods, and, after killing one of the chicks and tearing a majority of the feathers out of one of the old hens, were only put to flight through the medium of a soda water bottle, which, by a well-directed aim, struck one of the brutes amidships. Talk about fences! What fence avails keep out these lawless brutes when they desire to get in? Did any one ever succeed in keeping a pair of rabbits, except under lock and key, without some cur, blue-blooded or otherwise, destroying them sooner or later? How many poultry yards have been broken into and devastated by the same factor? The point made by 'Aliquis' is apparently this: 'It is my business to keep as many worthless dogs running loose as I please, and it is your business to protect yourself if you can'! The fact is, there is no protection in any fence, except an expensive one. A majority of our citizens rent their homes, usually with a small plot of ground, which it is a pleasure to cultivate, even on a tiny scale. Now should each tenant erect a fence to keep out his neighbors dogs? According to 'Aliquis' it would seem so, but it appears to me that the other side has the better argument. Let 'Aliquis' keep his dogs if he likes, but let him keep them at home, or send them out walking with a nurse the same as he would his children. Genuine dog-fanciers keep from ten to twenty dogs of all ages, and their neighbors never have cause for complaint. If 'Aliquis' should kill his dogs and cultivate a garden, how soon he would be on the other side of the fence. I had nearly forgotten 'Aliquis' reason, or one of them, as to why people do not have fences: He says it is to afford facilities to the women for slipping into each others kitchens to gossip. Du tel! I did have an idea that back yards and kithens were principally given over to the servants. Certainly the absence of a fence about premises should not be a guarantee that its female occupants are gossips. No, 'Aliquis,' the truth is you are one of those who want the earth with a fence around it. Dogs have their rights, but they are too often allowed more than their share, rather than less."

The Bayonne Budget:—"The Daily Press, an afternoon paper, has been supported by the Plainfield people for eight years. During that period the Press like the progressive people that read it, has also prospered. The other day it came out in an entirely new dress, on its birthday. It is a handsome paper and carefully edited. Plainfield, with a population of 12,000, has two daily papers. Bayonne, with 25,000 people has no daily. If the people of Bayonne took as much interest in their city as the Plainfield people there would be half a dozen daily papers in it.

MARVELOUS ARMOR.

UNPRECEDENTED RESULTS OF A TEST AT INDIAN HEAD.

An 18-inch Harveyized Carnegie Steel Plate Proves Almost Invulnerable to the Biggest Guns in the Navy. Three Projectiles Are Broken to Pieces.

There was a battle royal at the Indian Head proving ground between the biggest guns of the navy and an 18-inch Harveyized steel plate, made by the Carnegie works, with wholly unprecedented results. After firing twice at the great piece of steel with a 12-inch rifle without making any practical impression on it, the great "peacemaker," as the 13-inch gun is called, discharged its half-ton projectile point blank at the armor, and though driven bodily back into the sand bank supporting it, the plate survived.

Great interest has been manifested in the test, as it was practically a competition of the hitherto suspected Carnegie product and the uniformly successful Bethlehem manufacture. The Bethlehem Company furnished the 18-inch plate that passed the ordeal, and the Carnegie armor was tested with exactly the same grade of shells, made in France for testing purposes, and all the conditions were made uniform. The plate was finished to size and cost about $20,000. It weighed 79,300 pounds, was 16 feet 9 1-2 inches long, and 7 feet 5 13-16 inches wide, and was of tapering thickness, being 18 inches thick at the top and extending 4 feet down, where the taper to 8 inches thickness at the bottom began. It represented the second lot of 306 tons or ten plates, for the side armor of the battle ship Oregon, nearly completed at San Francisco. The plate was attached to a backing of 36 inches of solid oak by 26 three-inch bolts, the entire structure being firmly anchored in a hillside about 100 yards from the muzzles of the gun battery.

The gun was mopped out, and behind projectile 443.4 pounds of powder was placed, giving a muzzle velocity of 1,926 feet per second and the enormous striking energy of 21,855 foot tons. The plate had passed the cracking ordeal, and this shot was intended solely to try its resistance to being penetrated. The penetration was ten inches, as well as could be estimated. The head of the projectile, as far as the explosive chamber, was completely smashed on the plate, looking as if a lot of black mud had been splashed upon the armor. The two metals had been melted and welded together by the terrific temperature due to the sudden stoppage of the shot, the frightful energy of nearly 22,000 foot tons being suddenly converted into heat. The metal of the plate for a depth of three inches and for six inches around the point where the projectile struck had been fused and bubbled up like a volcanic crater. A crack three-fourths of an inch wide was developed in the surface of the plate, extending from the top to the bottom.

The plate was accepted by the Government, and then, with the view of determining what its ultimate test might be under the most extreme conditions, it was decided by the chief of ordnance to attack it with the greatest of naval weapons, the big 13-inch gun such as in the turrets of the battleships. A 13-inch Carpenter shell, weighing 1,100 pounds, driven by 480 pounds of powder specially adapted to this gun, was discharged with a velocity of 1,810 feet per second in this test. It had the unprecedented striking energy of 25,000 foot tons, and its impact was only 32 inches to the left of the first shot. The result was remarkable. It was expected that this test would demolish the plate. A crack of 3 inches wide extended some distance from the top, and the shell, after penetrating 10 inches, was, as one of the officers declared, "almost pulverized." The solid oak backing, however, demonstrated the terrific energy of the projectile, for it was shut up like an accordion and split into kindling wood. The effect of such gun fire on a battleship in action, in the opinion of the experts present, would be incalculable. Upon careful examination the ability of the plate to keep out the heaviest projectile was fully proved, by the fact that but one of the fastening bolts was damaged, and the other twenty-five would have held the plate in position on shipboard.

This plate is said to indicate that the fight between gun and armor, which has recently been rather one sided in the gun's favor, is now about a tie, and that with the reforging process the armor may soon be invulnerable to any existing weapon.

From a Realistic Novel.

"Heloise," said the fierce old man; "Heloise!" He gazed upon her as she stood before him, palpitating with the calm joy of a maiden who has successfully sat up all night with a clerk in the cotton goods department and has come down to breakfast at 11 o'clock. "Heloise, when that young man"—

"Stop, papa!" and she strode forward. "You may tear me limb from limb, incarcerate me in prison, banish me from home, but such love as mine and Walter's"—

"Shut up!" roared the parental parent. "What I was about to say is this—when that young man comes next Sunday night and you go nosing around at 3 o'clock in the morning to find pie for him do not leave the dining room door open so that the cat can get in and break the milk pitcher."

With a low, said wail she passed out of the door and sank $10.50 that afternoon for a new Easter bonnet.

A Witty Lawyer.

A lawyer, residing in the North of England, and noted for his laconic style of expression, sent the following terse and witty note to a refractory client who would not succumb to his reiterated demands for the payment of his bill:

"Sir, if you pay the inclosed you will oblige me. If you do not, I shall oblige you."—Tit-Bits.

A piano solo was rendered by Miss Carrie Dewey. A Dutch interior representing home life was then given, after which Miss Cathrine DeBours told about the national flower.

After a soprano solo by Mrs. Titsworth, Miss Bessie Titsworth read a paper on the arts of Holland. The committee in charge of the evening consisted of Mrs. J. G. Miller, Miss Ida Randolph, and Miss Bessie Titsworth.

Ice cream and cake were served.

Giving Perfect Satisfaction.

The performances which the Howard Stock Company are presenting at Music Hall this week are giving splendid satisfaction. The cast is a strong one throughout, and the pieces are staged in a superb manner. Though they are playing at popular prices it is not a cheap show in the sense of their acting abilities, for there have been but few companies here during the past season that please Music Hall patrons any better. Ingomar, the Barbarian, will be presented tonight. This production has been acknowledged one of the greatest presentations ever given by a popular price company. Mr. Sullivan will appear in the the title role and Miss Renard as Parthenia. The sale of seats is large for tonight.

Rev. W. C O'Donnell of Monroe Avenue Chapel delivered a short address before the State Epworth League Convention in Elizabeth this afternoon.

Ascension Day will be appropriately observed in All Saints Church at Scotch Plains tomorrow by services at 11 in the morning. Rev. Edward H. True at this service will reply to the recent strictures on the doctrines of the ascension of Christ which appeared in the New York Tribune last week.

THE EYE OF BEATRICE.

BY EDWARD J. WHEELOCK.

CHAPTER II.

(Copyright, 1895, by Bacheller, Johnson & Bacheller.)

The sunken, cat-like eyes of Alfonse, the suavity of his movements, and the closeness with which he stuck to the detective's elbow while the latter was making his second and more complete examination of the maroon-papered room, had naturally drawn Stacey's attention to him.

"You waited upon the parties in this room at the time when these men were killed, I believe," said the detective suddenly, turning upon him after a long look out of one of the windows.

"Yes, sir," replied the waiter. He had been gazing fixedly at the calm face of Beatrice Cenci above the mantel, but when Stacey turned upon him he dropped his eyes humbly to the floor.

"You are always assigned to wait upon this room, I understand?"

"Yes, sir."

"Show me how the table and chairs were arranged upon the two nights when these men were killed."

Alfonse started ever so slightly, and his green eyes again sought the face of Beatrice, as though drawn by an irresistible fascination.

"I—I don't think I remember, sir."

"Try. The table is a square one, and there were four in the party on each occasion, therefore one must have sat upon each side of the table.

HE MADE AN IMPORTANT DISCOVERY.

Now, try to remember where Mr. Laroue and Mr. Narbon sat when they were killed."

"I—I think it was there, sir," indicating the side nearest the windows.

"Well, you're mistaken; it was here," said the detective, moving in front of the oaken mantel. "At least, so the other gentlemen who were present testified at the inquest."

"Perhaps it was, sir; my memory is not good."

"Apparently not. Now, come here. I want you to sit there for a moment," and Stacey pointed to the fatal chair with its back to the mantel.

"I—certainly, sir, if you wish," said Alfonse, with some hesitation. He cast a furtive glance once more up into the impassive face of the Roman woman, and took the chair.

Stacey took from his pocket two diagrams procured from the coroner's physician, showing the location of the wound and the direction taken by the bullet in each of the victims. With these as a guide he located upon Alfonse's head the spot marked by the wounds, and placed a finger upon it.

As he did so he felt that the man trembled slightly, but he appeared not to notice it.

He next gauged the track of the bullets by means of his walking stick, which he held against Alfonse's head, regulating its angle by means of the diagrams. This done Stacey felt certain that he had secured the line along which the fatal square bullets had traveled.

And, therefore, he was greatly surprised when, upon prolonging the line thus marked in the air by his walking stick, he found that the other end terminated in the face of the Beatrice Cenci.

Having very little of the artistic in his soul, the detective had heretofore paid but slight attention to the picture, excepting as one of the component parts of the room as a whole, possessing about the same relative importance in his eyes as the windows and the furniture. It now suddenly leaped into prominence as the one single feature of the apartment worthy of his attention. He dismissed Alfonse, and turned to the picture.

It hung about eight feet from the floor level and three feet above the oaken mantel. The canvas appeared to be about 24x30 inches, and was surrounded by a heavy gilt frame. Having observed this much from the vantage ground of the carpet Stacey rang the electric bell and demanded a step-ladder. When this was brought and he was again alone he proceeded to make a closer inspection of the picture. He was no sooner at the top of the ladder and his face upon a level with the portrait than he made an important discovery.

There was no pupil in the left eye of Beatrice Cenci.

A little round hole had been cut through the canvas—a hole hardly large enough to admit the end of a lead pencil, otherwise it would have been noticeable from the floor of the room, but quite large enough to permit the passage of a weapon of sufficient calibre to carry the little square bullets which had been found imbedded in the victim's brains.

Stacey felt that species of elation which comes to the mathematician who sees ahead of him the end of a difficult problem in calculus.

He carefully lifted the heavy picture from its fastenings. In the wall where it had hung was an orifice about the size of a silver dime, cut very smoothly and neatly through the maroon-colored paper and the plaster. And the wall sounded hollow when Stacey tapped it with his cane. Carefully replacing the picture, he rang again, had the step-ladder removed, then, calling the steward, demanded to be shown into the apartment adjoining the maroon-papered room.

This proved to be a meagrely furnished place, fitted with a plain bedstead, a bureau and a washstand, and intended for the use of the day servants who might be called upon to stay at the clubhouse all night. Left alone, Stacey locked the door upon the inside.

In the wall at the end of the apartment next to the maroon-papered room was a narrow closet reaching nearly to the ceiling, which, as the detective expected, was fastened. Rather than further divulge what he was doing by making another call upon the servants he cleverly forced the lock. In the top of the closet was a board shelf. By sounding with his cane Stacey quickly located a hollow in the wall above one end of this shelf, and by the light of a wax vesta he found that a piece of thin board, painted white, had been rather roughly fitted into an aperture about six inches square cut through the plaster. Upon removing this there was revealed an opening of the same size cut nearly through the entire thickness of lath and plaster, upon the other side of which shone a little round point of light from the eye of Beatrice.

But what interested the detective most was a peculiar piece of compact mechanism which was mounted upon a species of rough foundation placed in the opening. Taking this out he examined it closely.

It was a sort of miniature cannon with a barrel of burnished steel about seven inches long. The bore (if such it could be called) was square—probably a quarter of an inch square. Upon the rear end there was a curious clock-work arrangement, with a piston fitting into the tube, and a figured scale which seemed to show that the machine could be set to be sprung at a certain hour at the will of the operator. Every part of the apparatus was of forged steel, finished with the greatest care and minuteness. There were no signs of smoke or powder stains upon the machine, which drove Stacey to the conclusion that it was nothing more nor less than a powerful air gun. He also concluded that it was of foreign workmanship, such nicety and care in the handling of steel not being within the province of the average American workman.

He carefully wrapped the deadly machine in his handkerchief, deposited it in his coat pocket, replaced the white board over the opening in the wall, forced the lock upon the closet door back into position, let himself out of the apartment and quietly left the clubhouse.

The manner in which Roger Laroue and Hugues Narbon had been killed was now clear enough to him. But there remained the still more difficult problem as to the human intelligence that had acted behind this powerful little bundle of steel which now reposed so quietly in his coat pocket.

Who had loaded the air gun, set it to discharge its fatal square bullet at a certain time, and trained its muzzle through the eye of Beatrice with such precision as to strike down the man who happened to be sitting with his back to the oaken mantel?

Why had Laroue and Narbon been picked out as its victims?

What was the motive back of it all?

The day after these discoveries Stacey was walking down Broadway above Union Square with a fellow member of the force when, in the vicinity of 18th street, he suddenly drew his companion in to the doorway of a cigar store.

"Do you see that man going up the street on the other side? Wears a soft hat and has a half-slinking walk?"

The other nodded affirmatively.

"Do me a favor and find out where he goes. I cannot do it because he knows me."

Without a word the other detective started to follow the retreating figure, which was none other than that of Alfonse, the club waiter. Stacey continued his walk downtown.

Several hours later he received a report from his companion. Alfonse had proceeded up to Madison square, turned up Fifth avenue, and had finally disappeared in one of the brown stone mansions of the latter thoroughfare, entering by the rear way after making a short detour through several small streets. The mansion in question was found to be the one occupied by the Countess Claire Brodsky.

This was a startling bit of information to Stacey. To the ordinary man, perhaps, it would be nothing out of the ordinary for a club servant to be seen visiting a Fifth avenue residence by the rear way. He was probably calling upon the domestics.

But to Stacey it had an entirely different aspect. It enabled him to indulge in what he admitted to be some of the wildest guessing of his entire official career, but which guessing was, nevertheless, based upon what little of fact he had been able to establish regarding the double crime at "The Myrtle."

The result of his guessing was that he immediately dispatched an officer in citizen's clothes to the clubhouse with a warrant for the arrest of Alfonse upon sight. The officer shortly returned with the information that Alfonse had resigned his employ at "The Myrtle" the day before, and that his residence and present whereabouts were unknown.

Then Stacey took the warrant into his own hands, and, after swearing out another one to go with it, was hastily driven in a cab to the Countess Brodsky's residence. There he was met with the information that the Countess had that morning quietly left the country on the Etruria, intending to return to Russia, and that her household effects were at that moment being packed to be sent after her. An inspection of the mansion by the detective confirmed the statement that the bird had flown.

But what of Alfonse? He had certainly not left upon the Etruria, because it was less than five hours since he had been going into the Fifth avenue house. But a diligent search of the city by the metropolitan police, and a close watch kept upon departing steamers for weeks after failed to locate him, and he very likely slipped away in some sort of disguise and joined the Countess upon the other side of the Atlantic.

And so Stacey was baffled, after all, and the two warrants which he had sworn out became so much waste paper.

But that his guesses in the matter were not so wild as one might infer from the facts at his disposition is proven by the following statement from the head of the Parisian police, which was transmitted to Inspector Byrnes by cable two days after the flight of the Countess:

"Laroue and Narbon were members of a notorious revolutionary society of Montmartre known as 'Les Couteaux Rouges.' Both were fugitives from Russia, where they were implicated in the Nihilistic outbreak in Moscow on the night of December 4, 1879, which resulted in the murder of Count Nicolai Brodsky."

GENERAL GRANT.

How Near His Personal Memoirs Came to be Lost.

A Valuable History Written by a Dying Man.—Proper Nourishment Enabled the Author to Live Until the Completion of His Book.

The fortitude shown by General Grant in writing the second volume of his personal memoirs while he was literally on his deathbed, excels even the remarkable courage exhibited by this famous soldier in his many achievements on the field of battle.

Col. Fred Grant, speaking of his father's last illness, says:—

"During the last four months of his sickness, the principal food of my father, Gen. Grant, was Bovinine and milk; and it was the use of this incomparable food alone that enabled him to finish the second volume of his personal memoirs."

Dr. T. H. Douglas, Gen. Grant's physician and friend, cordially indorsed the above statement.

What Bovinine did for Gen. Grant it has done, and is now doing, for thousands every day. It is the most wonderful concentration into a small bulk of all the life-giving, muscle, flesh, and blood-making elements of lean, raw meat ever produced.

It is in no way a medicine, simply a food invigorant, that by its strengthening qualities gives the worn-out or disordered vital centres of the body an impetus that again starts them performing their natural functions.

It is indorsed by eminent physicians everywhere, and blessed by thousands whose lives it has actually saved.

To neglect to use this wonderful food in all cases of debility, wasting diseases, overwork, stomach and nerve diseases, or for weak infants, chronic invalids, loss of vitality in old age, is to throw away one of the greatest chances of saving life.

SKETCHES OF LINCOLN.

The Strange Course of His Second Courtship.

WEAKENING AT THE LAST MOMENT.

He Meets Miss Mary Todd and Again Falls In Love—Miss Todd's Wit, Beauty and Brilliancy—Breaking an Engagement—A Renewal.

[From "The Life of Lincoln" by William H. Herndon and Jesse W. Weik. Copyright, 1888, by Jesse W. Weik. Copyright, 1892, by D. Appleton & Co.]

XII.

The year 1840 finds Mr. Lincoln entering his thirty-second year and still unmarried. "I have come to the conclusion," he suggests in a facetious letter two years before, "never again to think of marrying." But meanwhile he had seen more of the world. The state capital had been removed to Springfield, and he soon observed the power and influence one can exert with high family and social surroundings to draw upon. The sober truth is that Lincoln was inordinately ambitious. He had already succeeded in obtaining no inconsiderable political recognition and numbered among his party friends men of wealth and reputation, but he himself was poor, besides lacking the graces and ease of bearing obtained through mingling in polite society. In fact, to use the expressive language of Mary Owens, he was "deficient in those little links which make up the chain of woman's happiness." Conscious therefore of his humble rank in the social scale, how natural that he should seek by marriage in an influential family to establish strong connections and at the same time foster his political fortunes! This may seem an audacious thing to insinuate, but on no other basis can we reconcile the strange course of his courtship and the tempestuous chapters in his married life. It is a curious history, and the facts, long chained down, are gradually coming to the surface. When all is at last known, the world, I believe, will divide its censure between Lincoln and his wife.

MISS MARY TODD.

Mary Todd, who afterward became the wife of Mr. Lincoln, was born in Lexington, Ky., Dec. 13, 1818. "My mother," related Mrs Lincoln to me in 1865, "died when I was still young. I was educated by Mme. Mantelli, a lady who lived opposite Mr. Clay's, and who was an accomplished French scholar Our conversation at school was carried on entirely in French—in fact, we were allowed to speak nothing else. I finished my education at Mrs. Ward's academy, an institution to which many people from the north sent their daughters. In 1837 I visited Springfield, Ills., remaining three months. I returned to Kentucky, remaining till 1839, when I again set out for Illinois, which state finally became my home."

To a young lady in whose veins coursed the blood that had come down from a long and distinguished ancestral line, who could even go back in the genealogical chart to the sixth century, Lincoln, the child of Nancy Hanks, whose descent was dimmed by the shadow of tradition, was finally united in marriage.

Sketch of Miss Todd.

When Mary Todd came to her sister's house in Springfield in 1839, she was in her twenty-first year. She was a young woman of strong, passionate nature and quick temper and had "left her home in Kentucky to avoid living under the same roof with a stepmother." She came to live with her oldest sister, Elizabeth, who was the wife of Lincoln's colleague in the legislature, Ninian W. Edwards. She had two other sisters, Frances, married to Dr William Wallace, and Anne, who after ward became the wife of C. M. Smith, a prominent and wealthy merchant. They all resided in Springfield. She was of the average height, weighing when I first saw her about 130 pounds. She was rather compactly built, had a well rounded face, rich dark brown hair and bluish gray eyes. In her bearing she was proud, but handsome and vivacious. Her education had been in no wise defective. She was a good conversationist, using with equal fluency the French and English languages. When she used a pen, its point was sure to be sharp, and she wrote with wit and ability. She not only had a quick intellect, but an intuitive judgment of men and their motives. Ordinarily she was affable and even charming in her manners, but when offended or antagonized her agreeable qualities instantly disappeared beneath a wave of stinging satire or sarcastic bitterness, and her entire better nature was submerged. In her figure and physical proportions, in education, bearing, temperament, history—in everything she was the exact reverse of Lincoln.

On her return to Springfield she immediately entered society and soon became one of the belles, leading the young men of the town a merry dance. She was a very shrewd observer, and discreetly and without apparent effort kept back all the unattractive elements in her unfortunate organization. Her trenchant wit, affability and candor pleased the young men not less than her culture and varied accomplishments impressed the older ones with whom she came in contact. The first time I met her was at a dance at the residence of Colonel Robert Allen. I engaged her for a waltz, and as we glided through it I fancied I never before had danced with a young lady who moved with such grace and ease. A few moments later, as we were promenading through the hall, I thought to compliment her graceful dancing by telling her that while I was conscious of my own awkward movements she seemed to glide through the waltz with the ease of a serpent. The strange comparison was as unfortunate as it was hideous. I saw it in an instant, but too late to recall it. She halted for a moment, drew back, and her eyes flashed as she retorted, "Mr. Herndon, comparison to a serpent is rather severe irony, especially to a newcomer."

Lincoln Again In Love.

Through the influence of Joshua F. Speed, who was a warm friend of the Edwardses, Lincoln was led to call on Miss Todd. He was charmed with her wit and beauty no less than by her excellent social qualities and profound knowledge of the strong and weak points in individual character. One visit succeeded another. It was the old story. Lincoln had again fallen in love. "I have often happened in the room where they were sitting," relates Mrs. Edwards, describing this courtship, "and Mary invariably led the conversation. Mr. Lincoln would sit at her side and listen. He scarcely said a word, but gazed on her as if irresistibly drawn toward her by some superior and unseen power. He could not maintain himself in a continued conversation with a lady reared as Mary was. He was not educated and equipped mentally to make himself either interesting or attractive to the ladies. Mary was quick, gay and in the social world somewhat brilliant. She loved show and power and was the most ambitious woman I ever knew. She used to contend when a girl, to her friends in Kentucky, that she was destined to marry a president. I have heard her say that myself, and after mingling in society in Springfield she repeated the seemingly absurd and idle boast. Although Mr. Lincoln seemed to be attached to Mary and fascinated by her wit and sagacity, yet I soon began to doubt whether they could always be so congenial. In a short time I told Mary my impression that they were not suited, or, as some persons who believe matches are made in heaven would say, not intended for each other."

But Mrs. Edwards' advice was seed sown on rocky soil. The courtship ran on smoothly to the point of engagement, when a new and disturbing element loomed up ahead in their paths. It was no less than the dashing and handsome Stephen A. Douglas, who now appeared on the scene in the guise of a rival. As a society man Douglas was infinitely more accomplished, more attractive and influential than Lincoln, and that he should supplant the latter in the affections of the proud and aristocratic Miss Todd is not to be marveled at. He was unremitting in his attentions to the lady, promenaded the streets arm in arm with her, frequently passing Lincoln, and in every way made plain his intention to become the latter's rival. There are those who believe this warm reciprocation of young Douglas' affection was a mere flirtation on Mary Todd's part, intended to spur Lincoln up, to make him more demonstrative and manifest his love more positively and with greater fervor. But a lady relative who lived with Lincoln and his wife for two years after their marriage is authority for the statement coming from Mrs. Lincoln herself that "she loved Douglas, and but for her promise to marry Lincoln would have accepted him." The unfortunate attitude she felt bound to maintain between these two young men ended in a spell of sickness. Douglas, still hopeful, was warm in the race, but the lady's physician—her brother-in-law—Dr. William Wallace, to whom she confided the real cause of her illness, saw Douglas and induced him to end his pursuit, which he did with great reluctance.

Broken Chains Mended.

If Miss Todd intended by her flirtation with Douglas to test Lincoln's devotion, she committed a grievous error. If she believed, because he was ordinarily so undemonstrative that he was without will power and incapable of being aroused, she certainly did not comprehend the man. Lincoln began now to feel the sting.

Miss Todd's spur had certainly operated and with awakening effect. One evening Lincoln came into our store and called for his warm friend Speed. Together they walked back to the fireplace, where Lincoln, drawing from his pocket a letter, asked Speed to read it.

"The letter," relates Speed, "was addressed to Mary Todd, and in it he made a plain statement of his feelings, telling her that he had thought the matter over calmly and with great deliberation, and now felt that he did not love her sufficiently to warrant her in marrying him. This lettter he desired me to deliver. Upon my declining to do so he threatened to intrust it to some other person's hand. I reminded him that the moment he placed the letter in Miss Todd's hand she would have the advantage over him. 'Words are forgotten,' I said, 'misunderstood, unnoticed in a private conversation, but once put your words in writing, and they stand a living and eternal monument against you.' Thereupon I threw the unfortunate letter in the fire. 'Now,' I continued, 'if you have the courage of manhood, go see Mary yourself. Tell her, if you do not love her, the facts, and that you will not marry her. Be careful not to say too much, and then leave at your earliest opportunity.' Thus admonished, he buttoned his coat, and with a rather determined look started out to perform the serious duty for which I had just given him explicit directions."

That night Speed did not go up stairs to bed with us, but under pretense of wanting to read remained in the store below. He was waiting for Lincoln's return. Ten o'clock passed, and still the interview with Miss Todd had not ended. At length, shortly after 11, he came stalking in. Speed was satisfied, from the length of Lincoln's stay, that his directions had not been followed.

"Well, old fellow, did you do as I told you and as you promised?" were Speed's first words.

"Yes, I did," responded Lincoln thoughtfully, "and when I told Mary I did not love her she burst into tears, and almost springing from her chair and wringing her hands as if in agony said something about the deceiver being himself deceived." Then he stopped.

"What else did you say?" inquired Speed, drawing the facts from him.

"To tell you the truth, Speed, it was too much for me. I found the tears trickling down my own cheeks. I caught her in my arms and kissed her."

"And that's how you broke the engagement," sneered Speed. "You not only acted the fool, but your conduct was tantamount to a renewal of the engagement, and in decency you cannot back down now."

"Well," drawled Lincoln, "if I am in again, so be it. It's done, and I shall abide by it."

Convinced now that Miss Todd regarded the engagement ratified, instead of broken, as her tall suitor had at first intended, Lincoln continued his visits, and things moved on smoothly as before. Douglas had dropped out of the race, and everything pointed to an early marriage. It was probably at this time that Mr. and Mrs. Edwards began to doubt the wisdom of the marriage, and now and then to intimate the same to the lady, but they went no farther in their opposition and placed no obstacle in their paths.

THE DAILY PRESS

ESTABLISHED MAY 10, 1887. PLAINFIELD, N. J., THURSDAY, MAY 23, 1895. TWO CENTS A COPY—$5 A YEAR.

PLEASANT FAREWELL.

Reception Given to the Retiring President of the Y's.

A farewell is usually a sad event, but the farewell reception tendered to Miss Amey Green by her fellow-workers in the Young Women's Christian Temperance Union at the home of Miss Delphine Bowers of Franklin place and LaGrande avenue yestereay afternoon, was anything but sorrowful.

Miss Green has served very efficiently for the last four years as president of the Y's. From 4 to 6, Miss Green's many friends were hospitably received and enjoyed a very pleasant social time, during which an informal musical programme was rendered.

The guests were received by Miss Mamie Brown, Miss Lulu Lewis, Miss Delphine Bowers, Mrs. Frank Clawson, Miss Mary French and Miss Bessie Tithworth.

The dining room presented a charming appearance with its tasteful yellow decorations, and here the table was presided over by Mrs. William Stillman and Miss Louise Green, while Miss Lulu Patton and Miss Etta Blish served the dainty refreshments. The programme consisted of a piano solo by Miss Hattie Gardner, a violin solo by Miss Violet Truell, accompanied by Miss Bessie Titsworth, a vocal solo by Miss Delphine Bowers, a recitation by Miss Lulu Lewis with piano obligato by Miss Dewey, a piano solo by Miss Dewey, and a vocal solo by Miss Julia Ketcham. Each number was artistically rendered, and thoroughly enjoyed by all.

About seventy-five were present during the afternoon, and all expressed themselves as having had a most delightful time, and highly complimented the charming and accomplished hostess on providing such a pleasant and enjoyable entertainment.

BE OUT AND OUT.

That Is the Kind of a Christian Miss Costello Likes to See.

The members of the Plainfield branch of the Young Ladies Christian League and their friends who met yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. James Middledith, Park avenue and East Ninth street, had the pleasure of listening to an informal talk from Miss Costello of the New York branch. She spoke of the wise and foolish virgins, and urged her hearers to be sure that they were among the wise—among the out-and-out Christians, who are using this earthly life to do their Father's will, and who will be ready to joyfully greet the Bridegroom when she shall return.

The Young Ladies Christian League is a purely religious organization, having for its object the deepening of spiritual life among its members. Though Plainfield already has so many organizations, there is surely room for this new and helpful one.

Mrs. Gilbert's Luncheon.

A charming and enjoyable luncheon was given yesterday afternoon by Mrs. Alexander Gilbert at her home, Central avenue and Eighth street, in honor of Mrs. George Swain, Mrs. Stoutenburgh, Mrs. Gleason, and Miss Dodd of Newark, close friends and former schoolmates. Mrs. Van Nest Talmadge, Mrs. Ege, Mrs. Henry McGee, and Mrs. Charles Horne of this city, who are mutual friends, were invited, making the affair one of real pleasure to all.

The Flag Presentation.

Somerset Council, No. 104, J. O. U. A. M., will present a very handsome American flag to the North Plainfield Board of Education tomorrow morning. The presentation will be made by Rev. J. W. Richardson, after the chapel exercises at 9:15, and President S. St. J. McCutchen of the Board will receive it.

More Bridge Improvements.

The Somerset County Board of Freeholders, of which L. E. Barkalew and Andrew Lutkins are members for the North Plainfield borough and township, met at Bound Brook yesterday afternoon and agreed to widen the wooden bridge at Mountain avenue from its present width of 28 feet to 56 feet.

On to the Rugged Mountains.

The Jersey Central railroad will run a low rate excursion on Memorial Day to Mauch Chunk and Glen Onoko, where the rugged mountain scenery and balmy air will make a delightful outing.

Attention, Mr. Meeker.

The culvert at the corner of Putnam and Kensington avenues has been broken through by a heavy truck and needs the immediate attention of the Street Commissioner as it is a danger to horses crossing that thoroughfare.

FROM OVER THE LINE.

Things That Are and Things That Ought to Be.

TERSE ITEMS FROM THE BOROUGH.

Talk of Establishing a Public Park—A Trio of Young Men Who Think There Is No Place Like Home—Peter Wooden's Birthday—A Candidate for County Clerk.

Wet the fog horn.

Marshal Doud is still indisposed.

Hide that dog! The assessor is coming.

Mrs. James Conroy is visiting her parents in Newark.

Eddie Mundy and his bride will soon commence housekeeping.

Mrs. Daniel Cory of Warrenville was visiting friends here yesterday.

Fair this evening in Saengerbund Hall for the benefit of St. Joseph's Church.

Dr. Cooley is having a substantial flag walk laid in front of his Manning avenue property.

Miss Lillie Urmston of Brooklyn is visiting her friend, Mrs. James E. Baily of Jackson avenue.

Since Benjamin E. Gavin's return home from Thomasville, Ga., he has been very ill with lung trouble.

The borough Republicans have a candidate for County Clerk in the person of Collector H. N. Spencer.

Gus Martin and Billy Brown spent yesterday at the dam near Bound Brook and caught forty fair-sized perch.

Peter Hansen, one of the borough's special marshal's, who has been doing night duty in place of Marshal Doud, is a good officer.

Tonight Mayor Hegeman and the Marshal Committee will meet in the Council rooms. Justice Crosley and the marshals will also be present.

Tomorrow is Uncle Peter Wooden's birthday. He was born May 24, 1800, and died Tuesday, January 14, 1895. Is there anyone left to scatter a few flowers over his grave.

Lawyer Charles B. VanWinkle is still stopping with his brother, Nicholas VanWinkle on Coddington avenue. Charley has been ill for a long spell but is now gaining in health.

David F. Drake of Bull Frog City, has purchased a new horse; one, he says, that is becoming for the town clerk of the city on the hillside to drive. He's named the horse Levi.

Who'll chip in a few pennies for whitewash and brush wherewith to brighten up Washington Rock. Old patriotic Stephen Marsh, who lives underneath the Rock, will do the work.

Township residents down Greenbrook way want that strip from Beetham's farm to Sebring's mills macadamized. The road from David Lowrie's to that point is already macadamized.

Friends of Jerry Rowe, will be pleased to learn that he is now proprietor of a butcher shop on Grove street, near Greenbrook road. Mr. Rowe has been confined to his home for a few years by sickness but is now enjoying good health.

The tide has turned. Look out for breakers. Open Watchung avenue this time without fail. Remember, it has already cost the taxpayers over $7,000 with absolutely nothing but a map to show for it. A triple expensive of course, but we must have it.

Freeholder Lutkins has laid a new stone walk in front of his Somerset street property and set the curb in two feet. The Council should pass an ordinance and have the street widened two feet on each side from the bridge to Johnston's Drive. The traffic demands it.

Sam Hedden, the man who was first to drive a hack in Plainfield, is living at 5 Duer street. He relates that in the years before the war he was often intrusted with money by farmers, in his drives through the country, to make deposits for them in the First National bank.

A movement is on foot to interest the Council in the matter of purchasing the Boice property on Chatham street and to open up the same as a public park. Mayor Hegeman's administration would certainly receive all kinds of praise if this project could be consumated. The property won't be ordered bought at the next meeting of the Council, though.

George Bonnell and his cousin, Daniel Cooper, years ago took a small tablet from a chimney in a house that their grandfather once resided in near Stirling, Morris County, with the inscription of "D. C., 1735" thereon. Mr. Cooper kept the stone for years, and last Fall had the same inserted in a fireplace in a handsome residence that he had erected at Sewaren, adding "1895" thereto.

Clarence, Arthur and Isaac Lines, sons of Marshal James Lines, made a journey to Florida for the purpose of locating and growing up with an orange grove that they intended planting there. A few days stay was sufficient to convince them that the garden-spot of earth was a town near Scotch Plains called Plainfield, and so they meandered back to the old fireside. They were royally welcomed.

LINDEN ENJOINS ROSELLE.

Work on the Sewer Stops Till the Court Makes a Decision.

A temporay injunction has been obtained by the people of Linden Township, in the Court of Chancery, against the construction of a big trunk sewer by the borough of Roselle through Linden township to tidewater. The authorities of the borough began the work without obtaining permission from the Linden Township Committee.

Township Attorney Clarehce Ward therefore applied for the injunction. The issue will be decided next Tuesday by Vice-Chancellor Emery in Newark.

The inhabitants of Roselle wanted the sewer built, but those in the other part of the township did not, as they felt it would increase their taxes and only benefit Roselle. They opposed it so strongly that Roselle formed itself into a borough.

THE SECRET ORDERS.

Franklin Council, No. 41, J. O. U. A. M., meet this evening.

Members of John Hand Camp Sons of Veterans, had a very satisfactory drill last evening.

Anchor Lodge, No. 149, F. and A. M., had a very large attendance at their meeting last evening, at which time Grand Master Charles Belcher of Newark was present. The third degree was conferred on one candidate.

The members of Trinity Commandery, Knights Templar, will go to the North Avenue station this evening at 7:08 to meet the Sir Knights of St. John's Commandery of Elizabeth. They will be escorted to the Asylum in the Babcock Building, and from there go to Grace Episcopal Church, where they will be addressed by Rev. Dr. Stockton of Orange.

CYCLING COMMENT.

The Plainfield Cycle Company have sold their stock of Wilhelms.

About 40 additional entries were received yesterday for the meet.

F. H. Andrews and W. E. Stewart are among the latest to purchase Cleveland Swell Specials from the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company.

The Spalding team that will ride here at the National Circuit meet, May 30, are expected to arrive in Plainfield to day or tomorrow and will train on the Crescent Oval. They are Fred Titus, W. C. Sanger and L. C. Cabanne. Pictures of the trio will be placed in the stores about town.

Bank Officers Elected.

At the annual meeting of the Dime Savings Institution held last evening the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, John W. Murray; first vice-president, J. F. Hubbard; second vice-president, Jeremiah Manning; treasurer, E. R. Pope.

Club Women.

The Woman's Club of Orange held their annual reception and dinner yesterday afternoon, at which Mrs. David P. Hall and Mrs. Isaac W. Miller of the Monday Afternoon Club of this city responded to toasts.

Butcher to Turn Farmer.

Adam Fritz yesterday sold his 50 acre farm on Greenbrook road to Charles Arnold, who formerly conducted a meat market on Liberty street.

Progressive Whist Party.

Miss Mamie McNabb of Rahway road has issued invitations for a progressive whist party to be held at her residence, "Violet View", May 29.

Shine 'Em Up.

—Get your tickets now for East Lynne.

—In the absence of Chief Marshal Van Horn yesterday, who was attending the funeral of the late Mrs. J. S. Van Horn, Special Marshal Moore acted in his place.

GRAND JURY FINISHED.

Found 38 Indictments—Foreman Murray Presented With a Cane.

The Grand Jury rose this morning and presented 38 bills of indictment to the Court. The time set for pleading to the charges was Saturday morning. The members of the jury presented Foreman John W. Murray of this city with a valuable gold-headed cane as a testimonial of their respect for him and for his efficient and faithful services during the time they have been in session. This was the first jury that Mr. Murray ever served on, and the action of his fellow members was a complete surprise to him.

Before dispersing they visited and inspected the county jail, where they found things in perfect order.

ST. JOSEPH'S FESTIVAL.

The Rosary Society Conducting a Pleasant Affair.

The Rosary Society of St. Joseph's R. C. Church conducted a highly pleasing festival and dance in Saenger Hall on Somerset street last evening.

A very large number of the members with their friends were present and thoroughly enjoyed the affair.

Artistic hands gave the hall an attractive appearance. In one corner was a large booth arranged with flowers and greens, where Mrs. Carney, Miss Barbara Conolly and Mrs. Neely looked after those seeking refreshing temperance drinks, and they had no trouble in disposing of their goods.

At another end of the room Mrs. Andrew Kenney, Mrs. David Kenney and Mrs. Shotwell presided over the cake and ice-cream table.

There was an excellent demand for the articles on sale and a nice sum was realized.

James Daly as floor manager was excellent one. Music was furnished by Eugene O'Reilly.

The festival will be continued this evening.

A Veteran's Funeral.

The funeral of the late Isaac Hilyard was held yesterday afternoon from his home in Dunellen, Rev. Stewart Custard, pastor of the M. E. Church of that place, officiating. Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., of this city, of which decedent was a member, attended in a body. The remains were brought to Plainfield and interment was in Evergreen Cemetery. The firing squad in charge of I. L. McYoy, consisted of John Emmons, Israel Compton, W. R. Moore, W. R. Mattox, A. King, James Lewis and H. Drake. The pallbearers were: Francis Whitely, Isaac Brokaw, M. C. Dobbins and William Pangborn. The Grand Army service was performed at the grave, participated in by Commander Coriell, and Chaplain Goodwin. Frank Allen of the Independent Fife and Drum Corps, Phillip Hapeny and Daniel Dunavan, of the Cornet Band furnished the music for the occasion.

Finished Performance.

E. P. Sullivan and Rachelle Renard, at the head of the Howard Stock Company, were received last night at Music Hall in a manner which must have been extremely gratifying to them and their managers. There were frequent bursts of enthusiastic applause during the action of the play, and these were of the most spontaneous sort in every instance. Indeed, it would be well-nigh impossible for a performance to receive a more unqualified and energetic indorsement from any audience. The play presented, "Ingomar", is a beautiful and highly finished one, and a great stock favorite—the oftener seen the more attractive; it is of absorbing interest from beginning to end, and the presentation of it was a highly successful one. The support Mr. Sullivan and Miss Renard received was excellent.

The "Silver Ledge" will be presented tonight.

Borden-Yates Nuptials.

Cards are out for the approaching marriage of Miss Kathryn Young Yates daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Yates to Harry Voorhees Borden. The ceremony will take place in the Crescent Avenue Church, Wednesday afternoon at 5, June 5. A reception will be held at the bride's home, 128 East Seventh street at 5:30.

To Make a Handsome Street.

Surveyors were busily engaged yesterday in staking out Belvidere avenue and marking the grade from Woodland to South avenues. This will make a handsome street, when flagged its whole length, as the residences along that thoroughfare are among the finest in Netherwood.

—East Lynne, Friday evening.

The Boys Club team are anxious to play teams whose ages are under 16 years.

THE BANK ROBBERS.

New York Police Think They Have a Clew.

DAN DYSON THE SUSPECTED ONE.

The New York Morning Journal Publishes a Plausible Story About the First National Bank Theft—The Methods Were Like Those of This Great Crook—The Detectives Are Shadowing Him.

The detectives of New York and surrounding cities have a theory, that may develop into a clew, as to the planner and perpetrator of the Plainfield Bank robbery.

This robbery, which took place about a month ago, was the most cunningly planned and executed of any that has occurred in this part of the country for more than a decade. This fact excited the wonder of the police at the time and set them to thinking.

Every act of the robbers showed the expert craft, skill and adroitness of a congregation of bank sneaks and burglars who were thought to be dead, or behind prison bars, for they never reform, according to detective belief and tradition.

Jimmy Hope, "Old Bill" Vosburg, Charlie Perrine, Clutch Donohue, Joe Chapman and the long list of old-time crooks are all dead or accounted for, and still the Plainfield Bank was robbed of over $20,000 on precisely the same line of operation and by the same methods followed by these cracksmen, whose exploits were far more daring in the eyes of the modern detective than any ever performed by Dick Turpin or Claude Duval, while their plunder, in the aggregate, would ransom a king.

So the detectives put on their thinking caps, with the result that they have evolved the theory that the man who planned and probably helped to execute the robbery of the Plainfield Bank is none other than Daniel Dyson, alias Dan Noble, probably the most daring and ingenious bank burglar, sneak, forger and all-round crook that America ever produced.

The theory is founded on the fact that Dan Noble, by which name Dyson is best known to the police, returned to this country from England, where he had just completed a sentence of twenty years, a very short time before the Plainfield robbery took place.

Noble was released from prison in London on March 17, and immediately sailed for New York. Although the proceeds of his crimes should have made him a millionaire, he is said to have left prison almost penniless.

When he was liberated he told the prison officials that he had a fortune "planted" in America, and if it was not forthcoming when he returned there would be bloodshed. This money, which runs into the hundreds of thousands, was held in trust for him by some of his relatives and former "pals".

Since his arrival in New York he has kept very much in the shade, and has not even reported to Superintendent Byrnes, at Police Headquarters- a rule followed by all crooks who wish to remain in New York and conduct themselves as law-abiding citizens.

But, while he has not renewed old acquaintanceships or reappeared in his old haunts (most of them have disappeared, by the way), it has been whispered around that Noble has met with some difficulty in regaining his share of the proceeds of many crimes, and that trouble is brewing.

No bloodshed has been reported yet, but the Plainfield bank robbery has. A great deal of the money stolen by the old "Noble's gang" has been invested in real estate in New Jersey and Westchester County. Of course, the investments have been made in the names of others, and that of old Dan does not appear on record.

The police theory is that Dan, finding himself "broke" and in danger of being cheated out of his "earnings," followed his old instinct and decided to "turn a trick".

While there are no Jimmy Hopes or Little Horaces of this generation, there is an abundance of raw material that could be used to good account under the tutelage and direction of a consummate artist like Dan Noble.

It is concluded that Dan got together a couple of these tyros, taught them the artistic touches of his profession, and turned the Plainfield trick with their help.

It is supposed that he took the responsible duty of "stalling" himself, and the descriptions furnished by the victims of the robbery tally exactly with that of the now venerable bank burglar, sneak and forger.

It will be remembered that a man of aged and striking appearance entered the bank and engaged the cashier in conversation, while one of the three confederates sneaked to the safe and escaped with two bundles of bank notes, containing more than $20,000.

The description of this venerable-looking man tallies with that of Dan Noble, as he is today, to the letter and the dot. It is that of a man of sixty-one years old, six feet high, with a white beard, bluish-gray eyes and a long, thin nose.

The police have Noble located in a little town near New York, and are shadowing his every movement. They are also trying to have the cashier of the bank get a peep at Noble, but have not yet succeeded in doing so. If the identification is at all positive, Noble will be taken into custody. He is so surrounded that he cannot escape, but the police wish to postpone the arrest until they can trace some of the stolen money, which they have thus far been unable to do. They fear a premature arrest.

PLUCKY BOY, MAD DOG.

Charles Sutterlin Chases Down the Hydrophobia Inoculator.

The citizens of the borough are under obligations to a young man named Charles Sutterlin for persistently following up and shooting a mad dog. The animal made its appearance yesterday afternoon in the dooryard of his father, Gustav Sutterlin, Greenbrook road, near Duer street, and made an attack on Sutterlin's dog, who is kept chained. A number of little children were playing in the yard at the time and fortunately escaped into the house on the appearance of the snapping and growling cur.

Young Sutterlin at once made up his mind that the animal was mad, and getting a gun from the house started after the dog, who was then leaving the premises by way of Greenbrook road. He followed him to the home of Mr. Bovey on Somerset street, where he chewed at the pickets in order to get out of the dooryard. Here young Sutterlin took his first shot at the animal, but only made the fur fly from his back. From thence the dog ran to John McLaughlin's house, nearly opposite, and bit a dog belonging to him. Then he started up Mountain avenue, snapping at hitching posts and everything he met. Young Sutterlin followed the dog up Mountain avenue, through dooryards, until he got a good shot at him on Westervelt avenue, near Mountain avenue, where he killed him.

AN INDIAN OUTBREAK

Armed Bands Marching on the Creek Nation Capital.

Alleged Misappropriations by the Head of the Creek Government the Cause of the Trouble — Hardware Stores Did a Booming Business in Munitions of War.

Eufala, I. T., May 23.—An insurrection has broken in the Creek nation against the tribal heads of the government. Armed bands are marching on on Okmulgee, the capital. Seventy-five men left a rendezvous near here yesterday, and, it is said, were joined by 100 more from New Yorker, an Indian town. In addition to this, news has arrived here that five other Indian towns have sent forty men each to join the insurgents in their march on the capital.

Cause of the Trouble.

The trouble, it is claimed, is because of alleged misappropriation by the Creek head of the government, of a part of the Creek fund, which was to have been paid out per capita to the Indian citizens. Esparbeche, who led the insurrection in 1883, is said to be at the head of the present trouble. The council is in session at Okmulgee.

Will Go to the Capital.

The insurgents declare that they will go there to see that the council investigates the matter and compel the chief, L. C. Perryman, to resign and set up Holtulke Amartheler, the second chief, in his stead. The hardware stores there did a big business in munitions of war yesterday.

FROST IN PENNSYLVANIA.

State Weather Bureau Says the Damage Is Overestimated.

Philadelphia, May 23.—The Pennsylvania state weather service issues the following: The severe frosts of the 13th and 17th and the freezing weather during the week, were very injurious to early growing vegetables and fruits in nearly all sections of the state outside of the northeast counties. The grape crop appears to be ruined. As to fruit and vegetables many of them may yet recover under favorable conditions. While the injuries now appear serious, it is probable that the loss has been overestimated. Grain and grass continue in very good condition, although slow growth was made during the week. Considerable corn has been planted and some of it is up. Less than the usual area of tobacco will be put in. The acreage of potatoes will be large.

FROST DAMAGE IN JERSEY.

Early Vegetables Suffered Greatly, Says the Weather Bureau.

Newark, N. J., May 23.—E. W. McGann, director of the New Jersey Weather Service bureau, in his weekly report states that the frost of May 17 was particularly severe in many sections of the state, and early vegetables suffered greatly in consequence. Many crops of tomatoes, beans, early corn, melons, cucumbers, sweet potatoes and even white potatoes were ruined. Those that were not killed were greatly retarded in growth. Farmers are said to have begun replanting. In the central section of the state orchard fruits have, it is thought, suffered from the frost. The rainfalls were of great benefit to the wheat, rye and grass crops, which are in a thriving condition. The average daily deficiency in the temperature has been about 10 degrees.

GEN. MARTI WAS KILLED

Further Confirmation of the News Received.

Reported That His Body Will Be Embalmed and Exhibited by the Spanish Government Patriots in New York and Florida Still Doubt the Story.

Jacksonville, Fla., May 23.—A special from Tampa, Fla., says that an official telegram was received by the Spanish consul late yesterday saying: "The news of Marti's death is confirmed." The leaders of the Cuban revolutionary movement here state they do not believe the report that Marti has been killed. They say several times news has been sent out by Spanish authorities that Cuban leaders were killed and afterwards these same leaders would turn up all right.

News by Steamer.

News by the steamer Mascotte, just in port from Havana, confirm the report of Marti's death. They state that the battle occurred on the 20th, between Beja and Don Rios. The rebels were defeated by Col. Sandoval, after a hotly contested fight lasting one hour and a half, resulting in the death of Marti and several other leaders whose names are unknown. It is stated in La Lucha of the 21st that neither Gomez nor Marti is on the island.

To Embalm Marti's Remains.

Havana, May 23.—The captured rebels say that they saw and identified the body of Marti. Dr. Valencia has gone to the scene of the battle to embalm Marti's remains. Among the documents that fell into the hands of the government troops were a number that incriminate prominent Cubans in the insurrection. The statement that Marti was killed is generally accepted here as true.

Government Rejoicing.

There is great rejoicing in official circles over the news of the defeat of the rebels in eastern Cuba, and the death of Jose Marti, who was proclaimed president of the Cuban republic by the revolutionary party. According to the dispatches, General Salcedo sent Colonel Sandoval with a detachment of troops to attack the insurgents, estimated to number about seven hundred men, under the command of Jose Marti, Maximo Gomez, Maceo and Barreo, who were on the march with the intention of passing Cauto river, and proceeding in the direction of Victoria de las Lunas, with the ultimate object of attacking Puerto Principe. The insurgents were found encamped between Bijas and Boca de los Rios, on the right side of a river tributary to the Cauto. They occupied a strong position on a strip of land between the two streams.

Insurgents Defeated.

When the Spanish troops attacked the rebel camp they were harassed by a scattering fire from the bush, which lasted for about an hour. At the end of that time the Spanish troops advanced with a rush upon the enemy's position, and succeeded in dividing the insurgent force into two bodies. The fire of the troops eventually compelled both sides of the insurgents to fly in different directions pursued by the government forces. Among the bodies of the slain was found that of Jose Marti, which was identified by persons who were well acquainted with the insurgent leader. According to government reports the Spaniards captured almost the entire contents of the rebel camp.

To Exhibit Marti's Remains.

The report that Gomez was wounded cannot be verified, but several of the prisoners taken express the belief that he was. The body of Marti, after being embalmed, it is reported, will be taken to Santiago de Cuba, where the people will be allowed to gaze upon it in order that there may be no possible doubt as to the identity of the man who has been killed. This is done in view of the fact that the authorities claim that the rebels will deny that Marti has been killed.

Cuban Patriots Worried.

New York, May 23.—The news of the death of General Jose Marti was received by the Cuban patriots in this city at the same time that the newspapers received their information. There is a disposition on the part of the Cubans to doubt the report, and they say it is probably a dispatch concocted by the Spanish authorities. However, they are visibly worried over the report and will remain in a state of suspense until the story is verified.

FORESTS TURNED TO STONE.

An Insight to the Mighty Operations of Nature Which Produced It.

The Yellowstone National Park is called the Wonderland of America, and since the destruction of the New Zealand geyser area, it is, perhaps, entitled to be called the wonderland of the world, for within its limits the most varied of nature's workings may be observed. Its hundreds of hot springs and geysers, its precipitous canons and rushing cataracts, its snow capped mountain peaks and mirrored lakes, making it of surpassing interest. The lover of natural scenery may linger long over its beauties and its wonders.

From the geological point of view it is also of great interest, for here may be found rocks that range in age from the most ancient of which we have any knowledge to those in process of formation at the present moment. The superheated waters of the hot springs and geysers hold a large amount of rock making material in solution, which is deposited about the openings of the springs on the cooling of the waters, and in this way building up a mass of great magnitude.

These springs and geysers are constantly breaking out in new places, often on the borders or in the forests of living trees. The trees are killed at once by the hot water, and on becoming withered and dry, begin soon to take up the rock making solution by which they are bathed, and thus to pass into the fossil state.

Conditions similar to these, or at least favorable to the preservation of fossil forests, appear to have existed from a remote time, for there is evidence to show that the fossil forests were preserved before the most active of the hot spring phenomena were inaugurated. These fossil forests are located in the northeastern corner of the Yellowstone National Park, at a place known locally as Amethyst Mountain or Fossil Forest Ridge.

This is really a mountain some ten miles long and rising nearly or quite 2,000 feet above the level of the valley. If it were possible to cut a section down through this mountain, as a slice is cut from a loaf of bread, there would be found a succession of at least fifteen fossil forests one above another. That is to say at some remote day, geologically speaking, there grew a great forest which was covered up by the ejected material from a great volcano, rivaling in size Mount Etna, that is known to have existed some miles to the north. The trees were entombed in an upright position, and under the action of silica charged waters were fossilized. The action of the volcano ceased and quiet was restored for a sufficient length of time for a second forest to be developed above the first. Then came a second outburst from the volcano, and this forest was buried and fossilized like the first, and so in turn have the dozen or more forests flourished and been engulfed.

MRS. CLEVELAND'S GOODNESS.

Her Acts of Consideration to Old Friends and Schoolmates.

Mrs. Cleveland is very kind to all her old classmates at Wells College, but she is more than kind to those of the number who are obliged to support themselves. At the Pure Food Exposition in Washington last fall a classmate gave lessons in cooking. She was a guest during the ten days of the exposition at Woodley, the President's country place.

"The President's carriage," writes the Washington correspondent of the Chicago Record, "brought her to her duties every morning and carried her out again after the close of the exhibition at 11 o'clock p. m.

"Mrs. Cleveland was a regular attendant on the classes, which, of course, made them fashionable. The cooking room was decorated with flowers from the White House conservatory every morning, and nothing was left undone by the President's wife to promote the success of her classmate."

Miss Catherine Willard, the niece of the apostle of temperance, Miss Frances Willard, was a roommate of Mrs. Cleveland at Wells College. She has a remarkable contralto voice and supports herself by singing. While she was visiting Mrs. Cleveland circulars were sent from the White House to the society people announcing that Miss Willard would give three concerts at the residence of Secretary Lamont under the patronage of the President's wife, to which season tickets of admission would be furnished applicants upon the receipt of $10.

For several days after the sending out of the circulars carriages filled with fashionable women rolled up to the entrance of the President's house. A large audience greeted Miss Willard at her concerts.

Sublime Self-Sacrifice.

"You look pale," said the sharp nosed girl.

"I feel pale," sighed the fluffy girl. "But I am happy, anyway. You know that stingy little Chollie Tapetie? Well, he did open his heart enough to take me to the food show, and, of course, I sampled the samples. What are samples for? And after I had eaten this and drunk that and the other till I just couldn't stand any more we started home. Then he thought he saw his chance. So he asked me to have some ice-cream.

"And did you accept?" asked the sharp nosed girl.

"Accept? I ate three plates. With cake. And lemonade.

Discriminating Wisdom.

A correspondent thinks he has discovered a discrepancy in the Bible because one verse says, "Answer a fool according to his folly lest he be wise in his own conceit," while another verse says, "Answer not a fool according to his folly lest thou also be like unto him." Solomon probably had in view the fact that there are two kinds of fools, each kind requiring different treatment.—Albany Times-Union.

Strange, but True

The child that cannot digest milk can digest Cod-liver Oil as it is prepared in Scott's Emulsion. Careful scientific tests have proven it to be more easily digested than milk, butter, or any other fat. That is the reason why puny, sickly children, and thin, emaciated and anæmic persons grow fleshy so rapidly on Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil and Hypophosphites when their ordinary food does not nourish them.

VERITABLE LOVE FEAST

A Day of Harmony at the General Assembly.

The Expected Struggle Against the Briggs Men Did Not Occur—Conservatives, Nevertheless, Have Other Plans Mapped Out—A Missionary Made Happy.

Pittsburg, May 23.—Contrary to announcement no attempt was made by the New York delegation to continue their attack upon the eastern Briggs men by objecting to the election of liberals to the Board of missions. Threats were freely uttered in the hotels that such was to be the programme, but the day passed without the manifestation of the slightest cloud of discord.

A Veritable Love Feast.

The day's business was a veritable love feast. The honored and venerable Syrian missionary, Dr. Henry Harris Jessup, aroused an enthusiasm in the name foreign missions in the presence of which the rankest liberals and conservatives might easily forget their differences.

A Young Missionary Made Happy.

This enthusiasm was heightened by a tale of a waiting minister anxious to start with his bride for the wilds of the Congo country, but delayed for lack of funds, which the foreign board treasury in its emptiness could not supply. The "paltry sum of $1,500" kept him back, it was said. So the assembly set to work under the encouraging presence of Dr. Jessup and Dr. Gillespie and Moderator Booth to raise that sum. When the returns were counted the offerings had passed the $4,000 mark, and the young missionary and his bride will depart for Africa.

A Wedding for To-Night.

It is arranged, furthermore, that the African missionary shall be united in marriage to his bride in the presence of the assembly that treated him so generously to-night at the popular centennial meeting over which President Patton is to preside.

Conservatives Not Quieted.

But while the ultra-conservatives were thus quieted in their opposition to the liberal members of the foreign board, they are laying plans to reach their end in another and less invidious way. They purpose to cover the case of members of the church boards who through other connections are in apparent hostility to the church and to the general assembly by a deliverance of the general assembly directed against its donations avowedly hostile to the assembly.

Avoid Unpleasant Personalities.

Treating the matter in this way, the conservatives avoid unpleasant personalities and make it unnecessary to pass upon the theological standing of any man. Each member of the church boards, after such a deliverance, would have to settle it with his own conscience, whether he should sever his association with the Union seminary and the Presbyterian league or quietly step out of the board.

Condemns Without Trial.

One reason advanced in support of the deliverance plan of dealing with the Briggs men is that the refusal of the assembly to confirm nominations for membership of boards practically amounts to condemnation without a trial. Moreover, there were men well known as liberals on the list of nominees for the Home and Foreign boards against whose election there could not have been the slightest objection. One of these was the venerable father of the moderator, a director in Union seminary, who was returned to membership in the Foreign board. Should this matter of a deliverance be decided upon it would not be pressed until other business now pending is out of the way.

The weather was delightful and the usual number of debutantes attended, but the crowd was smaller than usual. Mrs. Curzon, formerly Miss Leiter, was greatly admired. She wore a magnificent court train, suspended from the shoulder, of white cloth and silver moire antique lined with the palest of green satin. Her headdress was of plumes, and she also wore a white veil. She carried a bouquet of white orchids. Miss Herbert, daughter of the United States secretary of the navy, was also presented. Miss Herbert wore plain white satin and carried a bouquet of white roses. Her ornaments were a solitaire necklace and pendant, and her hair ornaments were all diamonds.

BERRY CROP DESTROYED.

Three Nights of Frost Play Havoc with Fruit in New York State.

Fruit growers say that the apple crop has escaped damage so far, while peaches and other fruits have suffered incalculable damage. Garden truck of all kinds is badly damaged by the frost, which at this season of the year is unprecedented.

Onions and Celery Damaged.

Oneida, N. Y., May 23.—Great damage was done to the onion crop and celery crop in the northern part of Canastota, where these vegetables are so extensively grown, by the high winds and cold weather of Sunday and Monday. The damage is estimated by those who suffered to be about $3,000.

T. T. Poole's Terrible Death in the Machinery of His Mills.

Lambertville, N. J., May 23.—T. T. Poole, aged 45 years, proprietor of the large paper mills across the Delaware river, met with a frightful death at the mills yesterday. He was inspecting the machinery and in some way his clothing got caught in the shafting. He was thrown violently to the floor and the top of his head was torn off. His neck was broken and one of his arms was pulled from the socket. Several of the employes who were in the mills and close to Mr. Poole witnessed the accident, but were powerless to aid him. They stopped the machinery as quickly as possible, but the man was dead.

ROBBED ON THE SEA

Moorish Pirates Enact a Stevenson Romance.

Took Nearly Everything on Board, Including the Sailors' Shoes and the Cabin Door—The Captain Fatally Wounded—Left To Sail Away Without Compass or Lights.

Washington, May 23.—A stirring tale of the sea, that reads like a romance, comes to the state department in a dispatch from Richard L. Sprague, acting United States consul at Gibraltar, under date of May 2. The story is all the more surprising because the events recorded occurred in the well-traveled waters of the Mediterranean.

Days of Piracy Recalled.

According to the account furnished to the department by Mr. Sprague, the steam tug Hercules on the afternoon of April 30 towed into Gibraltar bay the Dutch brigantine Anna which had been flying signals of distress off Europa point. The experience of the Anna, according to the story told by one of her crew, recalls the worst days of piracy.

Becalmed Near Shore.

On March 19 she set sail from Bari, a port in the Adriatic, with a cargo of oil, and on Sunday, April 26, became becalmed about seven miles from shore, near Alhucemas bay in the Riff country, between Melille and Centa. She was manned by a captain, a mate, three seamen and a cook. About two or three o'clock that afternoon a boat approached from shore manned by seven or eight Moors.

Attacked by Pirates.

They were savage-looking fellows, stripped naked to the waist, with heads entirely shaven clean of hair except a long tuft on tor. Breech-loading rifles and long knives were their arms. When within hailing distance, the Moors called in Spanish to the brigantine to lower sail, and on being refused, commenced firing on the vessel.

Fought Off with Hatchets.

As the boat came alongside, the crew armed themselves with hatchets and crowbars, and one of the Riffians, who attempted to board, was struck down by the mate with a blow from a crowbar. A volley was returned and the mate fell.

The Captain Wounded.

Seizing his revolver, the only weapon on board, Captain Velvis began to use it on the pirates, but had fired one shot only when he was wounded in the hand. Meanwhile the wounded mate had preceded aft where he was fired on and fell. Four bullets had entered his body. Then the captain was permanently disabled by a shot wound in the stomach.

Took Everything on Board.

About this time several other boats put out from shore and resistance was out of the question. Leaping on board the pirates began their work of plunder. The ship's boat was lowered and bedding, cooking utensils, compasses, sidelights, spare sails, a portion of the cargo, all the provisions except salt meat, and many other things, even the cabin doors, were loaded into this and the boats of the pirates and taken to land.

Took Even the Men's Shoes.

Several trips were made, the boats coming and going the whole afternoon. To complete the work the pirates took even the shoes from the feet of the crew and the clothes from their backs.

Left Without Compass or Lights.

When night came the buccaneers left the ship and, a light breeze springing up, the sailors endeavored to steer for the Spanish coast, although without compass or lights. They sailed all that night and the next day, using an old cotton shirt in day light and burning oakum after dark as signals of distress, but although several vessels passed within sight, no attention was paid to the distressed brigantine.

Captain Died of His Wounds.

At 4 o'clock the next morning Captain Velvis died, and after many hardships the Anna was sighted about 4 p. m. on April 30 by the Hercules, and brought into the harbor. The mate, W. Smith, who had been badly wounded in both thighs, in the abdomen and the right hand, was taken to the Colonial hospital in a critical condition. The Anna hailed from Old Pekela, in Holland, where the captain and mate resided. The consul for the Netherlands at Gibraltar is investigating the outrage.

THE DAILY PRESS.

A. L. FORCE. Publisher and Proprietor.
WALTER IRVING CLARKE. Managing Editor.

TOWN AND HOME FAVORITE.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., MAY 23, 1895.

New Brunswick is sorely afflicted these days. Besides being the home of the rubber trust, it has a deadlock in the Common Council and a newspaper war on its hands.

The Elizabeth Daily Journal yesterday devoted a quarter of a column of its space in the endeavor to straighten out a news item which it gave The Daily Press the credit of publishing. The fact is that the item never appeared in The Press.

The Daily Press today publishes the ordinance which, on its adoption by the Common Council, empowers the city authorities to proceed with the work of establishing the sewage disposal beds on the land, near West Front street and Rock avenue, which has already been informally purchased for the city. The time set for a hearing on the ordinance before its adoption is Monday, June 3. Though no active opposition to this proposed manner of sewage disposal has yet been manifested by the residents of the city, there are some who are no doubt averse to seeing this method of disposal placed in operation. The place for them to interpose such objections as they may entertain is at this hearing. That is what it is for. If they do not care to appear before the Council, let them keep their criticisms of the Council's action to themselves Plainfield is wonderfully free from calamity howlers and growlers, and as long as these conditions last, the taxpayers can consider themselves well off.

The Daily Press takes great pleasure in making public the following the letter which was received this afternoon:

"Having read in last night's issue of The Press a request for furniture for the Working Girls' Club, I will say that I will give a square piano, which I have been using at my dancing academy in Summit. I have no use for it now and in selling it I would get but very little, and I think it would do a great deal more good to the poor girls. Anyway it will last long enough to answer their purposes until they feel rich enough to buy a better one. It is in good order. Maybe some kind-hearted expressman will bring it to Plainfield free of charge. Enclosed is an order and the address of its present whereabouts. I will also give six folding campchairs that can easily be stored in a small space when not in use. The latter are at my house, and can be called for at any time. Also a lot of books and novels. They may help to amuse and pass the time.

"Respectfully,
Elizabeth Menzeli Bartlett.
63 Westervelt avenue."

The order for the piano is at the Press office where it can be secured by those who are at the head of the movement for the Working Girls Club.

THE SURRENDER OF LEE.

Grant, in a Blouse and Without Arms, Received the Stately Southerner.

General Grant had a most peculiar temperament. In common and ordinary matters he always found it hard to interest himself. If it had not been for the war of the rebellion and the tremendous responsibilities that were thrown upon him he would doubtless have remained the obscurest man in the little town of Galena. As it was, when the name of Grant began to be talked about so much at the front there were many people in the town who were utterly unable to place him. They remembered that there was a person by that name who had modestly clerked in the tannery office and that was all. "Which Grant is it?" was the common question.

Most of the descriptions of the surrender of Lee at Appomattox that have been written, except that in Grant's memoirs, have had more or less of fiction mixed with them. At no time in General Grant's career did his wonderful common sense stand him in better stead than in the hour of victory. He always had such a direct way of arriving at the real thing to do, and, while he was very exacting of an enemy in the essentials, he was exceedingly liberal and considerate in small and non-essential particulars. To those who understood the situation it was apparent on the eighth day of April, 1865, that the surrender of Lee must come soon. Yet few were prepared to prophesy that it would come on the next day. That day Lee's command was approaching Appomatox, to find itself practically in a pocket. Union forces were in large numbers on both sides of the river. At midnight General Grant received a note from General Lee asking for a meeting to confer in regard to the effect of surrender, and asking if such surrender would lead to peace. Grant replied that such a meeting could amount to nothing, as he was not authorized to treat in regard to peace. He suggested, however, that the laying down of their arms by the South would certainly hasten the event and save thousands of lives and hundreds of millions of property. He pointed out the hopelessness of further resistance. On the morning of the 9th Lee made an attack on the Union cavalry, but finding that they were supported strongly by infanty, he sent a flag of truce and forwarded a note to Grant, asking an interview, in accordance with his note of the day before. General Grant was on the road near Appomattox Court House. He replied that he would move forward and meet Lee at any place he might designate.

On the afternoon of the 9th the two generals and their staffs met at the famous McLean house at Appomattox. How plainly I recall that picture! The Confederate general Lee and his staff were in full uniform, with their swords at their sides. Grant was the most unostentatious appearing individual in the company. He did not have on the uniform of his rank, even; but he proceeded to prepare the document which, when signed, would practically end the war. It took about three hours to do all the business. The Confederates evidently expected that they would be called upon to deliver up their swords and side arms. General Grant had been very sick the night before, and that morning, with sick headache, but when he was informed that Lee would surrender he was immediately cured. The room where the negotiations went forward, and where the papers were prepared and signed was very plainly furnished and contained simply a table and some chairs. The surrender consisted, as everybody knows, of an exchange of letters. General Grant wrote a letter in duplicate addressed to General Lee and when it was finished handed it to him. General Lee slowly put on his spectacles and read it. He then proceeded to write a note addressed to General Grant, acknowledging the receipt of his letter and accepting the terms mentioned therein. During the progress of the negotiations, which lasted, as stated above, about three hours, there was a running conversation, often drifting far away from the subject in hand.

When the letters had been exchanged, which made the surrender complete, a general handshaking and introduction took place. The Union officers were presented to General Lee, and the Confederate officers to General Grant. Grant was not elated or excited in the least over the surrender. As he rode to his camp he heard the firing of salutes in celebration of the surrender. He sent immediately, ordering that it be stopped. The picture of that surrender scene has never been made yet. All who have attempted it have filled it with fictions. The contrast between the Confederate vanquished and the Union victors was very marked. General Grant wore his Union soldier's blouse and did not even have his sword. The Confederates were as clean and stylish as though on dress parade, with their full uniforms and arms. The unostentatious, natural, common sense way in which Grant got at this important business will always live as one of the most picturesque as well as remarkable events in history.

THE FRAUDULENT CLAIM.

By Howard Fielding.

(Copyright, 1895.)

The exceptional contract between Mr. Horace Preble and the Detective Bureau of the New York police allowed that young man a month in every year when his time was absolutely his own. He was then at liberty to rest from all labor, or to use his talents for his personal advantage. This blessed period had arrived, and Preble had begun to taste anew the joys of idleness, when he received a summons promising so rich a financial reward that he could not afford to disregard it.

Vice-President Hersch of the European and North American Life Assurance Society was the man who desired Preble's services. He did not state the case in his note, but he intimated that the society would not haggle about the question of remuneration.

It will be remembered, perhaps, that Preble was in the detective business for money. He hated it from the bottom of his boots, and, as an abstract proposition, he would have declared death to be preferable. But he had a false pride which would not permit him to be driven to the wall in the battle of life, and the objectionable means of livelihood had come to him when his back was very close to that wall. He had as little appetite for the investigation of an insurance fraud as any man alive, but he could be hired to do it. Men have written immortal verse for the same lofty motive.

Preble called upon Vice-President Hersch immediately upon receipt of his note. The official received him cordially, in a cozy office in the society's big building on lower Broadway. There was a cheerful grate fire in the office, and the two men drew their chairs before it, and proceeded to business.

"This is the case of a fraudulent claim," said Mr. Hersch. "Mrs. Albert Monell"—he referred to some papers—"has given the usual legal notice of her demand for $25,000, the amount of her husband's policies in this company."

"Well," said Preble, "isn't he dead?"

"Oh, yes; he's dead fast enough."

"Did the woman murder him?"

"No, indeed."

"Then, what's the matter?

"Why, the man committed suicide."

"How do you know?"

"Now, that's business," said Hersch, rubbing his hands. "That's the question I could have expected from you, Mr. Preble. How do I know? Well, the fact is, I don't know. I only suspect. It is because I want to know, because the company wants to know, that I call upon you."

"It seems to me that I remember something about the case," said Preble. "Died at his club, didn't he? Doctor said heart disease, I believe?"

"Yes; that was the ostensible cause."

"What did the company's doctor say?"

"He suspected poison, but the rascal was so infernally clever as to leave no trace of his work. I tell you that a grain of aconitia distributed through a man's system is mighty hard to find."

"If you know that he used aconitia"——

"We don't; but that poison would have produced the results. We shall allege its use when the case comes to trial."

"But you don't dare to go into court on the medical testimony alone," said Preble. "Is that it?"

"That's it exactly."

"What else have you?"

"We believe that he informed his partner in business that he was going to do this, and that the man can be induced to testify."

"Extraordinary confession to make to a business associate."

"They had been intimate friends for many years," said Hersch. "That could be presented to the jury."

"The jury," said Preble, "would want something to back it. Even a juryman would know that a fellow who would rise up against the widow of his intimate friend would lie for what you'd be willing to pay. By the way, what would you be willing to pay?"

"We are becoming very confidential," said Hersch.

"Oh that's all right! There are no witnesses."

Hersch glanced complacently at the closed doors of the little room. Then he said in a low voice:

"From $1,000 to $5,000, according to the nature of his evidence."

Preble kicked the grate reflectively.

"Who is this rascal?" he asked.

"The partner?"

"Certainly. We've turned up only one other rascal in the case so far—except myself."

"One other?"

"Go on. What's his name and address?"

"John M. Lawrence. His office is in the Storrow Building. They were working two or three patented devices—a railroad signal was one of them, I believe. There was no money in it. They were on the verge of failure."

"So I inferred from Monell's suicide."

"That's a point for the jury, certainly."

Preble looked into the fire for a moment. He was wondering what sort of woman Mrs. Monell was, and what chance she would stand in the struggle for existence when so strong a man as himself had so nearly failed.

"How did you find out that Lawrence was willing to—to make a little money in this way?"

"I don't know that certainly, but it happens that the agent who got Monell into our company was an intimate friend of both of them. He was with them on the evening when, as the agent thinks, Morrell told his partner what he was going to do. Of course, our agent did not hear the disclosure, but something was said before he left them which stuck in his mind and excited his suspicion afterward. So he went to Lawrence and tried to get something out of him. Lawrence would only hint at what he knew."

HE CARRIED HIS RESEARCHES TO A SUCCESSFUL ISSUE.

"Why didn't you have him down here?"

"I prefer not to do that. It might be injudicious, as you can readily see. If any bargain is to be made with him somebody not connected with us directly must do it. You see, I'm trusting you implicitly. They told me at headquarters that I couldn't make any mistake in doing so."

"I'm a thoroughly honest man," said Preble. "That's why I think so well of this particular job."

Hersch eyed him askance, but the expression of the detective's face reassured him

"It seems to me," Preble said, after a pause, "that your case is weak. Unless you have something better than this you'll lose it."

"There is something better, if we can find it," responded Hersch. "On that night at the club Monel wrote a long letter to his wife."

Preble suddenly sat up straight in his chair.

"Now, that's tangible," he said. "It looks like business. She was in the city at the time? I see. A man, except on special occasions, doesn't write long letters to his wife from the club. He goes there to forget her, as a rule."

"If that letter could be found"——

"Are you sure he wrote it?"

"We know that he wrote a long letter, and a servant at the house where the Monells lived says that she took it from a boy. But we can't find the boy, and the servant is not positively certain about the night. She is willing to testify, but she's so stupid that she couldn't stand cross-examination, even if she was telling the truth.

"Now, Mr. Preble, you see what I'm driving at. That letter must be found. It's ten to one that he told her all, and it's a hundred to one that she kept the letter. Women always preserve dangerous documents. And in this case it contained her husband's last words to her. It's a thing she'd never part with."

"And you want me to go to her house and steal it," said Preble, calmly.

"Very well. What's it worth?"

"Whatever you think is right," Mr. Preble."

The detective rose and kicked his chair back from the fire.

"'Half what I save your company," he said. "Without the letter you've no case. With it you win, for there's no mortal doubt what's in it."

"That's a good deal of money—$12,500."

"Good afternoon."

"Hold on, Mr. Preble; suppose we say ten thousand?"

"Good af"——

"Oh, very well! Just as you say."

"Put it in writing."

It was done with great reluctance on the part of Hersch, who took the precaution to laboriously drum the contract out on his typewriter and sign it in a disguised hand. Preble pocketed the document.

"That's all right," he said. "Now tell me how many detectives you've already sent to the house. But never mind; your whole staff has failed, or you'd never have offered any such money as this. I'll go up there, and on the way I'll call on Lawrence."

He took Mrs. Monell's address, and then left the room.

John M. Lawrence, who was born in '69, and has grown over 40 years old since that date, was sitting in his office reading. The subject of his perusal was a notification from his bank that a note for nine hundred and odd dollars would fall due in the very near future. If he was wondering why, when it had been possible to borrow so much money, he had not borrowed more and skipped with it, he was certainly not the only man who had been gnawed by that form of remorse.

"I represent the European and all the rest of it insurance company," said Preble when he had closed the door behind him. "We are going to contest Mrs. Monell's claim, and we want to find out whether you'll go on the stand and tell what you know."

Lawrence involuntarily clutched the notification. Neither the gesture nor the nature of the document escaped Preble's eye.

"And if so," Preble continued, "for how much?"

Lawrence was something of a business man himself, but he had not reached the stage of development when he could transact that kind of business so quickly. Desiring time to collect his thoughts, he said:

"You're an impudent rascal."

Preble laughed.

"We're not children," he said. "We're business men. Do you want to pay that note, or do you want it to go to protest?"

Lawrence put the wrong end of a fresh cigar into his mouth and tried to light the other. Naturally there was no draught.

He laughed nervously. Then, checking himself suddenly, he exclaimed:

"By the Lord Harry, I like your way of going at a thing. You don't waste much time, I'll swear. Show me your credentials."

Preble folded his contract back and showed Lawrence Hersch's name on the end of it. Of course that amounted to the same thing, but Lawrence was not in a mood to be too particular.

Then there was a fencing match, in which point after point was scored by Preble. Twenty minutes later he had bought his man for $1,200, and had learned all he had to tell.

Albert Monell had committed suicide. He had confided in his partner partly through friendship, but chiefly, as he had confessed, because he had feared that Lawrence would suspect, and it was better he should be under a pledge. The nature of that pledge, Lawrence did not disclose, but Preble noticed that he shuddered when the conversation drifted near it.

The disclosure had been made at the time when the insurance agent had supposed it to have occurred. Monell had pointed out that his affairs had reached the brink of ruin; that he was utterly worn out; that he had neither the strength to begin the struggle anew nor the heart to drag his wife down to the dull misery of squalor.

"He loved the woman," said Lawrence, "and by the eternal heavens, she's worth it."

"Let us stick to business," rejoined Preble.

Thus admonished, Lawrence related the story of his friend's last night in the land of the living.

"As soon as I saw him," he said, "I knew that he'd made up his mind to do it. I saw him in the writing room. He was writing to her, and I'll tell you it took a better nerve even than his to keep a stiff upper lip while he did it. There's nothing particularly soft about me, but I own that the sight of him gave me the shivers. I couldn't stand it; and, by and by, when he had finished his letter, I got hold of him and tried to jolly him out of his idea.

"'My dear fellow,' he said, 'I've no more idea of killing myself than you have.'

"Of course that was a bluff. He smiled pleasantly, and went on into the cafe. There were several of his friends sitting by one of the tables and drinking. He joined them, and so did I. He sat there for an hour talking to all the fellows in the nicest sort of way, making everybody feel good, you know. I made up my mind that he was all right, till, all of a sudden, I tumbled. I saw what he was up to. It was good-bye with him, and he was giving every fellow a kind word to remember him by. From that time on I was rattled. I expected every second to see something happen, and I couldn't have told you whether I was drinking champagne or cold tea. The first thing I knew for certain, his eye was on me, and he was saying something about friendship. It was a toast. I raised the glass to my lips, but my hand shook so that I choked myself with the wine. I coughed and turned away. Then there was a crash and a cry. I started up, and there was Albert lying beside his chair, with the others round him. They said that he fell dead in an instant, and that he did not breathe after he touched the floor."

"And that's all you know about it," said Preble.

"That's all. Isn't it enough?"

"It's hardly worth the money."

Preble glanced at the billet doux from the bank which the other still held in his hand. Lawrence swore a round oath.

"Have you got all this out of me?" he demanded, "and now you're going back on your agreement?"

"Not at all but I shall want you to strengthen that story on the witness stand."

"What do you want me to say?"

Preble looked up at the ceiling for a moment. Then he said:

"Suppose we talk it over quietly in Grossman's back room?"

SKETCHES OF LINCOLN.

The Missing Bridegroom---Disappointed Bride.

THE UNTOUCHED WEDDING SUPPER.

Speed Takes Lincoln to His Home In Kentucky—His Correspondence With Speed Restored Spirits—Coldness With Mary Passing Away—Gaining Confidence.

[From "The Life of Lincoln" by William H. Herndon and Jesse W. Weik. Copyright, 1888, by Jesse W. Weik. Copyright, 1892, by D. Appleton & Co.]

XIII.

The time fixed for the marriage was the 1st day in January, 1841. Careful preparations for the happy occasion were made at the Edwards mansion. The house underwent the customary renovation, the furniture was properly arranged, the rooms neatly decorated, the supper prepared and the guests invited. The latter assembled on the evening in question and awaited in expectant pleasure the interesting ceremony of marriage. The bride, bedecked in veil and silken gown and nervously toying with the flowers in her hair, sat in the adjoining room. Nothing was lacking but the groom. For some strange reason he had been delayed. An hour passed, and the guests as well as the bride were becoming restless. But they were all doomed to disappointment. Another hour passed, messengers were sent out over town, and, each returning with the same report, it became apparent that Lincoln, the principal in this little drama, had purposely failed to appear! The bride, in grief, disappeared to her room, the wedding supper was left untouched, the guests quietly and wonderingly withdrew, the lights in the Edwards mansion were blown out, and darkness settled over all for the night. What the feelings of a lady as sensitive, passionate and proud as Miss Todd were we can only imagine—no one can ever describe them. By daybreak, after persistent search, Lincoln's friends found him. Restless, gloomy, miserable, desperate, he seemed an object of pity. His friends, Speed among the number, fearing a tragic termination, watched him closely in their rooms day and night.

"Knives and razors and all the instruments that could be used for self destruction were removed from his reach." Mrs. Edwards did not hesitate to regard him as insane, and of course her sister Mary shared in that view. But the case was hardly so desperate. His condition began to improve after a few weeks, and a letter written to his partner Stuart on the 23d of January, 1841, three weeks after the scene at Edwards' house, reveals more perfectly how he felt. He says: "I am now the most miserable man living. If what I feel were equally distributed to the whole human family, there would not be one cheerful face on earth. Whether I shall ever be better, I cannot tell. I awfully forebode I shall not. To remain as I am is impossible. I must die or be better, as it appears to me. I fear I shall be unable to attend to any business here, and a change of scene might help me. If I could be myself, I would rather remain at home with Judge Logan. I can write no more."

Taken to Kentucky.

During all this time the legislature to which Lincoln belonged was in special session, but for a time he was unable to attend. Toward the close of the session, however, he resumed his seat. He took little if any part in the proceedings, made no speeches and contented himself with answers to the monotonous roll call and votes on a few of the principal measures. After the adjournment of the legislature his warm friend Speed, who had disposed of his interests in Springfield, induced Lincoln to accompany him to Kentucky. Speed's parents lived in a magnificent place a few miles from Louisville. Their farm was well stocked, and they, in the current phrase, "lived well." Thither he was taken, and there amid the quiet surroundings he found the "change of scene" which he told Stuart might help him. He was living under the cloud of melancholia and sent to the Sangamon Journal a few lines under the gloomy title of "Suicide." They were published in the paper, and a few years since I hunted over the files, and coming across the number containing them was astonished to find that some one had cut them out. I have always supposed it was done by Lincoln or by some one at his instigation.

Speed's mother was much impressed with the tall and swarthy stranger her son had brought with him. She was a God fearing mother, and besides aiding to lighten his spirits gave him a Bible, advising him to read it and by adopting its precepts obtain a release from his troubles which no other agency, in her judgment, could bring him. "He was much depressed. At first he almost contemplated suicide." But the congenial associations at the Speed farm, the freedom from unpleasant reminders, the company of his stanch friend, and, above all, the motherly care and delicate attentions of Mrs. Speed, exerted a marked influence over him. He improved gradually, day by day gaining strength and confidence in himself, until at last the great cloud lifted and passed away. In the fall he and Speed returned to Springfield. At this point, as affording us the most reliable account of Mr. Lincoln's condition and views, it is proper to insert a portion of his correspondence with Mr. Speed. For some time Mr. Speed was reluctant to give these letters to the world. After some argument, however, he at last shared my view that they were properly a matter of history.

Lincoln as a Consoler.

The first of these letters is one he gave Speed when the latter started on his journey from Illinois to Kentucky. It bears no date, but was handed him Jan. 1, 1842, as Speed has testified in another letter to me that he left Springfield on that day. It is full of consolation and advice how best to conduct himself during the periods of gloom which it appears Speed himself had when he was courting his wife. "I know," he says, "what the painful point with you is at all times when you are unhappy. It is an apprehension that you do not love her as you should. What nonsense! How came you to court her? Did you court her for her wealth? Why, you say she had none. But you say you reasoned yourself into it. What do you mean by that? Was it not that you found yourself unable to reason yourself out of it? Did you not think, and partly form the purpose, of courting her the first time you ever saw her or heard of her? What had reason to do with it at that early stage? There was nothing at that time for reason to work upon. Whether she was moral, amiable, sensible, or even of good character, you did not nor could then know, except perhaps you might infer the last from the company you found her in. Say candidly, were not those heavenly black eyes the whole basis of all your reasoning on the subject? After you and I had once been at the residence, did you not go and take me all the way to Lexington and back for no other purpose but to get to see her again on our return on that evening to take a trip for that express object?"

The next paragraph is significant as affording us an idea of how the writer perhaps viewed Miss Todd's flirtation with Douglas: "What earthly consideration," he asks, "would you take to find her scouting and despising you and giving herself up to another? But of this you need have no apprehension, and therefore you cannot bring it home to your feelings."

Feb. 3 he writes again, acknowledging receipt of a letter dated Jan. 25. The object of Speed's affection had been ill, and her condition had greatly intensified his gloomy spirits. Lincoln proffers his sympathy. "I hope and believe," he continues, "that your present anxiety about her health and her life must and will forever banish those horrid doubts which I know you sometimes felt as to the truth of your affection for her. If they can once and forever be removed (and I almost feel a presentiment that the Almighty has sent your present affliction expressly for that object), surely nothing can come in their stead to fill their immeasurable measure of misery."

More Words of Comfort.

The next letter, Feb. 13, was written on the eve of Speed's marriage. After assurances of his desire to befriend him in everything he suggests: "But you will always hereafter be on ground that I have never occupied, and consequently, if advice were needed, I might advise wrong. I do fondly hope, however, that you will never again need any comfort from abroad. I incline to think it probable that your nerves will occasionally fail you for awhile, but once you get them firmly graded now that trouble is over forever. If you went through the ceremony calmly, or even with sufficient composure not to excite alarm in any present, you are safe beyond question, and in two or three months, to say the most, will be the happiest of men."

Meanwhile Lincoln had been duly informed of Speed's marriage, and on the 25th he responds: "Yours of the 16th, announcing that Miss Fanny and you are 'no more twain, but one flesh,' reached me this morning. I have no way of telling how much happiness I wish you both, though I believe you both can conceive it. I feel somewhat jealous of both of you now. You will be so exclusively concerned for one another that I shall be forgotten entirely. I shall be very lonesome without you. How miserably things seem to be arranged in this world! If we have no friends, we have no pleasure, and if we have them we are sure to lose them and be doubly pained by the loss."

Speed having now safely married, Lincoln's mind began to turn on things nearer home. His relations with Mary Todd were still strained, but reminders of his period of gloom the year before began now to bring her again into view. In a letter to Speed March 27 he says:

"It cannot be told how it thrills me with joy to hear you say you are 'far happier than you ever expected to be.' That much, I know, is enough. I know you too well to suppose your expectations were not at least sometimes extravagant, and if the reality exceeds them all I say, 'Enough, dear Lord.' I am not going beyond the truth when I tell you that the short space it took me to read your last letter gave me more pleasure than the total sum of all I have enjoyed since that fatal 1st of January, 1841. Since then it seems to me I should have been entirely happy but for the never absent idea that there is one still unhappy whom I have contributed to make so. That kills my soul. I cannot but reproach myself of even wishing to be happy while she is otherwise. She accompanied a large party on the railroad cars to Jacksonville last Monday and on her return spoke, so that I heard of it, of having enjoyed the trip exceedingly. God be praised for that!"

A Bit of Sentiment.

Meanwhile the coldness that existed between Lincoln and his "Mary" was gradually passing away, and with it went all of Lincoln's resolution never to renew the engagement. In a letter, July 4, he says: "I must gain confidence in my own ability to keep my resolves when they are made. In that ability I once prided myself as the only chief gem of my character. That gem I lost, how and where you know too well. I have not regained it, and until I do I cannot trust myself in any matter of much importance. I believe now that had you understood my case at the time as well as I understood yours afterward, by the aid you would have given me I should have sailed through clear, but that does not now afford me sufficient confidence to begin that or the like of that again. I always was superstitious. I believe God made me one of the instruments of bringing Fanny and you together, which union I have no doubt he had foreordained. Whatever he designs he will do for me yet. 'Stand still and see the salvation of the Lord,' is my text just now. If, as you say, you have told Fanny all, I should have no objection to her seeing this letter, but for its reference to our friend here let her seeing it depend upon whether she has ever known anything of my affairs, and if she has not do not let her. I do not think I can come to Kentucky this season. I am so poor and make so little headway in the world that I drop back in a month of idleness as much as I gain in a year's sowing."

The last letter, and the one which closes this series, was written Oct. 5, 1842. In it he simply announces his "duel with Shields," and then goes on to "narrate the particulars of the duelling business, which still rages in the city."

A Secondhand President.

No doubt Mr. Lincoln sufficiently appreciated the good qualities of ex-President Fillmore, then living, but a mention of him once brought out a shot at the vice presidential succession. Just after Taylor's death, when Fillmore succeeded him, Fillmore needed to buy a carriage. Some gentleman here was breaking up housekeeping and had one for sale, and Fillmore took Edward, the old doorkeeper of the White House, with him when he went to look at it. It seemed to be a pretty good turnout, but Fillmore looked it carefully over and then asked Edward, "How do you think it will do for the president of the United States to ride in a secondhand carriage?" "Sure, your excellency," replied Edward, 'you're only a secondhand president, you know.'"

He Was Well Disciplined.

One day a man making some improvements in Lincoln's yard suggested to Mrs. Lincoln the propriety of cutting down one of the trees, to which she willingly assented. Before doing so, however, the man came down to our office and consulted Lincoln himself about it. "What did Mrs. Lincoln say?" inquired the latter. "She consented to have it taken away." "Then, in God's name," exclaimed Lincoln, "cut it down to the roots!"

THE BATTLEFIELD PARKS.

The Recent Reunion at Shiloh of the Blue and Gray.

The great battle of Shiloh was fought on the westerly bank of the Tennessee, 220 miles from its mouth, at and near Pittsburg Landing. It was by far the bloodiest engagement of the civil war up to that time, the Union loss for the two days being, according to Col. Phisterer's figures, 1,735 killed and 7,882 wounded, beside 3,956 missing, making an aggregate of 13,573; while the official statement of the Confederate aggregate loss was 10,699.

It was a struggle, too, of dramatic incidents and shifting fortunes. Its central feature, the arrival of Buell's army at the end of the first day, when Grant's forces had been driven to the shelter of their gunboats and their artillery parked at the Landing, turned the whole tide of battle and left the field, with its final honors, on the day following, in Union hands.

It is not strange that this great combat of a generation ago, in the woods and across the rolling plateau around Shiloh Church, should hold undiminished, especially for its survivors, its peculiar interest. No such shock of arms had ever been known on this continent, and its very novelty kept it in most vivid remembrance even when still deadlier battles afterward came to be fought.

The recent friendly and fraternal meeting on this spot of those who wore the blue and the gray is made the more noteworthy because the battlefield is henceforth to be turned into a national military park under an act passed by the last Congress; and the soldiers on both sides are busily seeking out and marking the various lines they held in the struggle. The facility with which that act of Congress was passed, not an objection being made, if memory serves us, is itself suggestive. No doubt one great aid was the moderate price at which options for the purchase of the required land had been secured, contrasting with the greed shown in some similar projects. Still, since the West already had its great military park at Chickamauga, this additional one would hardly have been authorized but for possessing great interest.

One striking and characteristic feature of all the four battlefields whose historic marks, to a greater or less extent, Congress has arranged to preserve, is that their laurels were fairly divided between Northern and Southern soldiers. The story of Shiloh, in this respect, was duplicated at Chickamauga and Chattanooga, if we take these two battles as part of one campaign, just as their fields are now in one park. And certainly at Gettysburg and Antietam the glory of the final victory does not dim the glory of the skill and valor that made that triumph so hardly won.

GEN. LEE'S LAST YEARS.

He Was Never Seen to Smile After the War Ended.

"Gen. Lee never left Lexington after he assumed the presidency of the college," said S. D. McCormick recently. "He had distinguished visitors from North and South, and from Europe, and they still come to visit his tomb. Hundreds of invitations came to him to attend army reunions and the like, but he always courteously declined them. But every evening he would mount his horse and take an hour's ride. I have often met him at these times. He would always give the military salute. Sometimes he would rein in his horse and talk.

"His demeanor was always dignified and serious—indeed, sad. I never saw him smile. One could feel the very personality of Lee pervading the atmosphere around old Washington and Lee University. Every student was on his honor. Not one of them would lie. You have some idea what college boys are and what many of them will do. They will stop at nothing in their pranks. Yet students at that university have convicted themselves of pranks that caused their expulsion because they could not lie when brought face to face with Gen. Lee. He was absolutely a pure man, if ever one lived. He neither drank, chewed nor smoked, nor used vulgar language. He was a clean man.

"Washington was his idol. He patterned his life after that illustrious patriot."

This Boy Was Too Fresh.

A boy named Sweeney threw a large stone at a buggy that was passing along North avenue yesterday afternoon. It struck one of the iron rods, that holds the top, throwing it out of shape.

It Did the Business.

Mr. J. H. Cobb, publisher of the Mirror, at Brockton, N. Y., says: "For nearly two years the Mirror has been publishing the advertisements of Chamberlain's Remedies. A few days ago the writer was suffering from a bowel trouble and resorted to an old remedy which did not prove efficacious; finally he tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and two doses did the business, checking it completely. For sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy.

Agreeably Surprised.

"I had a very severe cold on my lungs that caused much soreness and gave me considerable uneasiness in regard to the result," says Mr. T. E. Smith, of Billerica, Mass. "A local druggist called my attention to Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and on his recommendation I gave the remedy a careful trial. The result surprised me; I recovered entirely in three days." 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy.

A Remarkable Cure of Rheumatism.

From the Groton Connecticut Review.—"David Lewis, who has been afflicted all winter by rheumatism, is out again and all due to one of the medicines advertised in our columns. After trying everything possible, he used Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which has relieved him of all pain, from which he was a constant sufferer and promises to make him fit for duty soon. We know David has been a great sufferer and are glad to see him around again." For sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy.

Mr. D. Wiley, ex-postmaster, Black Brook, N. C., was so badly afflicted with rheumatism that he was only able to hobble around with canes, and even then it caused him great pain. After using Chamberlain's Pain Balm he was so much improved that he threw away his canes. He says this liniment did him more good than all other medicine and treatment put together. For sale at 50 cents per bottle at Reynolds's Pharmacy.

Sir Knights Templar Attend Grace P. E. Church.

—Trinity Commandery, Knights Templar, and their visiting brethern from St. John's Commandery of Elizabeth, made a spectacular sight last night with their dark uniforms, set off with gold braid and glistening swords, together with the white plumed hats, as they marched through the streets from the station to the asylum and from there to Grace P. E. Church and return. The occasion was the celebration of Ascension Day by both the Knights and the church.

The members of Trinity Commandery congregated at the asylum in the Babcock Building at 7, and after donning their regalia, went to the North avenue station, preceded by Guttman's Band, where they welcomed 21 Elizabeth Knights.

At the church very impressive services were held. The surpliced choir, Rev. E. M. Rodman and the visiting clergyman met them at the entrance and escorted them down through the centre aisle to front seats, the choir singing "Onward Christian Soldiers."

After the opening religious exercises, Rev. Dr. Stockton of Orange, who is a Sir Knight, addressed them. His remarks were profound and interesting.

Mr. Stockton said that the occasion of the celebration of Ascension Day was one memorial in every thought of life, and that the history of the great organization which the Knights Templar represented was closely linked with the day commemorated for the crucifixion of Christ. He claimed for Masonry a permanent place in the sphere of Christian efforts, because they, with the church, had existed because of bowing to drink from the fountain of life with the testimony of the cross before them.

After the services the Knights were escorted back to their asylum, where they sat down to a sumptuous banquet. Remarks of a light and humorous character were made by Revs. Rodman and Stockton, and also by Eminent Commander Sir Knight Yates of St. John's Commandery.

MR. FROST'S REPLY.

Says Sewage Beds Are Not Being Built Through Newspapers.

Councilman Frost was seen at the North Avenue station this morning by a Press reporter and asked if he had anything to say in reply to the letter published in the Dunellen Call yesterday by P. W. Brakeley, President of the Borough, in which he charged Mr. Frost with broken promises in reference to the location of sewer beds.

"We are not building sewage beds through the newspapers, but are going to build them in the ground"—was the short and sensible reply of the councilman.

To Investigate Sewage Beds.

The City Councilmen who had arranged to go to Brockton and South Framingham Tuesday, but were detained on account of the weather, will probably make the trip Monday or Tuesday of next week.

An ambitious newspaper correspondent of South Framingham sent an article to the press association yesterday describing the trip of the above officials and told how Chairman Goodell of the Sewer Commissioners conducted them around.

Tangled In the Trolley Car.

A telephone wire in front of L. M. French's carriage factory broke last evening, and Car No. 3 of the street railway run into it when making a trip to the Watchung avenue terminus, and it became entangled in the car. OLD GLORY PRESENTED.

A Gift to North Plainfield School.

PATRIOTIC EVENT THIS MORNING.

Somerset Council, No. 109, J. O. U. A. M., the Donors—Rev. Mr. Randolph Made the Presentation—Received by President McCutchen—Programme Carried Out by the Pupils.

The presentation of a flag by Somset Council, No. 104, J. O. U. A. M., to the North Plainfield Board of Education to place this morning in the public school building.

A delegation consisting of Chairman Walter Walker, Dr. George Bedford, Frank Howland, E. GaNun and G. Mettler, from the Council were present. They were accompanied by Rev. Herbert Randolph, who made the presentation. He was introduced by Chairman Walker. Mr. Randolph made an exceedingly patriotic address that enthused the hearts of all present. He talked Americanism and said that those who had been born in this country should be proud of the fact. He had no condemnation for the foreigner who would come here and be a law abiding citizen, but when they seek to sap our very life-blood, it was time to call a halt. The boys and girls ought to be taught to develop a spirit of Nationalism. Mr. Randolph then presented the flag on behalf of Somerset Council. S. St. John McCutchen, president of the Board of Education, accepted it in few well-chosen words, thanking the donors for the beautiful gift. He said we are one nation, and covered by one flag, that flag alone should cover our school house. We are glad to see the interest manifested by our citizens. On behalf of the citizens of our Borough and the Board of Education I thank you for this beautiful gift.

An excellent programme of music and recitations followed the presentation.

A BROKEN SHOULDER.

A. G. Voegler Sustains Serious Injuries in a Runaway.

August G. Vogeler, proprietor of the Union Meat Market on West Front street, met with a serious accident yesterday that will keep him closely confined for some time. With one of his employes he drove to Dunellen to purchase a lot of chickens.

When he reached his destination he drove into the yard, and in attempting to turn around, the turn was made too short. The wagon was upset, and this frighted the horse, causing him to run away.

Mr. Vogeler was thrown out of the wagon against a tree. His man was also thrown out but not injured. The latter with help succeeded in capturing the horse, and as the wagon was not damaged, he was able to bring Mr. Vogeler home.

Dr. Probasco was sent for, and learned that the collar-bone was broken, but was not able to ascertain whether there were any internal injuries. An examination will be made today by Dr. Probasco.

Things Are Different Now.

The officers all being new ones, except Officer Lines, Borough Counsel Reed told them their duties, and informed them that they had no right to arrest anyone outside the borough limits, without a properly approved warrant. New rules will be drawn up by the committee, and all visitors will hereafter be refused admittance to the station house late at night. Special Marshal Taynor, who appeared before the committee to be sworn in, said he would not go on duty for only an hour or two Saturday nights, was informed by Mayor Hegeman that the committee was not there to be dictated to. Mr. Taynor left the rooms, and later in the evening the committee concluded to put him on duty Saturday evenings from 8 to 1, and he was then sworn in. The officers were there for an hour, and the committee remained in session for some time after their departure. New badges and a few additional night-sticks were ordered for the officers. WATSON'S APPEAL DISMISSED.

The City's Motion Granted on Technical Grounds.

The Common Pleas Court yesterday at Elizabeth granted the motion of Corporation Counsel Marsh to dismiss the appeal taken by Michael Watson from his last conviction for illegal liquor selling. Watson's sentence was one hundred dollars fine and fifty-nine days in jail. He took an appeal but neglected to pay the County Clerk's fees on filing the papers until the day the case was moved for trial. The City claimed that the appeal had never been perfected and it was then too late to perfect it. The Court heard argument of respective counsel several weeks ago and has just decided in favor of the City as above stated. The City may consent to have a trial on the merits on the ground that Watson's neglect was due to unavoidable illness.

The Cadets Drilling.

The North Plainfield Cadet Corps met last evening and B. S. Braider gave them an excellent drill. The boys take considerable interest in the drills and they are anxious to reach proficiency.

T. A. B. ANNIVERSARY.

The Society Has Been Doing Good for Twenty-three Years.

The Total Abstinence Benevolent Society of St. Mary's R. C. Church celebrated its twenty-third anniversary last evening in their hall on West Fourth street. It was expected that Rev. Father Morris, who was the founder of the society would be present and make the address of the evening, but he sent word that owing to important matters he would be unable to come.

A financial statement for the last three years was read by the president of the society showing it to be in a healthy and flourishing condition.

Rev. Father Murphy was present and took the place of Rev. Father Morris. He gave those present an excellent talk and the members received much encouragement by his helpful words. The society has 48 members and the officers are:

President—P. J. Reville; Vice-president—John Hickey; Corresponding-secretary—P. J. Mack; Treasurer—D. J. Keefe; Financial-secretary—Charles McCarthy.

The committee who arranged last night's affair, and the women who assisted, are as follows: Morris Higgins, chairman; Patrick McDonough, Patrick Carty, Patrick Reville, Dennis Keefe, John Hickey, Misses Anna Higgins, Mamie McCue, Maggie Hickey, Nellie Hickey, Katy McDonough.

Dancing was a feature of the evening for which Eugene O'Reilly furnished the music. An excellent collation was served during the festivities.

FORWARD, MARCH!

Mt. Olive Women Can Carry Guns and Are Ready to Fight.

The Woman's State and Local Missionary Socley of the Mt. Olive Baptist Church gave a musical and literary entertainment and military drill in Central Hall last evening, which was a great success.

The attendance was very large, and everyone had a glorious time. Select readings and recitations were given by Miss Harriet Jackson, Miss Mary Hudless, Miss Bettie Brown, and a vocal solo by Frank Brown.

Then came the military drill under command of Nelson Batts. There were 18 soldiers in line, all women, carrying small guns, and the way in which they executed the many difficult movements would have made a National Guard soldier envious. The drill was arranged by Mrs. P. H. Brown, president of the society, and who has lately moved here from Pittsburg, where she had charge of 500 women in a similar work.

She described the drill in a most effective manner and said she thought it was about time that women were learning to handle a gun, as men had been to war once and if called again they probably would shirk from duty. She thought the women of the nineteenth century should be up and doing. The following committee had charge of the affair: Mrs. P. H. Brown, chairman; Mrs. Martha Rogers, Mrs. Clara Johnson, Miss Fanny Scott, Miss Lulu Scott and Miss Jennie Pembleton.

A large sum of money was realized and the society are congratulating themselves on their success socially and financially.

TALENTED SCHOLARS.

Miss Jackson's Pupils Display Perfect Training.

A BRILLIANT AUDIENCE PRESENT.

The Students in Physical Culture and Rendering Give a Delightful Entertainment in the Y. M. C. A. Hall, Which Is Received With the Utmost Favor By the Large Assemblage of Guests.

That Plainfield has her full share of talented young women was abundantly shown last night at the recital of Miss Addie Parker Jackson's classes in physical culture and rendering held in the pretty little hall in the Y.M C.A. building. The hall was crowded to its fullest capacity with an interested audience who manifested their appreciation by hearty applause and offerings of flowers to nearly every participant.

The programme commenced with a physical culture drill by the following: Misses Katharine Dwight, Amy Emmons, Emma Fish, Mandane Hyde, Mary Hull, Mary Luckey, Elizabeth Fish, Marie Newman, Grace Overton, May Pamalee, Lucy Pound, Edna Smith, Alice Thompson, Master Clarence Mills. Miss Helen Hasbrouck acted as accompanist.

The graceful motions of the young women in their light blue costumes formed a rare and beautiful sight, and during their occupancy of the stage it presented a veritable symphony in blue, while Miss Hasbrouck's delicate accompaniment added greatly to the pleasing effect.

After the vigorous applause had died away Miss Mary A. Luckey gave the recitation "Brier Rose", and charmingly told the story of the girl who, though scorned by all, at last saved the lives of her townspeople at the expense of her own. Miss Luckey kept the attention of her listeners constantly, and her tender pathos brought tears to the eyes of many.

"The Raggedy Man" was next given by Miss Edna Smith, whose simple and blithe way took the audience by storm.

That touching little selection "The Clown's Baby", was rendered by Miss Lucy Pound in a most admirable manner. Miss Elizabeth Fish, in "The Jealous Wife" displayed her talent to its best advantage. The mixture of jealousy and trust, of honor and love, was finely portrayed, while her imitation of the French chemist seemed perfect.

A short sketch, "A Sisterly Scheme", was Miss Mary S. Hull's share on the programme, and greatly was it enjoyed by all; the love-sick young man, the would-be flirt, and the anxious sister were all strikingly realistic, and showed the result of Miss Jackson's careful training.

The second part of the programme opened with the recitation "Old Ace" by Miss Grace E. Overton, and splendidly did she render it, putting her soul into the spirit of the piece. Her hearers listened excitedly to her description of the race, so real did it seem, and when she finished they felt like cheering for the other Grace, the heroine of the poem also, while the continued applause demonstrated their thorough appreciation of it.

Dainty little Miss Amy Emmons in "Little Gustava" also displayed the great advantage of Miss Jackson's system.

Miss Marie L. Newman in "Mammy's Lil' Baby Boy" gave a most difficult recitation in an apparently easy manner, assuming the role of the colored "mammy" without trouble and in a very pleasing manner.

"Little Christel", the story of the child and king, was charmingly told by Miss May Pamalee.

Miss Katherine Dwight captured the hearts of the audience in her rendering of "The Marriage of the Flowers", while her graceful motions and sweet voice made her seem sweeter than any of the flowers of which she told.

Master Clarence Mills as "Jerry" delighted and amused all by his newsboy language and manners, and displayed his courage and gallantry in a most natural manner.

A one-act farce, "Six Cups of Chocolate," ended the evening's pleasure. The dramatis personæ was:

Miss Adeline von Linden, German Girl.
Miss Overton

Miss Marion Lee, Southern girl.
Miss Hull

Miss Dorothy Green, New Englander.
Miss Luckey

Miss Hester Beacon, Bostonian.
Miss Pound

Miss Beatrix von Kortlandt, New Yorker.
Miss Newman

Miss Jeannette Durand, French girl.
Miss Fish

The scene was laid in the parlor of Miss Adeline von Linden, and here Miss Overton had a chance to display her talent in another direction. Her representation of the love-sick girl showed her an amateur actor of no mean ability. The plot was a simple one. Miss von Linden is to entertain five friends and while waiting for them reads a letter she has just received from an apparently smitten Princeton College student. Her friends arrive and after the usual quarrrels all declare they are in love and all say that they have received letters. Miss Durand then reads her letter and the others soon realize that all are the same and their passionate lovers are the same man. Here the ability of the actors was shown plainly in their manner of receiving the sad news. Miss Luckey stamps her foot and declares she will be even with him. Miss Hull is pensively sad, while Miss Overton is apparently overcome at the sudden revelation. Miss Luckey's suggestions are listened to and a letter is written to the deceiving young man, signed by all, and just as it is finished and the necessary postscript added, the student is seen from the window and the girls make a hurried retreat to deliver it.

The parts were all taken in a manner that left nothing to be desired. Miss Fish appeared in her element as the French girl and Miss Newman sailed about like a perfect New Yorker. Miss Pound, the Bostonian, was quiet and dignified, as became her character, but her neighbor, Miss Luckey, the New England girl, was entergetic as could be required. The pensive Southern girl, Miss Hull, and the bright but emotional German girl, Miss Overton, did all that could be wished.

After heartily applauding the work of the young women, the large audience slowly made their way out.

Charles Steiner acted as doorkeeper. The ushers were: Raymond A. McGee, John W. Kirkner, Charles B. Morse, Charles Noble and Lambert H. Fish.

Too much cannot be said in praise of Miss Jackson by whom the entire programme was arranged and carried out, and Plainfield should be congratulated on possessing a young woman of such rare ability and energy.

East Lynne Tonight.

John A. Preston's Howard Stock Company presented the Silver Ledge last evening in an admirable manner. Mr. Sullivan as James Clarkson and Mr. Preston as Jack Martin were a decided improvement over the former presentation here. Tonight a superb presentation of East Lynne is promised. The excellent work of this company during the week is a guarantee of a first-class production. The seats are going fast.

Good Time for the Choral.

The meeting of the Choral Society, Monday evening next at Vincent Chapel, promises to be of more than ordinary interest. In addition to the business to be transacted, a very delightful programme has been prepared, a part of which will be both novel as well as interesting. It is expected that nothing short of sickness or absence from the city will prevent a full attendance of the members. The programme is to commence promptly at 8.

Alexander Prentiss's Condition.

Wm. N. Pangborn has received a letter from Medical Director John U. Mair of the New Jersey State Hospital at Trenton, in which he says that the condition of Alexander Prentiss of North Plainfield, who was admitted to the institution a year ago, remains unchanged. He says he has but little strength of mind or memory, and is at all times quiet and orderly.

Sewer Work.

Honan & Sons are making excellent progress and doing good work with their sewer contract, with the exception of a delay in organizing their back filling and clearing up gang. They are waiting for some horses from Pennsylvania, and may be necessary to hold them back on their work until they clear up what they have started.

A Serious Hurt.

John Beatty, an employe of Levi Bird, was severely injured yesterday while carting logs. He was lifting them from a wagon when one of them fell on his leg. It is feared that the limb is fractured. Dr. D. C. Adams is in attendance.

The Festival Closed.

The festival given by the Rosary Society of St. Joseph's Church in the Saengerbund Hall was largely attended last evening, and the society will realize a handsome sum from it.

Will Escape the Forfeits.

It is expected to have the sewer work completed as far as Watchung avenue by Saturday thus filling the contract between the city and the firm of which Mr. Prout is manager.

WHEAT STILL BOOMING

Great Excitement on the Chicago Exchange.

The Buying Craze Unabsted—Only Brave Men Who Dared To Sell—Dollar Wheat Predicted—"Old Hutch" Says Wheat Is Not Worth Eighty Cents.

Chicago, May 24.—The opening of the wheat market yesterday witnessed the greatest excitement that has been experienced since the recent advance began. The failure of J. C. Schwartz, a trader of plunging proclivities, served to intensify the excitement which was great enough in all reason, without an incident of any sort. Though Schwartz's liabilities were estimated at less than $75,000, his interests were scattered around in such a way as to unsettle the equanimity of a large number of persons. While a number of brokers were hard at work buying in Schwartz's short wheat a veritable host of other brokers and commission men were hard at work buying more wheat for the hungry outsiders. The capacious maw of the general public was wide open and insatiable. Naturally the competition in the wheat pit was intense, and attending excitement hard to estimate.

Sellers Were Brave Men.

It was a brave man who dared to stand up before the great horde of advancing buyers and sell short. In fact, the latter industry seems to have been relegated to the past. As for the man who sold wheat which he already had, there were a dozen to take up his load and speedily make him regret selling it by unding the price up later. The extent of the advance from the low point of a few short weeks ago was thirty cents, enough certainly to discount a great deal of the crop damage. To add to the furore cables reported a tremendous advance in prices abroad. Flour in Glasgow was quoted at equal to 22 1-2c. per bushel for wheat higher that it was a week ago. Most of the advance came Wednesday and yesterday. Liverpool also made a convulsive advance, going up nearly 6 cents per bushel on wheat.

Schwartz's Action Denounced.

Much feeling was engendered in the trade by Schwart's actions. He notified everybody that he would put up margins, and after personally selling calls Wednesday night was in the pit yesterday morning in person. His own firm's clearing sheet went through the clearing house all right, but those who had open deals with him could not get their money and bought in his wheat in the market. July opened at 80c. to 81c., against 77 1-4c. at Wednesday's close, then sold at 79 5-8c., and later up to 82c., then to 81c. again, all before noon. It was roughly estimated that Schwartz's short interest in wheat was 500,000 bushels.

Corn, Oats and Provisions.

Corn was influenced greatly by wheat, but the advance brought in a host of country selling orders. Receipts of cash grain were enormous. Oats opend wildly excited because of the wheat excitement, and the inquiries for cash grain from New York, but the high prices were made in the first five minutes. Provisions were extremely dull. Receipts of hogs here and elsewhere were enormous, and only the strength in grains prevented a bad break.

Talk of Dollar Wheat.

Just before the close the position of the exultant, fortune-making bulls was strengthened by the change of front on the part of two big traders, Linn and John Cudahy. They were among those who resisted the advance most stubbornly. It is generally admitted that they are now both long in wheat. The accession of two such active bears to the bull ranks has added to the enthusiastic talk of dollar wheat before the end of the month.

Old Hutch on the Situation.

B. P. Hutchinson, who is still called "Old Hutch" by the men in the wheat pit, which he has forsaken for the restaurant business, said to-day: "I don't believe them when they talk all this stuff about injured crops. The frost has not hurt the wheat and I do not believe there is any shortage in the country. I would not give 80 cents for wheat. It is not worth it. The price will fall."

L. A. W. Bulletin.

As the income derived from sanction fees is so far insufficient to provide for one official referee to follow the national circuit, it has been decided by the board that an official referee may be appointed for each circuit meet.

Washington, May 24.—Louis A. Bagger, consul of Denmark, Sweden and Norway in Washington and a prominent and successful patent attorney of this city, was found dead in his bed at Ocean Grove, N. J., yesterday. Mr. Bagger had gone to Ocean Grove for the benefit of his health and reached there Wednesday night. Mr. Bagger was born in Copenhagen in 1844 and came to America when twenty years old. After a year of newspaper work in New York he came to Washington and was city editor, and subsequently managing editor, of the Patriot, a daily newspaper. Through extreme friendship for W. W. Corcoran, the millionaire, he was led to challenge Alexander H. Shepherd, governor of the District of Columbia, to a duel, but nothing came of it. Mr. Bagger went into the patent business. He was decorated by the king of Denmark a few years ago.

LAWN TENNIS AT BALTIMORE.

To-day's Games Will Be a Contest Between North and South.

Baltimore, May 24.—After two day's delay the ninth annual tournament for the lawn tennis championship of the southern states was begun on the pretty courts of the Cantonville Country club. All of the contestants were required to play two matches and the number was reduced from sixteen to four. The semi-final matches will take place this afternoon and the doubles will begin immediately after. There are six teams entered in the doubles and it is hoped to reduce both events to the finals by this evening. The finals of both events are scheduled for to-morrow. In the matches yesterday, Post and Davidson, of the south, won both of their matches, as did also Parot and Hobart from New York. To-day's games, therefore, will be north against south, for Davidson will meet Parot and Post will be opposed by Hobart.

WARSHIP FOR ECUADOR.

The Situation so Serious the Washington Government Acts.

Guayaquil is situated on the Guayaquil river and the Ranger will be obliged to proceed about a hundred miles up that stream to reach the port, which has cable connection with the United States.

FROSTS AND THE WHEAT CROP.

The Young Plants Not Ruined in the Northwest.

St. Paul, Minn., May 24.—Reports from the great wheat belt of North Dakota, in the Red River valley, are to the effect that although the frosts of the last week have been very severe, they have not ruined the young plants. The farmers say that in spite of the bad appearance of wheat it will quickly recover, and with warm rains will not be backward more than a week because of the cold snap. In South Dakota wheat is all right. In western Minnesota the damage was mainly to flax and corn, which are just peeping out of the ground. Many fields of corn will have to be replanted.

ENGLAND TO BLAME.

If Europe Is Invaded with Cholera, Says Sir Adrian Proust.

Paris, May 24.—The Eclair publishes a report of an interview with Sir Adrian Proust, a member of the Academy of Medicine and chief secretary of the sanitary service, on the subject of cholera among Mecca pilgrims, in which the doctor severely condemns England for not applying the decisions of the international conference in regard to precautionary measures. OUR SHIPS AT KIEL

Will Be Third in the List as to Tonnage

And Can Easily Claim the Championship in the Matter of Speed. Only Those of Great Britain Will Be Larger—It Will Be a Grand Demonstration.

Washington, May 24.—Lieut. Singer, in charge of the office of naval intelligence, has prepared a list of the war vessels which will participate in the great celebration at Kiel next month, based on information received up to date. The list will probably be subjected to little change, although it is not unlikely England will add a vessel or two to her fleet of eight ships in order that she may not be exceeded in their number by Italy, which will send nine.

Ships To Participate.

Forty-five ships are included in the list exclusive of those of Germany, the number of whose representation is not given. Italy leads in point of strength with nine, and is followed in order by England with eight, the United States and Austria, four each; France, Russia, Spain and Sweden, three each; Denmark, Norway and Roumania, two each, and Portugal and Turkey, one each.

We Can Outspeed Them All.

This naval demonstration promises to eclipse anything of a like nature ever witnessed in Europe. The United States, with the armored cruiser New York and the cruisers Minneapolis, Columbia and Marblehead, aggregating 25,039 tons, ranking third in the list, can easily claim the championship in point of speed, for no foreign ship comes near the peerless Minneapolis, with her record of 23.073 knots.

It is said that evidence has been discovered showing that Bokuyeika, who was recently appointed acting prime minister of Corea, has formed an alliance with the Russian minister at Seoul. Count Inouye, the Japanese minister to Corea, has returned to Japan.

VICTORIA'S BIRTHDAY.

Great Britain's Queen Reaches Her Seventy-Sixth Anniversary.

New York, May 24.—All the loyal sons of St. George will to-day honor the seventy-sixth anniversary of the birth of Victoria, queen of Great Britain and Ireland and empress of India. At every British naval station, at every consulate, wherever the flag of England flies, whever Britons' hearts beat, toasts will be drunk to the health of her majesty. In this country there will be a grand celebration in Boston. Victoria has reigned fifty-eight years, a period exceeded only by the sixty-year reign of George III.

ALL AT SEA

But Finally Rescued from Danger. Result of Taking a Friend's Advice.

There are thousands of women to-day entirely at sea, so to speak, as far as their ailments are concerned.

They are overtaken by some female complaint, and send for their doctor in all haste. He usually tries this and that without success; he is all at sea, and his poor patient is with him.

Suddenly

a lady friend tells the sufferer to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound because it has cured her.

The following letter shows the result of that trial, and is a sample of thousands of similar cases happening daily.

"I had been very sick for a long time; doctored with many prominent physicians. They pronounced my case dyspepsia, and said there was a tendency to cancer of the womb. There was a sense of fulness and weight in stomach after meals, loss of appetite, and offensive belching of wind, dizziness, 'all gone' feeling in pit of the stomach; headache, heartburn, palpitation at times, urine high colored. A lack of interest in all things.

"The doctor's medicines gave me but little relief. I was almost in despair, when a friend advised your Compound. I took it, and am now perfectly well. I can recommend it to all women. A number of my friends and neighbors have taken it on my recommendation, and have always found relief." — Mrs. JAMES CRANKSHAW, Frankford, Pa.

AVENGED HIS SISTER

Sol Mann Shot by Loretta Hannigan's Brother.

Taken to a Hospital in a Dying Condition—The Tragedy Enacted on a Crowded Thoroughfare in New York City—Another Chapter in a Sad Affair.

New York, May 24.—David F. Hannigan, a plumber 32 years of age, attempted to take justice into his own hands last evening and avenge his sister's death by shooting her alleged betrayer, Solomon H. Mann, the manager of a ladies' tailoring establishment on Fifth avenue. The shooting occurred on West Forty-second street near Fifth avenue, in front of a building undergoing repairs. There, at a few minutes after 6 o'clock, when th at avenue is crowded with people returning from their work, Hannigan stepped up behind Mann, who was walking towards Sixth avenue, tapped him on the shoulder, and as Mann turned, raised his pistol and fired.

Narrowly Missed Passers By.

The ball went wide of its mark and narrowly missed several persons coming toward the two men. Hannigan fired the second shot, the bullet striking Mann in the right temple. The latter fell to the sidewalk with his head toward the street. Hannigan gazed at his victim a second and was about to fire a third time when a by-stander wrenched the pistol from his hand and he was turned over to a policeman. Mann was removed to Flower hospital in a dying condition.

The Tragedy Not Unexpected.

It will be recalled that Loretta Hannigan, sister of the man who did the shooting last night, died in the early part of last April, and Mann is now under indictment for betraying the girl. The tragedy last night was not altogether unexpected by Hannigan's friends, who have heard him swear revenge a number of times in the last few weeks.

Second Attempt on Mann.

This is Hannigan's second attempt to take Mann's life. The first attempt occurred at the bedside of his dying sister. The dead girl made an ante-mortem statement, taken by Coroner Hoeber, in which she accused Mann. Two days after taking the ante-mortem, Mann was taken to the Hannigan home, he having been placed under arrest several days previous, for the purpose of identification. The sick girl was raised up in bed and when asked if there was any person in the room whom she knew that had wronged her, she raised a trembling finger to Mann and feebly said: "Yes, that man, Solomon H Mann."

Death of Loretta Hannigan.

At this juncture the rear door of the room flew open and "Dave," Hannigan, as he is called, burst into the room revolver in hand, and exclaimed: "Let me get at him. I will fill him full of holes." The officers and others in the room, however, rushed forward and unarmed the infuriated brother before he had time to carry out his purpose. Miss Loretta Hannigan, the sick girl, in the meantime had fainted, and died shortly after.

The police department and the safe firm, who furnished the impromptu burglar, will be proceeded against, as it is claimed the warrant is defective.

THE DEATH OF MARTI.

Official Confirmation of the News Received at Washington.

Washington, May 24.—Official confirmation has been received here of the death of Gen. Marti, the Cuban leader, in a battle with the government troops. Marti's death is regarded as the most important event since Gen. Campos began his campaign. The other Cuban leaders, Gomez, Maceo, and Borrero, were known only by name in this country, but Marti is personally known throughout the United States, as he has long served as president of the Cuban party in this country. He has passed much of his time in Washington, his last service here being as a delagate to the Pan-American Monetary conference. The papers found on Marti are expected to result in important developments, as he was in personal correspondence with sympathizers in the United States who have thus far eluded detection.

A SERVICE PENSION DECISION.

Nothing for Soldiers Who Enlisted After Hostilities Ceased.

Washington, May 24.—A decision of considerable importance has been made by Assistant Secretary Reynolds, of the interior department, in the pension case of John Barleyoung, late of Company E, Thirteenth United States infantry. Barleyoung served from April 19, 1866, to April 19, 1869, and claimed a service pension on the ground that the war did not end until the issuance of President Johnson's proclamation on August 20, 1866, declaring it at an end. The asisstant secretary holds that the actual termination of hostilities was in July, 1865, and says that it is not believed that congress intended to pension those whose rendition of service, military or naval, had no connection whatever with the belligerent operations of the war.

ENGLAND BUYS OUR NAILS.

A Manchester Manufacturer's Tribute to American Products.

Pittsburg, May 24.—Herbert A. Johnston, a wire manufacturer of Manchester, England, is here examining improved machinery for the manufacture of nails. To-day he said: "Tariff or no tariff, it is a fact that American nails are underselling us in our own markets. Many English purchasers prefer the American article in quality. American tin plate is selling alongside the British article in the world's markets. I cannot see why this country should be afraid of any nation in its metal manufactures. I have read much about the financial depression in this country, but I have not been able to detect many signs of it."

WILL FOSTER SUCCEED LI?

Report That the Emporer May Put Chinese Affairs in His Hands.

Washington, May 24.—John W. Foster, who assisted Li Hung Chang in the peace negotiations between China and Japan, has apparently made a favorable impression upon the diplomats of the east. A letter written by one of them to a friend in this city says: "I note with much pleasure the feeling entertained throughout the east for Mr. Foster. He is regarded by everybody over here as the ablest diplomat the United States could furnish. I think if Mr. Foster would accept, the Chinese government would give him a post at Pekin that would virtually place the control of their affairs in his hands."

MRS. BAYARD ENTERTAINS.

The deposits of the savings bank are $650,000.

No Nuns in Texas Public Schools.

Austin, Tex., May 24.—The state department of education, on appeal from Victoria county, has ruled that nuns cannot teach in the public schools of Texas, and that everything of a sectarian nature must be absolutely eliminated. Catholic nuns have been conducting free schools in southwestern Texas, and this puts an end to it.

NO FIGHT OVER BRIGGS

The Assembly Will Not Attempt To Depose Him.

Not a Question of Duty, But Merely A Matter of Policy, of Expediency. Many Influences at Work To Modify the Asperity of the Ultra-Conservatives.

Pittsburg, May 24.—The many influences that are at work in the Presbyterian general assembly to modify the asperity of the ultra-conservatives have had their effect again in respect to the important measures. Wednesday it was the foreign mission enthusiasm that checked the movement against the Briggs men in the Foreign board. The day before it was the presence of John Hall that saved his liberal associates in the Home board. Yesterday it was the ex-moderators, who are here in unusual numbers. They sat in a circle around Moderator Booth last night at the great commemorative service in the Assembly church. They dined with Moderator Booth an hour before in one of the parlors of the Monongahela house. They chatted together in the corriders of the hotel at sundown.

Hard To Escape This Influence.

Moderate Booth was at the focus of the reunion of ex-moderators and it would be strange indeed if he should escape altogether the composite influence of twelve venerable fathers of the church whose days of ecclesiastical strife and doctrinal contentions are over. Entrance into the charged circle of ex-moderatorship seems to be through the gateway of peace. One notable exception to this is the case of ex-Moderator Young, whose hand swung the chariot through its course at Portland, where the inerrancy deliverance was evolved. But ex-Moderator Young was not here and the influence of peace and forgiveness is supreme.

Briggs Is Probably Safe.

It was in the hearts of the conservative leaders at the outset of this assembly to accomplish the complete humiliation of Dr. Briggs. The sentence passed upon the condemned professor by the Washington assembly, was suspension from the ministry. Suspension from the ministry continues indefinitely unless the suspended minister shows contumacy or unless he recants and asks to be restored. Dr. Briggs has never shown any disposition to recant and it is said that a clear case of contumacy has been prepared against him. Yet the conservative majority which seems to be all powerful in this assembly will do nothing to bring about the deposition of Dr. Briggs. It may be said that this has been definitely decided upon.

A Blow at Union Seminary.

Yesterday the assembly struck its severest blow at Union seminary by placing upon its students a boycott that cuts them off entirely from the regular avenue of admission to the Presbyterian ministry. They acccomplished this without debate and almost without opposition, although it was well-known for several days that such was to be the business of yesterday. But there will be no attempt to depose the professor who has brought the assembly and its favorite seminary to these straits. The argument of those who have brought the leaders to this conclusion is not a question of the duty of the Presbyterian church in the premises but merely a question of policy, of expediency.

Why Briggs Is Not Deposed.

"Why should we attempt to punish Dr. Briggs," say they, "for his contumacy by deposition. We might fail to carry the resolution through the assembly, and failure in such an attempt would be more dreadful than the continued presence of a contumacious minister. Moreover," they continue, "Dr. Briggs is now under suspension and as a suspended minister of the church he remains at our mercy. We can bring deposition proceedings any day. Whereas, were we to depose him to-day, to-morrow he would be a free man. His course would be to apply for admission to a Congregational body. The average Congregational body not being particularly squeamish on questions of Presbyterian polity, the doors to the active ministry would be opened to him.

Could Easily Get Back.

"Once in the ranks of Congregational ministry, in good and regular standing, the passage back to the Presbyterian ministry would be easy. Dr. Briggs would simply make application to some friendly presbtery, and on account of his standing in a Congregational body, nothing but a majority vote of its own membership could prevent that presbytery receiving him and restoring him to all his rights and privileges as a Presbyterian minister."

Raynor Out of the Race.

Baltimore, May 24.—Ex-Congressman Isidor Raynor has withdrawn from the race for the democratic nomination for governor of Maryland, and says he will not again enter the political arena. Many of the democratic party managers have opposed Raynor's candidacy and his determination to give up the struggle is regarded as a distinctive victory for Senator Gorman and his friends.

Restored to Duty.

Washington, May 24.—The secretary of the navy has restored to duty Lieut. C. S. Norton and Lieut. W. P. Elliott who were sentenced to six months suspension for negligence, resulting in the grounding of the United States ship Adams in Behring sea last year. The period of suspension has nearly expired.

Michigan's Anti-Treating Law.

Lansing, Mich., May 24.—The house passed by a vote of 75 to 17, and gave immediate effect to the Waite "anti-treating" bill. It prohibits the purchase of spirituous, malt brewed, fermented, or vinous liquors for another by the drink, and the sale thereof to a person to be given to another as a treat.

TOWN AND HOME FAVORITE.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., MAY 24, 1895.

Plainfield is going to build sewage beds for Plainfield sewage. They are not for Dunellen sewage.

In Elizabeth a Board of Trade has just been organized to boom the town. In Plainfield a Board of Trade is dying a death that comes from inocuous desuetude.

Clinton Democrat:—The Plainfield Daily Press, a bright, clean, newsy afternoon paper, celebrated its eighth birthday last Friday by appearing in a new dress. The Press is up-to date in all matters of public interest.

The Dunellen Call advises Plainfield citizens who are opposed to sewage beds to hold mass meetings, and protest against the adoption of the ordinance giving the Council the requisite powers. The proper place for objections from Plainfield people is at the Councilmanic hearing, as suggested in these columns yesterday. Mass meetings are too much on the bullying order.

In a letter published in the Dunellen Call yesterday P. W. Brakely, President of the Borough, accuses Councilman Frost with having broken an agreement with him, viz.: That Mr. Frost told him last Fall that the Sewer Committee did not want to purchase property west of Rock avenue for sewage disposal for various reasons; but that they have gone right ahead and did this by securing the Mutual Insurance Company land. This makes Mr. Brakely very indignant, and he severely criticises the proposed location of the sewage beds. He concludes by comparing Plainfield with a dirty bird that fouls its own nest, when they put the beds within the city limits.

Jumped the Track.

As car No. 6 was making a turn at the curve, corner of Front and Somerset streets, this morning about 10:30, going east, the wheels struck some crushed stone lying in the groove of the rails, throwing the car off the track. By reversing the car they were able to get it back on the track without much difficulty.

A Broken Wheel.

A heavily loaded stone wagon in attempting to pull off the car track on Somerset street, near Front street, this afternoon about 1, broke one of the hind wheels of the wagon, and the driver was compelled to dump the whole load in order to let Car No. 3 go by.

Byrnes and Williams to Retire.

At a meeting of the New York city Police Board this morning it was decided to retire Supt. Byrnes and Inspector Williams.

An Independent Barber.

The story is vouched for as an actual fact by the man to whom the incident happened.

While traveling in Europe he stopped over night at Caen, and noting that his hair was unduly long he went to have it cut by the local barber. He told the barber to take off very little, but before the barber had been at work many seconds he noticed a favorite lock fall on the calico jacket in which he had been arrayed. Whereupon he reproved the barber for not following his instructions, upon which the man observed in mingled tones of reproach and dismay:

"Monsieur must permit me to do my work in the way which seems best to me; and, what is more, I shall take off some more."

"Not at all," said the traveler; "I tell you I want very little taken off, and must insist upon your doing as I direct you."

The barber was not to be put down in this way and said:

"Monsieur, it is possible that this is how things may be done in England, but here in France we are not slaves. I shall cut off as much as I please."—Harper's Round Table.

Too Hard to Learn.

"I'm a good deal worried about my son," said Mr. Whykins. "He doesn't seem to know the value of a dollar."

"Well," replied the man who was puzzled over finance, "if it's a silver dollar that he doesn't know the value of I don't see how you can blame him much."—Washington Star.

And She Did Eat.

"Daughter of Eve," quoth the young man, "will you accept an apple?"

"History repeats itself, Mr. Spoonamore," replied Miss Kajones, looking curiously and inquiringly at his feet. "I will."—Chicago Tribune.

SKIN GRAFTING A FAD

A LITTLE BOY'S PATRIOTISM CAUSED THE LOSS OF MUCH CUTICLE.

Society Girls and Business Men, Little Children and School Teachers of Montclair all Contribute a Piece to the Patchwork.

There is a little boy in Montclair, N. J., who had such a jolly Fourth of July celebration last year that he hasn't got over it yet. He nearly burned himself up with firecrackers and the wounds wouldn't heal.

The only thing the doctors could do for the little boy was to try skin grafting—that is, picking out nice, clean, fresh little bits of skin from people's arms and getting it to grow on the sore places. And ever since last Fourth of July the doctors have been doing this. It seems wonderful to relate that they have skin grafted no less than 11,000 little pieces of skin on him, and it will take 5,000 more to entirely heal the burns.

This little boy's name is Freddy Griffith, and he lives at No. 87 Forest street. His father, Mahlon Griffith, isn't a rich man. Freddy is twelve years old.

Like a good little, patriotic boy, he spent the glorious Fourth last year setting off fireworks, but he saved his choicest stock for evening. This consisted of a pocketful of red, white and blue cartridges which he intended to fire from a toy pistol. How it happened he has never been able to tell to this day, but about 9 o'clock that evening he put his left hand into his trousers pocket, when suddenly there was a tremendous explosion. All of the cartridges had exploded in his pocket at once.

His friends think that he must have forgotten a piece of lighted punk with which he had been setting off firecrackers and dropped it in among the cartridges. At any rate, the various explosives set fire to his clothing and he was terribly burned about the lower portion of the abdomen and body. His limbs were burned from the groin down to the knees. He was also severely burned about the thighs. The flesh was burned completely off the left hand and wrist. At first it was thought that the unfortunate little fellow could not possibly recover.

The first operation was performed in August last, and the Griffith home was besieged with men and women, boys and girls, of all ranks and conditions of life, anxious and eager to be operated upon for the benefit of the little sufferer. At that time Fred was not able to be out of bed. He lay with supports under his body in such a position as to keep the injured parts from coming in contact with anything that might irritate the burns.

The volunteers first bare their arms. Dr. Halsey then gives the arms an antiseptic wash, in order that every particle of dirt may be removed. It would not do for even an infinitesimal particle of foreign matter to remain on the graft when it is applied to the boy's wounds. This shows how exacting nature is. Then the doctor shaves the surface of the arm that he is going to operate on. By this means the cuticle is brought to its virgin whiteness and loses even its growth of tiny hairs. Then the operator takes a small pair of pincers, so delicate that the points can scarcely be distinguished with the naked eye, and with a quick motion raises a piece of skin. This he nips off with a pair of scissors.

As fast as he gets the grafts he throws them into a glass dish containing diluted salt and water, which serves to cleanse them and keep the vitality in them. The grafts range in size from one thirty-second of an inch in length and breadth to one-half an inch, but very few pieces as large as the latter have been cut.

While Dr. Halsey procures the grafts Dr. Case puts them on the boy's wound. The cuticle that has been grafted upon the boy has been taken from over two hundred persons. It became a very proper fad among the young society people in Montclair to contribute skin for the cure, and swell young women vied with swell young men in proffering their fair arms to be operated upon. It also speaks well for the health and vitality of the residents of Montclair that the physicians never found it necessary to refuse any volunteer on account of ill health, bad blood or anything else.

The skin grafting symposiums took place every Sunday and every Thursday. Now that the cure is so nearly completed the doctors only work on Sunday. Fred is now able to sit up in an invalid's chair, and during the operation is not under the influence of anaesthetics. When asked by a reporter if he will play with fireworks again, he said: "You just bet I will! What would Fourth of July be without fireworks? But," he added, "I'll be more careful next time."—N. Y. World.

The Uncertain Public.

"There seems to be a limit to the power of kings after all," said Emperor William, morosely. "I don't like to acknowledge that I'm vanquished, but I'm very much afraid I'll have to."

"What is the matter, your highness?"

"I'm a little bit disappointed, that's all. The Napoleon revival and the Trilby craze both prosper beautifully, but my Aegir fad doesn't seem to get along worth shucks."—Washington Star.

A doctor has discovered the curious fact that the skull of a man who has died from delirium tremens contains an alcoholic gas. A small opening in the skull soon after death permits this gas to escape, and it can be ignited, and burns with a bluish flame.

His Views.

"What are your views on the higher criticism, Doctor?" asked the inquisitive passenger.

"I am not a doctor," replied the ministerial looking passenger, "I am an actor. But as regards the higher criticism, I fully believe in it. The gang in the gallery knows more about a play than anybody else."—Indianapolis Journal.

DUNELLEN ADVICE.

Alfred B. Nelson Endeavors to Instruct Plainfield Councilmen.

Alfred B. Nelson in the Dunellen Call yesterday published a letter, the most interesting and ridiculous statement of which was:

"The reason given by the sewer committee for sewer beds is not that they are more effective, more permanent or more desirable than tide-water disposal, but that they are cheaper. What should be the last consideration is with them the first. They want to put in something cheap, regardless of its effectiveness.

"It will cost more to build an effective system of sewage beds for intermittent filtration than to go direct to tide-water."

Then he figures out by some method that the proposed sewage beds will cost $210 000.

CHAPTER II.

The reader will not need to be told that Grossman was a dealer in cups with serpents lurking at the bottom of them. They went to that agreeable resort. Two hours later Preble came out of the back room. Lawrence was asleep there with his head on a table. The detective had in his pocket, alongside of the Hersch contract, an agreement signed by Lawrence that for the sum of $1,200, half of it payable before and the other half after the trial, he would testify to the facts as given above, with a certain small addition, if the company should decide that it was necessary.

"He wouldn't have signed that if he'd been sober," muttered Preble "Well, the end justifies the means."

He went at once to the house where Mrs. Monell lived. When a servant brought him word that he would be received, he ascended some stairs to the little suite which had been a home and was desolate. A beautiful woman, very pale and wan, stood waiting for him. The room bore many evidences of her care. She was one of those who accumulate small treasures by the way, and every one an embodied memory. There were many trifles that must have been very dear to both of them, and doubly dear to her alone.

"I have come on business," said Preble, when she had greeted him, "and I will be brief. The insurance company proposes to contest your claim."

She looked him squarely in the face and did not wince, but her eyes overflowed with tears.

"Upon what grounds?" she asked.

"Surely you must know. Your husband's letter"——

"What letter?"

"The one which he sent from the club on the night of his death."

"He sent none."

"The company has evidence that he did," said Preble calmly, "and that in it he confessed that his policy was worthless."

"Worthless! He confessed it? Is that why people have been sent here secretly to search my room?"

"It is. Moreover, the letter has been found."

"Then it must be restored to me. I demand it."

"But its legal value to the company"——

"I care nothing for that. Surely, you do not suppose that, if the money is not mine, I will take it. But his letter I will have, and"——

"One moment, please. I'd like to have you say that again. Suppose that you had found the letter, and it had contained that which would have legally prevented the payment of the money, you would have disclosed the contents and refused the money?"

"What right have you to say the contrary? Am I a thief?"

"HALF WHAT I SAVE YOUR COMPANY."

"No, Mrs. Monell, but almost everybody else is. Now, as to that letter"——

"You say it has been found."

"I know where it is."

"Will you restore it to me?"

"That will be beyond my power."

"This is infamous!" she exclaimed. 'Is it not enough that this company has for years taken my husband's money"——

"For years?"

"Yes, he has been insured with them for four years at least. They have taken his money and they return us nothing."

"Do I understand that—that there is more than one?"

"I have a little boy. You shall see him; but before you do, let me tell you that I have not enough money in the world to provide him food for a single week. But I can work. Let them keep their money. But they shall restore his letter to me if there is any law in the land. You are one of them. Wait! You shall see my boy. It is he whom they defraud, not me. I care nothing for myself."

She stepped to a door communicating with an adjoining appointment.

'A fine woman,' muttered Preble, "but very deficient in business instinct. I believe she really would have let out the secret in that letter. Her husband was a fool to write it."

At her call there came a pretty boy of four, in whom the mother's beauty was blended with a darker, stronger type—the face that she had loved and would see no more. Children take to Preble for his good looks. The little fellow wanted to make friends with him at once.

"Not used to a spare diet," muttered the detective; "but he may be However, it won't be right away."

With clever, sleight of hand he slipped something out of his pocket, and tucked it under a big book on a table.

"A fine boy is Albert," said Preble. "I am glad to have seen him. Now, Mrs. Monell, I must go."

"But you have told me nothing. Why is the insurance worthless? Why"——

"I believe it is something about the payments. You mustn't ask me any more questions now. Believe me, it's best not to. Very soon you'll know all about it."

We got away, with the exercise of infinite tact, avoiding further questions. In the lower hall he paused a moment. There was a curious piece of antique furniture near the door—a table with an upright back bearing a small mirror. Perhaps a dressing table once, whereat ladies of the old school sat comfortably and admired their images while their maids were at work making corkscrew curls. Time had dealt unkindly with it, and there was a wide crack between the top and the back.

"She wasn't at home when the letter came," he said to himself. "It was tossed upon that table. Did I lie when I said that I knew where it was? I think not."

He explored the crack in the old table, and found that it led to various recesses. Nobody came to disturb him, and he carried his researches to a successful issue.

On the following morning, the detective appeared bright and early in the office of Mr. Hersch. That gentleman had not yet arrived, but Preble waited patiently, leaning against the magnificent carved mantelpiece. He was looking particularly well that morning; so well, in fact, that the experienced Mr. Hersch, when his eye lit on the young man, remarked inwardly that he had rarely seen a safer risk.

"Well, sir," said the detective, "I flatter myself that I have brought this business to a satisfactory conclusion."

"Have you got the letter?"

"Wait a bit; I've something to say first. It's in the nature of advice. When you engage a detective, why don't you tell him the whole story?"

"What do you mean?"

"Why, I've learned that Monell was insured in your company four years. Now, your policies permit a man to commit suicide in less time than that, if he wants to—it's one year, isn't it?"

"Yes; it's one year."

"Then what sort of a fool's errand have I been on?"

"No fool's errand, Mr. Preble, as you shall confess when you touch the money. This is the explanation. Our agent, Mr. Stanton, did I mention him to you? Well, he was a friend of Monell, and brought him into our company. That was all right. He was a good risk. But about six months ago, when Monell's affairs became so terribly involved, and he got to worrying over them, Stanton came to me—I manage that part of the business, you know—and said he was afraid Monell would kill himself.

"STAND BACK, HERSCH!"

"So—I mention it in confidence—we put up a little job. Stanton persuaded Monell to change his policy for a better one, and brought him down here. The policy was changed. The suicide clause was the same in each, but the limit of one year ran from the date of the new policy, not of the old one. I fixed that so cleverly that Monell did not see it, and it was a devilish good stroke of business."

"So you made a contract with him four years ago by the terms of which he was to pay a certain sum every six months, for which consideration you agreed to insure his wife—so far as money could do it—against loss by his death, provided that if he wanted to commit suicide he should wait one year before doing it. Then, fearing that you might have to pay the money as agreed, you got a man who pretended to be his friend to lure him down to this den of devilish clever business, where, without knowing it, he gave away the sustenance of his wife and child."

"What do you mean by this, Mr. Preble?"

"Simply what I said in the first place. I've brought this business to a satisfactory conclusion. I've got it into such shape that you'll have to pay that money and nothing can save you.

"Here is that letter. It is sealed. No one on earth knows what's in it or ever shall know. I lay it on those coals. Stand back Hersch! You'll be an extra hazardous risk if you take another step So! The letter is ashes. Now dare you go into court? I think not."

Hersch was beside himself with rage.

"Go into court!" he yelled. "Yes; and bring you with me. I'll fight it on Lawrence's testimony alone."

"My excellent friend," said Preble calmly, "Mrs. Monell has a statement signed by Lawrence in which he offers to perjure himself for this company for $1,200. How would that look in court?"

"You lie!" gasped Hersch.

"No, I don't. It was in her room yesterday when I was there. It was under a big book on her table."

The two men looked into each other's eyes for a full minute. Then Hersch turned away.

"I suppose you put it there," he said. "At any rate, you have spoiled the case. The claim will be paid: and so will my debt to you. This shall cost you your position."

It certainly should have done so when the facts were reported at headquarters, but somehow it didn't, for no one would believe that Hersch was telling the truth.

As for Preble, he only said: "Do I look like a man who would put a little thing of sentiment?"

And they all agreed that he didn't.

SKETCHES OF LINCOLN.

The Reconciliation and the Quiet Marriage.

AFTER A LONG HIATUS OF REST.

Two Things Lincoln Always Seemed Willing to Forget—The Affair With the Hot Headed Shields—A Grotesque Drama and How It Finally Ended.

[From "The Life of Lincoln" by William H. Herndon and Jesse W. Weik. Copyright, 1888, by Jesse W. Weik. Copyright, 1892, by D. Appleton & Co.]

XIV.

Lincoln re-entered the law practice, after the long hiatus of rest, with renewed vigor. He permitted the memory of his engagement with Mary Todd to trouble him no longer. Their paths had diverged, the pain of the separation was over, and the whole thing was a history of the past. And so it might ever have remained but for the intervention of a very shrewd and sagacious lady—one who was capable of achieving success anywhere in the ranks of diplomacy. This lady was the wife of Simeon Francis, the editor of the Sangamon Journal. She was a warm friend of Mary Todd and a leader in society. Her husband was warmly attached to Lincoln. He ran the Whig organ and entertained great admiration for Lincoln's brains and noble qualities. The esteem was mutual, and it is no stretch of the truth to say that for years Lincoln exercised undisputed control of the columns of The Journal himself. Whatever he wrote or had written went into the editorial page without question.

Mrs. Francis, sharing her husband's views of Lincoln's glorious possibilities and desiring to do Mary Todd a kindly act, determined to bring about a reconciliation. She knew that Miss Todd had by letter a few days after "that fatal 1st of January, 1841," as Lincoln styled it, released him from the engagement, and that since then their relations had been strained, if not entirely broken off. As she viewed it, a marriage between a man as promising in the political world as Lincoln and a woman as accomplished and brilliant in society as Mary Todd would certainly add to the attractions of Springfield and reflect great credit on those who brought the union about. She was a great social entertainer, and one day arranged a gathering at her house for the express purpose of bringing these two people together. Both were invited and both attended, but neither suspected the other's presence. Having arranged things so ingeniously and with so much discretion, it was no difficult task for the hostess to bring the couple together by a warm introduction and the encouraging admonition, "Be friends again." Much to the surprise of both, they found the web woven around them. They entered into the spirit of the reconciliation and found Mrs. Francis' roof an inviting place for many succeeding meetings. A wall reared itself between them and the past, and they started again under the auspicious omens of another engagement. The tact of a woman and the diplomacy of society had accomplished what love had long since despaired of ever doing or seeing done.

The meetings in the parlor of Mrs. Francis' house were conducted with no little privacy. At first even Mrs. Edwards knew nothing of it, but presently it came to her ears. "I asked Mary," said this lady, "why she was so secretive about it. She said evasively that after all that had occurred it was best to keep the courtship from all eyes and ears. Men and women and the whole world were uncertain and slippery, and if misfortune befell the engagement all knowledge of it would be hidden from the world."

Married to Miss Todd.

It is unnecessary to prolong the account of this strange and checkered courtship. The intervention of the affair with Shields in no way impeded if it did not hasten the marriage. One morning in November, Lincoln, hastening to the room of his friend James H. Matheney before the latter had arisen from bed, informed him that he was to be married that night, and requested him to attend as best man. That same morning Miss Todd called on her friend Julia M. Jayne, who afterward married Lyman Trumbull, and made a similar request. The Edwardses were notified and made such meager preparations as were possible on so short notice. License was obtained during the day, the minister, Charles N. Dresser, was sent for, and in the evening of Nov. 4, 1842, "as pale and trembling as if being driven to slaughter," Abraham Lincoln was at last married to Mary Todd.

One great trial of his life was now over, and another still greater one was yet to come. To me it has always seemed plain that Mr. Lincoln married Mary Todd to save his honor, and in doing that he sacrificed his domestic peace. He had searched himself subjectively, introspectively, thoroughly. He knew he did not love her, but he had promised to marry her! The hideous thought came up like a nightmare. As the "fatal 1st of January, 1841," neared, the clouds around him blackened the heavens and his life almost went out with the storm. But soon the skies cleared. Friends interposed their aid to avert a calamity, and at last he stood face to face with the great conflict between honor and domestic peace. He chose the former, and with it years of self torture, sacrificial pangs and the loss forever of a happy home.

With Miss Todd a different motive, but one equally as unfortunate, prompted her adherence to the union. To marry Lincoln meant not a life of luxury and ease, for Lincoln was not a man to accumulate wealth, but in him she saw position in society, prominence in the world and the grandest social distinction. By that means her ambition would be satisfied. Until that fatal New Year's day in 1841 she may have loved him, but his action on that occasion forfeited her affection. He had crushed her proud, womanly spirit. She felt degraded in the eyes of the world. Love fled at the approach of revenge. Some writer—it is Junius, I believe—has said that "injuries may be forgiven and forgotten, but insults admit of no compensation; they degrade the mind in its own self esteem and force it to recover its level by revenge." Whether Mrs. Lincoln really was moved by the spirit of revenge or not, she acted along the lines of human conduct. She led her husband a wild and merry dance. If, in time, she became soured at the world, it was not without provocation, and if in later years she unchained the bitterness of a disappointed and outraged nature it followed as logically as an effect does the cause.

I have told this sad story as I know and have learned it. In rehearsing the varied scenes of the drama, I have unearthed a few facts that seem half buried perhaps, but they were not destined to lay buried deep or long. The world will have the truth as long as the name of Lincoln is remembered by mankind.

Willing to Forget.

There were two things Mr. Lincoln always seemed willing to forget. One was his unparliamentary escape with Joseph Gillespie from the legislature by jumping through the church window, in 1839, and the other was the difficulty with James Shields, or, as he expressed it in a letter to Speed, "the duel with Shields." Other incidents in his career he frequently called up in conversation with friends, but in after years he seldom if ever referred to the affair with Shields. People in Illinois did gradually forget or at least cease mention of it, but in more remote quarters where Mr. Lincoln was less extensively known the thing, much to his regret, kept rising to the surface. During a visit which I made to the eastern states in 1858, I was often asked for an account of the so called duel, so often, in fact, that on my return home I told Mr. Lincoln of it. "If all the good things I have ever done," he said regretfully, "are remembered as long and well as my scrape with Shields, it is plain I shall not soon be forgotten."

James Shields, a "gallant, hot headed bachelor from Tyrone county, Ireland," and a man of inordinate vanity, had been elected auditor of state. Encouraged somewhat by the prominence the office gave him, he at once assumed a conspicuous position in the society of Springfield. He was extremely sensitive by nature, but exposed himself to merciless ridicule by attempting to establish his supremacy as a beau among the ladies. Blind to his own defects and very pronounced in support of every act of the Democratic party, he made himself the target for all the bitterness and ridicule of the day. It happened that the financial resources of the state, owing to the collapse of the great internal improvement system, were exceedingly limited, and people were growing restless under what they deemed excessive taxation. The state officers were all Democrats, and during the summer they issued an order declining to receive any more state bank notes or bills in payment of taxes. This made the taxpayer's burdens greater than ever, as much of this paper remained outstanding in the hands of the people. The order met with opposition from every quarter, the Whigs of course losing no opportunity to make it as odious as possible. It was perfectly natural, therefore, that such an ardent Whig as Lincoln should join in the popular denunciation. Through the columns of the Springfield Journal, of which he had the undisputed use, he determined to encourage the opposition by the use of his pen. No object seemed to merit more ridicule and caricature than the conspicuous figure of the auditor of state. At this time Lincoln was enjoying stolen conferences under the hospitable roof of Mrs. Francis with Mary Todd and her friend, Julia M. Jayne. These two young ladies, to whom he confided his purpose, encouraged it and offered to lend their aid. Here he caught the idea of puncturing Shields. The thing took shape in an article published in The Journal, purporting to have come from a poor widow, who with her pockets full of state bank paper was still unable to obtain the coveted receipt for her taxes. It was written by Lincoln and was headed, "A Letter From the Lost Townships."

The "Dueling Business."

It ridiculed Shields' social pretensions without mercy. He threatened vengeance, and soon another letter appeared in which the "widow" offered to deprecate his wrath by marrying him. To this one of the ladies soon added a poem rejoicing over the proposed marriage.

Through General John D. Whiteside Shields demanded of Editor Francis the name of the author. The latter hunted up Lincoln, who directed him to give his name and say nothing about the ladies.

There was a vast amount of correspondence, a challenge, and a meeting on the west bank of the Mississippi followed, but at the last minute friends effected a reconciliation. Then the seconds quarreled, all the correspondence was published, and both principals were laughed at as they richly deserved.

The following letter from Lincoln to his friend Speed furnishes the final outcome of the "dueling business:"

SPRINGFIELD, Oct. 5, 1842.

DEAR SPEED—You have heard of my duel with Shields, and I have now to inform you that the dueling business still rages in this city. Day before yesterday Shields challenged Butler, who accepted, proposed fighting next morning at sunrising in Bob Allen's meadow, 100 yards distance, with rifles. To this Whiteside, Shields' second, said "No" because of the law. Thus ended duel No. 2. Yesterday Whiteside chose to consider himself insulted by Dr. Merryman, so sent him a kind of quasi challenge inviting him to meet him at the Planter's House in St. Louis on the next Friday to settle their difficulty. Merryman made me his friend and sent Whiteside a note inquiring to know if he meant his note as a challenge, and if so that he would, according to law in such case made and provided, prescribe the terms of meeting. Whiteside returned for answer that if Merryman would meet him at the Planter's House as desired he would challenge him. Merryman replied in a note that he denied Whiteside's right to dictate time and place, but that he (Merryman) would waive the question of time and meet him at Louisiana, Mo. Upon my presenting this note to Whiteside and stating verbally its contents he declined receiving it, saying he had business in St. Louis, and it was as near as Louisiana. Merryman then directed me to notify Whiteside that he should publish the correspondence between them, with such comments as he saw fit. This I did. Thus it stood at bedtime last night. This morning Whiteside, by his friend Shields, is praying for a new trial, on the ground that he was mistaken in Merryman's proposition to meet him at Louisiana, Mo., thinking it was the state of Louisiana. This Merryman hoots at and is preparing his publication, while the town is in a ferment and a street fight somewhat anticipated. Yours forever,

LINCOLN.

To a friend who had obtained from him a pardon for a deserter: "Some of our generals complain that I impair discipline and subordination in the army by my pardons and respites, but it makes me rested, after a hard day's work, if I can find some good excuse for saving a man's life."

IN ANDERSONVILLE.

"Down in the cemetery where are buried the prisoners who died in Andersonville," said Representative Tarsney, of Missouri, "you will find my headstone and my grave:

"'John Tarsney,
8th M.V. I.'

"The M. V. I. stands for Michigan Volunteer Infantry.

"How did it befall that my grave and headstone were dug and reared, my funeral held, and I still live to tell of it? The story is simple enough when one hears it.

"I was a prisoner at Andersonville, and being young and strong when I arrived, and of presumably good character was put on the prisoners' police force. Just before I came, there had been robberies and murders among the prisoners; certain strong ruffians and men of criminal bent preying upon their weak and helpless comrades. The prisoners held a meeting and organized a court and a constabulary; and after that any villain found robbing and murdering was hauled up, tried and executed.

"Well, I was on the police. One morning it was announced that an exchange of prisoners had been agreed to, and doctors came among our various companies to select those who were sick and likely to die, for the purpose of the exchange. The reason for selecting the sick and dying was two fold; it was humanity for one thing, and then the next the Confederates were cunning enough not to send back a well, strong man who could go into a fight at the front the day following his return to his regiment.

"The men they selected for exchange were too far gone with emaciation and sickness to ever aim a gun or fix a bayonet in war again, and it was an advantage to the confederates to be rid of them. It took just so much more off their hands.

"While my thoughts were running on the exchange then being arranged for, I had occasion to go down toward a little stream which ran through the lines. I heard a groan off to one side. It was early in the morning, hardly light, indeed. There, under some trees, lying on a blanket was a soldier in almost his last gasps. I asked him what I could do for him. He said there was nothing to do. I rustled about and built a fire and managed to get enough coffee to make a few spoonfuls. I thought it might brace him up. Then I sat down and had a talk with him. He said he was John France, and, like myself, of a Michigan regiment.

"He told me, too, that he had been selected for exchange.

"'But it comes too late,' he added, 'I shan't live an hour.'

"It was he who suggested the plot.

"'After I am dead,' he went on, 'you pin a paper with your name and regiment on my coat. Take my name and number yourself and be exchanged in my place. You'll have to see the sergeant of my 100 and fix it with him. If he objects, bribe him with all you've got, if necessary, not to peach and tell who you are. You can fix him and get out in my name.'

"At first the idea didn't strike me favorably. I doubted success. And I wasn't at all sure just what form rebel resentment might take if they detected me escaping under the alias of a man dead and gone. But John France urged me to go.

"'You might better risk my chance,' he said. 'If you stay you will go down, down until you are as you see me here,' and he held up hands which were like claws.

"AFTER I AM DEAD."

"I half assented. The appearance of John France was convincing. I would have gone through a storm of lead to escape his starved fate. He went on and told me all of the incidents of his capture, the date and the battle, with other data, so that I might stand any cross-examination that might be made as to my identity.

"After a bit I left John France, as I had other duties to attend to. I fixed him up as comfortably as I could and promised to come back as soon as I had liberty to see how he was getting along.

"When I returned in half an hour John France was dead.

"My first business was to hunt up the sergeant of John France's 100. I found him a bull headed, sullen sort of fellow. He bluntly refused in a butt end sort of way to permit me to escape in France's place. As he had to muster and march the prisoners marked for exchange to the place of departure, it was necessary to gain this man's aid.

"'You can't go,' he said roughly. 'If France is dead then I'll send some other man from my 100 in his stead. I'd go myself, but being a sergeant queers it. They'd spot me at once, and there would be no one to muster the men. But you can't have the place.' Here the sergeant assumed a determined air, as if he had settled the business. I was boiling.

"I had grown fairly frantic to get away, and the more I dwelt on the scheme to escape and reflected how few and far between were the opportunities of escape, I felt like throttling this obdurate sergeant. But I controlled my wrath as well as I could.

"It will be me or nobody who takes John France's place," I retorted. "He gave me his place himself and I will get it, or it will go wanting a candidate. Since you tell me I shall not go, I tell you that neither shall you nor any man of your hundred." And in bitter emphasis I shook my fist under the sergeant's nose.

"Observing that I had made an impression on him, I went rapidly and almost eloquently to the question of reward. I was the proud owner of a jim crow watch which to-day would be dear at $2. I offered him this if he would help me. It was all I had.

"To make a long story short, at last, after a deal of grumbling, he accepted. That afternoon when the ticketed folk were ordered to fall in for exchange I took the place of John France and answered to his name. I had blackened and grimed my face and torn and ripped my clothes, and with a stout cane to limp with I looked as nearly dead as I could.

"WHAT'S YOUR NAME, SIR?"

We hobbled and tottered rather than marched to the spot where we were to be turned over to a guard who would take us to Savannah. There was a little stream at this place with a narrow foot bridge. One by one our names were called, and as fast as identified we were passed across the bridge to the guard on the other side. At last the officer with the list called out:

"'John France!'

"'Here!' I groaned and hobbled forward with my cane.

"The officer surveyed me sharply. There was a thirty-second pause.

"This sort of thing hadn't occurred before, and my heart began to hammer my ribs like the throbbing of an engine; I was sure I was detected; and that the next thing would be a firing squad, a cracking of musketry, and the fictitious John Tarsney would be as dead as the real, lying stark in the little clump of bushes which I could see from where we stood.

"What's your name, sir?' at last demanded the officer, still eyeing me like a hawk.

"'John France!' I replied. I had resolved to brave it through.

"'What was your regiment and company?'

"'Company I, 27th Michigan.'

"'Where were you captured?'

"'Battle of Manassas,' I answered. I knew that was the name the rebels bestowed upon the battle of Bull Run, where France was captured.

"The officer still glared at me suspiciously and called the sergeant of my 100. I watched them anxiously while they whispered. But the Waterbury did its work well for once. The sergeant stood firmly by me. At last the officer turned to me again.

"'You may cross the bridge,' he said. 'March!'

"It was as if a stone had been rolled from my heart. With light breast I crossed over to the right side of the little stream. The next day we were sent per freight cars to Savannah, where the exchange was consummated, a United States transport being allowed to enter the port for that purpose.

"One of the queer matters of the exchange was the fact that the officer who had charge for the Confederates was Hon. William H. Hatch, of Missouri, with whom I have served six years in the House of Representatives. Hatch was a Confederate colonel at that time and I recall him as a very soldierly personage indeed.

"I little thought as I passed under Hatch's eye, that day we exchanged prisoners in Savannah, that one day I should cast my vote for him as Speaker of the House of Representatives. But this country is full of surprises of that sort.

"Well," concluded Representative Tarsney, "that's the end of the story, and that's how I escaped, and why poor John France, with my name on his headboard, sleeps in my grave at Andersonville."

A MONUMENT TO KEY.

First Speech of the Silver Tongued Orator at Faneuil Hall.

Unhonored by his countrymen, beneath the soil of his native country in the cemetery of Frederick City, Md., have lain for many years the ashes of Francis Scott Key, whose hymn, "The Star Spangled Banner," has been the inspiration for thousands of heroic deeds. At last a movement is on foot to erect a suitable monument to his memory.

The Key Monument association of Frederick have asked the children of America, on Flag Day, June 14, to make this subject a part of their patriotic exercises. The Governor of Maryland has sent an official endorsement and appeal to all the other governors. The association desires to secure $100,000 for this purpose.

Plainfield Druggists Respond.

At the State convention of the New Jersey Pharmaceutical Association in Newark yesterday H. P. Reynolds of this city paid a tribute to the past presidents of the organization. R. J. Shaw responded to the toast of "Our Partners, the Ladies", and from this delicate subject wove a line of remarks that were original and interesting. Mr. Reynolds was on the committee which presented a code of ethics of the relations of physicians to pharmacists, of pharmacists to physicians, and of both to the public.

It Did the Business.

Mr. J. H. Cobb, publisher of the Mirror, at Brockton, N. Y., says: "For nearly two years the Mirror has been publishing the advertisements of Chamberlain's Remedies. A few days ago the writer was suffering from a bowel trouble and resorted to an old remedy which did not prove efficacious; finally he tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and two doses did the business, checking it completely. For sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy.

Agreeably Surprised.

"I had a very severe cold on my lungs that caused much soreness and gave me considerable uneasiness in regard to the result," says Mr. T. E. Smith, of Billerica, Mass. "A local druggist called my attention to Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and on his recommendation I gave the remedy a careful trial. The result surprised me; I recovered entirely in three days." 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy.

A Remarkable Cure of Rheumatism.

From the Groton Connecticut Review.—"David Lewis, who has been afflicted all winter by rheumatism, is out again and all due to one of the medicines advertised in our columns. After trying everything possible, he used Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which has relieved him of all pain, from which he was a constant sufferer and promises to make him fit for duty soon. We know David has been a great sufferer and are glad to see him around again." For sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy.

Mr. D. Wiley, ex-postmaster, Black Breek, N. C., was so badly afflicted with rheumatism that he was only able to hobble around with canes, and even then it caused him great pain. After using Chamberlain's Pain Balm he was so much improved that he threw away his canes. He says this liniment did him more good than all other medicine and treatment put together. For sale at 50 cents per bottle at Reynolds's Pharmacy.

THESE AWFUL DOGS.

They Are Accused of What the Feline Tribe is Distinguished For.

To the Editor of The Daily Press :—

While on the subject of dogs, will you allow the undersigned to have a word. I like dogs, but under certain conditions of locality and proper restraint. That the freedom given to Plainfield dogs has become a marked nuisance, is shown by your correspondent, "Fencer". They cause an unnecessary strain on morals, and it may be on religion, for when a person has retired to his little bed with mind calm and contemplative, in peace with the world and inclined to be good, some nearby canine sets up a howl or bark, and its neighbors at once join in chorus, and, perhaps, at once bad words spring to the would-be sleeper's mind and vengeance to his heart, and he becomes instantly a bad man. Who should be held responsible? Clearly the owner, for if the beast will not otherwise behave it should be shut up or muzzled at night. But the above is not the worst feature of the outrage. In case of nervousness or sickness the noise of dogs may become a very serious matter; may "murder sleep", which may be of prime necessity to the patient,

Then as to trespassing upon lawns, gardens, etc. It is not incumbent on occupants of property to "fence" against invaders, (even if that would be a preventive, but it would not), but it is the duty of all to avoid trespassing either by their dogs or otherwise. Not wishing to occupy more of your space, I would merely suggest that the moral law and civil law forbid dogs enjoying the "freedom of the city" of Plainfield, which is now theirs, and all to the discomfort of those who regard this city as a quiet, restful, recuperative, healthful home.

A Sufferer.

Union Men, Read This.

"If the principles that organized labor are contending for are worth anything they are worth standing up for, and in what better way than in the clothing one wears can a man show his loyal mind?

"Werner, the clothier, has just taken the agency for the celebrated 'Carhartt brand of Union made, 'never rip' pants and overalls.

"The representative members of Union, No. 74, United Garment Workers of America, employes of Hamilton, Carhartt Co., Detroit, Mich., do hereby beseech you to give your support to the overalls, pants, etc., manufactured by this firm, who operate a strictly 'Union' factory.

"Please call at Werner's Clothing House and examine these goods and speak a good word for our Union if you think we deserve it.

"By order of Committee."

POOR LO.

The Downtrodden Red Man Talked About Last Night.

The Christian Endeavor society of the Park Avenue Baptist church held a pleasant and interesting missionary meeting last night. The meeting, which was well attended, was led by the chairman, Miss Fish. The topic for the evening was 'The American Indians", and papers on different parts of the subject were read by Mrs. W. A. Lowry, Miss Hawkins, Miss Thompson, Miss Adelaide Runyon, and Frank Clarkson. Three members of the Junior society—Miss Fannie Fish, Miss Alice Fish and Miss Rita Pond—gave a short missionary exercise, and Miss Rita Pond and Master Harold Smalley sang a duet, "There's a work for you and a work for me".

A missionary hymn was sung by a double quartette consisting of Miss Anna Wyckoff, Miss Cunning, Miss Hawkins, Miss Adelaide Runyon, Mr. Hill, J. A. Cunning, David Runyon and Nelson VanWinkle; and Miss Morse, of the Congregational Christian Endeavor Society, sang "The Ninety and Nine", accompanied by her autoharp. Letters from Miss Reeside and Miss Barrows, active workers in the field, were read by Miss Myra Runyon and Mrs. Lowry, and were much enjoyed.

Bound to Celebrate.

William Newcorn says that from all indications the Fourth of July celebration will be a large success, and that it cannot possibly be a failure, because, if the local societies do n't take hold of it and make it so, the entire State membership of the Red Men will be invited to come, and show the citizens what a celebration is. One of the latest organizations to approve of the celebration is the Y. M. C. A., President Murray having appointed D. A. MacPhie, A. W. Gavett, and G. Q. Packer to confer with representatives of othercommittees, July 3.

It Did the Business.

Mr. J. H. Cobb, publisher of the Mirror, at Brockton, N. Y., says: "For nearly two years the Mirror has been publishing the advertisements of Chamberlain's Remedies. A few days ago the writer was suffering from a bowel trouble and resorted to an old remedy which did not prove efficacious; finally he tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and two doses did the business, checking it completely. WOULD N'T BUDGE.

Barry Refused to Move for the Trolley Cars.

Residents of Somerset street near Craig place were very much amused this afteroon about 1:30. A man named Barry with a horse and wagon was driving along on the tracks of the street railway when the harness used on his steed broke in several places. The man was slightly under the influence of the flowing bowl and was in a quandry as to just what to do. However, he happened to think he had several hundred feet of wire in the wagon and forthwith commenced to straighten it out.

In the meantime Car No. 6 came along, and was obliged to stop. The railroad employes used persuasive argumente to get the man to move, but he said he would n't until he got ready. Then Motorman Morris Higgins endeavored to lead the horse, but the animal evidently intended to stand by her owner, so she kicked and balked so much that Higgins gave up the task. When Barry had fastened the harness together with the wire, he got in the wagon and drove off. A fact worthy of note is that there was no marshal in sight, and the man had everything his own way, holding the car for about fifteen minutes.

BEYOND THE STREAM.

Matters of Fact That Are of Interest to Boroughites

—Extra marshals will be on duty tonight.

—The borough school closes for the Summer June 20.

—Some miscreant is destroying flower beds along Grove street.

—Dr. Cooley is now finishing up the State census. His report must be in by June 1.

—There is not one single solitary Democrat holding office in the borough today.

—The Maple avenue brick works have finished a burn of 300,000 brick, the first kiln of the season.

—Charles Huff, a former resident, who has been absent for ten years, is visiting George Pope of Manning avenue.

—Lew Kline, the extract man, is making muscle with the assistance of a cord of hickory wood and a buck saw.

—Boys who would like to join Mr. French's camping party this Summer should go to the Y. M. C. A. Building this evening.

—Chief Justice Brown coincides with the decision of the United States Supreme Court in their conclusions regarding the income tax.

—Mountain avenue, from Somerset street to Westervelt avenue, was in darkness last night, owing to the break of an electric light wire.

—Invitations for a Decoration Day tournament on the grounds of the Hillside Tennis Club have been issued. The playing will be commenced at 10 a. m.

—The board walk on Somerset street, between Fairview and Grandview avenues, is in a very dangerous condition and needs the prompt attention of the property owners or the borough authorities.

—Mr. Dixon, who recently purchased the Rice farm at Greenbrook, has had nearly 100 electric lights put in the house, barn and outbuildings. It is the intention of Mr. Dixon to make this place an ideal country home.

—John Vetterlein is taking the school census under the direction of District Clerk S. B. Joseph. It must be finished by June 15. Last year the number of children from 5 up to 18 years of age numbered about 1,050.

—Who will be the next to set their curbing back in front of their property on Somerset street? Many property owners have already done so and unless the Council orders the same to be done by ordinance it seems that it will be a long time before the street will be widened to the width it should be. Two feet on each side of the street would be a blessing to the drivers of vehicles on that busy thoroughfare. Widen the street.

For the Missions.

The Womans Home Missionary society of Grace M. E. Church held their last sociable of the season at the home of Mrs. E. R. Stevens, last night. A goodly number was present and thoroughly enjoyed a literary and musical programme. The offering will add materially to the treasury of the society. The women are now preparing to send a barrel of useful articles to an Indian school in Oklohama, and are otherwise doing good work.

Music Hall Season Closed.

The performance in Music Hall tonight will close the season.

COLORED POLYGAMISTS

Many Arrests Made at Washington, D. C.

A Practical Application of the Edmunds Law Unearths Many Cases. Desirable Real Estate Titles Clouded—A Great Increase in the Demand for Marriage Licenses.

Washington, May 25.—A practical application to Washington city of the Edmunds anti-polygamy law (originally designed by its framers to apply only to Utah), has resulted in numerous arrests of colored people here for its violation. Most of these persons were simply carrying on the methods which originated in the slave-holding period, when legally celebrated and recorded marriages between negroes were almost unknown.

Real Estate Titles Clouded.

Some of the most desirable real estate in Washington in direct line with the white house is clouded as to title by conditions arising out of this order of things, the property being in the hands of colored people, who are entirely unable to say whether their fathers and mothers were married according to forms of law or not.

Run on Marriage License Bureau.

A recently inaugurated crusade against persons living in this legally unrecognized condition has resulted in a great increase in the demand for marriage licenses, the highest record in any one day being 139. It has also brought cases before the courts, and yesterday afternoon a test indictment was found by the grand jury to bring to an issue the question whether the Utah anti-polygamy law applies to the District of Columbia and to all other territories of the United States, including, of course, the Indian reservations.

A BREAK IN WHEAT.

Numerous Selling Orders Causes a Drop of 1 1-2 Cents.

Chicago, May 25.—There was more calmness to the wheat market yesterday than the day before, and yet there was enough restlessness in the trading to give the stamp of unusual activity. The break at the close Thursday was an unfortunate thing for the bulls, as it exposed a weak spot and showed that prices had reached a point where they had become vulnerable.

Numerous Selling Orders.

This development led to some apprehension among holders. Commission houses urged their clients to take profits, and numerous selling orders were the result. The fluctuations were sharp and frequent changes of ¼ cent were made to effect sales. The anticipated break came during the last hour in the form of a decline of 1½ cents, although previous to that time the tendency was lower.

AMERICAN CITIZENS NOW.

Commander Ballington Booth and Wife Swear Allegiance.

New York, May 25.—Commander Ballington Booth, who is commander of the Salvation army forces in the United States, and his wife, Maud Elizabeth Booth, have just been made full-fledged American citizens. Judge Kenny administered the oath to them in the county clerk's office. They have lived in this country a little more than eight years and in this state five years. Mr. Booth renounced his allegiance to her majesty with no apparent reluctance. They are proud of becoming American citizens.

A CINCINNATI BANK SCANDAL.

Ex-President of the Commercial Said To Have Appropriated Funds.

Cincinnati, May 25.—It is alleged that president Charles B. Foote of the failed Commercial bank has overdrawn his account $46,000. Mr. Foote is seriously ill with nervous prostration His friends are likely to make good his account. The creditors of the bank are in daily consultation with their attorneys, and some action will soon be taken.

Guests of a Steamship Company.

Buffalo, May 25.—The steamer Northwest left Buffalo at midnight with a party of 300 merchants, transportation agents, hotel men and newspaper men who will be the guests of the Northern Steamship company until Sunday noon. The guests will be entertained at Cleveland, Ohio.

Missing Woman's Body Found.

MOB IN DANVILLE JAIL.

Two Hundred Men Endeavor To Lynch Hall and Royce.

Danville, Ill., May 25.—A mob of 200 men attacked the jail here at 12:30 this morning to lynch John Hall and William Royce, who assaulted Laura Barrett yesterday. They worked for an hour battering the door of the jail with a telegraph pole. Then they got rails from the railroad and at 2:15 the big door gave way.

Inside the Jail.

Once inside, the mob found the big iron gratings in their way, and, after binding the sheriff and tying him in a corner, began to attack the barrier. At this stage Judge Bookwalter arrived and addressed the mob. He told them to desist and that the men would be given heavy sentences.

No Confidence in the Governor.

The mob replied: "We know you will do your duty, judge; but Altgeld will pardon them as he did the anarchists." The judge then left. The sheriff's wife made an appeal for the release of her husband, but to no purpose.

WHEAT'S FALSE BOOM

A Menace to the Progress of Business Improvement.

No Justifiable Cause for the Great Rise of This Cereal—Stocks Do Not Collapse and Iron, Leather and Hides Continue To Go Up—Distinct Gains in Many Industries.

New York, May 25.—If wheat has been so greatly injured by the frosts in May that the sudden rise of twelve cents in two weeks is justified, the calamity will affect all business prospects. The markets do not believe it, for stocks do not collapse, iron, leather and hides still rise, and no holders of wheat would sell at 80 cents, a lower price than had been known at this season for thirty years prior to 1883, if current reports were credited. Some injury has undoubtedly been sustained, but our own dispatches do not show that it is really serious. The fact is that relief from long anxiety, and the abundance and cheapness of money for which industry and legitimate trade give as yet no adequate demand, have excited the speculative spirit beyond all restraint, says Dun in the weekly review of the condition of business, issued to-day.

A Menace To Progress.

The hot fever will have nothing to do with cold facts. The temper is to buy, regardless of visible requirements, in the faith that prices are sure to rise. Wild excitement in wheat, with sales in one day at Chicago alone of 300 million bushels, about three times the wheat there is in the country, and a renewed frenzy in cotton, with sales in three days exceeding the whole visible stock in America, followed the furious rise in stocks, in oil, and in hides and leather, at once a recognition of real improvement in business, and a menace to its progress.

Buying for Export Stopped.

Western receipts of wheat for three weeks have been larger than last year, spite of storms and frosts. But the rise has practically stopped buying for export, as the similar rise did in April, 1884, which was followed by about the lowest price then ever known. Whether grain has been greatly injured or not, foreign markets will take early occasion to fortify themselves from other sources. The week's sales have amounted to 155 million bushels, and accounts of damage by frost and insects are so mixed up that some traders infer that the bugs must wear overcoats.

Gains in Iron Industry.

The iron industry shows gains, and the improvement is no longer confined to prices of raw materials. Better wages at and west of Pittsburg convince buyers that prices must rise, and there have been larger sales of finished products, with about $1 per ton better prices for structural forms and steel bars, while Bessemer pig has risen to $11.50 at Pittsburg and Grey forge to $10. The Thomas company has advanced its anthracite pig fifty cents, and higher freights make southern cost more at the east. Sales of rails to May 1 were 420,000 tons, and deliveries 250,000, both larger than last year. Nail works are combining, and a coke pool is expected to raise prices soon.

Increase in Pay Rolls.

Pittsburg banks note withdrawals for pay rolls in the past month of $2,383,397 against $1,865,818 last year by the same works. Orders this year number 22,029 freight and 72 passenger cars, 5,000 cars more than in the whole year 1894, but in 1892 and previous years the output was over 93,000 freight cars. Anthracite coal is decidedly stronger and copper very firm at 10¼ cents for Lake, though the April output was about 2,500 tons larger than that of January.

Textile Mills Fairly Busy.

Purchases of dry goods, in belief that prices must rise, have kept textile mills fairly busy, but the demand for cottons seem slacker on the whole, and print cloths are a sixteenth weaker. There is no improvement in demand for woolens, and strikes do not abate. A list covering 12,000 hands is published of works that have advanced wages, but the woolen mills in 1890 employed 220,000 hands. No changes are noticed in prices of dress or men's goods, but Lowell carpets are 2½ cents lower.

LAWN TENNIS AT BALTIMORE.

Southern Players Will Get Both Prizes in the Singles.

Baltimore, May 25.—Another bright day favored the tennis players here, and the southern championship tournament was continued. Both singles and double were reduced to the final rounds and the climax of the tournament will be reached this afternoon when the deciding matches will take place. Hamilton Post, of Baltimore, beat J. F. Hobart, of New York, yesterday afternoon in the singles, and J. C. Davidson, of Washington, defeated J. P. Paret, of New York. The southern players, therefore, will get both prizes in the singles, and Post and Davidson will fight out the question of supremacy today. In the doubles the northern visitors were more successful, however, for both of the New York teams won in the doubles, and will also meet to-day for first and second prizes. Paret and Thurber will be opposed by Hobart and McEnroe. The winners in this match will be champions of the south.

CHINESE EDUCATOR WING

Summoned by the Emperor To Assist in Reorganization.

New Haven, Conn., May 25.—Yung Wing, who formerly had charge of the Chinese students in this country, has been called back to China from Hartford by the Chinese government, and has gone for an indefinite stay. It is understood that his services will be required in connection with reforms of the Chinese administration bearing both upon the raising of the indemnity funds and the adoption of features of European and American civilization. Mr. Wing has for many years strongly favored the latter step as a feature of Chinese policy, and his friends in this city, as the result of the Chinese reverses, have been for some months expecting the summons. It is believed also that he will use his utmost efforts for sending another body of Chinese state students to this country.

TO TEST THE RACING LAW.

Livery Stable Horses Run in a Spirit of Defiance.

Flushing, N. Y., May 25.—On the ground that it interfers with legitimate private business Howe & Hummel, the well known lawyers of New York city, propose to test the constitutionality of the Gray racing law. With this end in view they hired several horses from village livery stables yesterday and ran three races on the half mile track of the Flushing Driving association. Bets were made on the results by the few spectators who were present. The races, it is said, will be repeated. Flushing citizens were largely responsible for the racing amendment to the constitution on account of the races held here last year, and that is why, in a spirit of defiance, Flushing has been selected as the place in which to run the test races.

WHY NOT DIVIDE THE BRICKS?

A Curious Case Growing Out of a Green Goods Transaction.

Quebec, May 25.—A curious case has been entered in the superior court here. Two formers of Valcartin, named McNally and Bourke, are the parties interested. Bourke borrowed $100 from McNally to buy green goods, the proceeds to be shared equally between them. The amount was sent to New York, and in due time they received by express two boxes containing bath-bricks from their New York correspondent. McNally, feeling the loss of the $100 very bitterly, asked Bourke to refund, and the latter refused; hence the suit. It now appears that the attorney-general will enter criminal proceedings against both Bourke and McKally for conspiracy.

HER PRINCELY GUEST

Nasr Ulla, with a Diamond in His Hat, at London.

Afghanistan's Representative Arrives with His Butcher, Cooks and Table Attendants—All Hands "Staked" by the Ameer for a Good Time Before Leaving.

Portsmouth, Eng., May 25.—The second son of the Amir of Afghanistan, Nasr Ulla Khan, disembarked at Portsmouth yesterday. He was received with royal salutes, and was met by the naval and military authorities of the district. All the shipping in the harbor was decorated with bunting and flags were flying from the principal buildings ashore. After the prince landed he was driven to the parade ground, where he inspected 6,000 troops of the garrison.

Received at London.

London, May 25.—An immense crowd was in and about the railway station to welcome Nasr Ulla Khan upon his arrival here. The station was handsomely decorated with flags and flowers and the floor was carpeted in honor of the occasion. Nasr Ulla left the train as soon as it had stopped and proceeded to a carriage that was in waiting. He was driven to the Dorchester house, escorted by a detachment of the life guards.

An Interesting Personage.

The Times of India recently published some interesting particulars concerning Sirdar Nasr Ulla Khan. Although he is barely 28 years old, he is practically accountant general of Afghanistan, and has the reputation of being a shrewd man of business. His knowledge of the English language is very limited, but he affects English dress, except so far as head gear is concerned, he wearing a turban with a rich diamond star on one side of it, instead of a hat. He is of medium height and slender build.

Many Costly Presents.

When it had been definitely decided that Nasr Ulla was to visit England, his father immediately made it known that no expense was to be spared in the matter of souvenirs of his visit for his hosts in England, and, as a preliminary step, a sum of no less than two lakhs of rupees were sent to Cashmere for the purchase of rich shawls and other costly presents.

"Staked" the Entire Suite.

As may be imagined, the undertaking of such a tour has necessitated a vast deal of arrangement, and, to all concerned, the ameer is reported to have been remarkably considerate, giving all the crowd of his son's followers suits of clothing, and to each a sum of money—the amount varying with the rank of the recipient—wherewith to enjoy himself in London.

Some of Those with Him.

Among those who accompany him to England are Colonel Talbot and two other government officers, Sirdar Mahomed Akram Khan, the prince's brother-in-law, Sirdar Mahomed Hussein Khan and Mirza Abdur Ruffe, Kotwal of Cabul, and head of the intelligence department, who has with him five of his assistants, T. A. Martin, mercantile agent to the ameer, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Walter and the Misses Hamilton.

Brought over His Butcher and Cook.

Then there are two Mullahs, a Kosha butcher and a number of special cooks and table servants. It is not yet known how long Prince Nasr Ulla will remain in England, but it is unlikely that the visit will extend beyond three weeks.

Newport, R. I., May 25.—In the special election for mayor to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Mayor John Waters, the democratic candidate, ex-Alderman Patrick J. Hanneet, of the board of aldermen, and acting mayor during the illness and since the death of Captain Waters, being defeated in the republican convention and running independently on nomination papers.

TOWN AND HOME FAVORITE.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., MAY 25, 1895.

Westfield is sorely perplexed with the rickety and dangerous sidewalk question. The township committee are preparing an ordinance to compel property owners to make necessary repairs where needed. While the officials are about it they better provide for the expense of enforcing the ordinance, else their efforts will be void of results. North Plainfield has had experience with just such a state of affairs. And it was not a pleasant one for the borough officials, and the pedestrians—well they can speak for themselves.

The entries for the National Circuit meet of the Crescent Wheelmen are published today, and include the best and fastest riders in the country. Thursday will be one of the biggest days Plainfield has ever witnessed, and Plainfielders should turn out en masse and attend the races. The members of the Crescents have worked hard and persistently to make their event a success, and no better method of expressing appreciation of their efforts can be evinced than transforming their ticket office in a veritable bank on the afternoon of the meet. Plainfielders have an outside reputation of being very liberal, and their reputation should be maintained Thursday.

CYCLING COMMENT.

A. C. Batchelor of Buffalo, the noted cycling journalist, will be among the notables at the National Circuit meet.

Robert Gentle, Chief Consul of the New Jersey L. A. W., will be a prominent figure at the Decoration Day meet.

No entry fee will be charged for the special one-mile scratch race of Class A men, for which the New York Times has offered a $50 gold medal.

Ernest T. Hand, one of the Spaulding team, who has been training for the past three weeks on the Fountain Ferry track, is expected to arrive at his home in Netherwood tonight.

As the income derived from sanction fees of the L. A. W., is so far insufficient to provide for one official referee to follow the National Circuit, it has been decided by the board that an official referee may be appointed for each circuit meet.

Isaac B. Potter, a prominent New York lawyer and Chief Counsel of the New York State Racing Board, will be a guest of the Crescent Wheelmen at the meet next Thursday. He has been very active in the good roads movement in New York State.

President W. H. Rogers of the Crescent Wheelmen this morning received a message from E. T. Hand at Louisville, stating that in a one-mile handicap race yesterday in that city, in which he was a scratch man, he finished first in 2:14. There were 20 starters.

Rev. Edward Kionka of the German Lutheran Church will deliver the opening address at the twenty-fifth anniversary of the German Lutheran Church at New Rochelle, N. Y., tomorrow.

Services were held earlier than usual in the Church of the Redeemer last evening, owing to the unexpected call of Rev. Dr. Johnstone to New York. The Rev. S. P. Simpson of the Church of Our Saviour, Netherwood, officiated in his stead. Tomorrow special services will be held morning and evening, it being the first anniversary of the Church of the Redeemer.

OLDEST MAN LIVING.

NOAH RABY, OF THE PISCATAWAY POOR FARM, NEW JERSEY.

Physically Sound as a Nut, and Frisky as a Two-year-old. Born in North Carolina, Served Under Farragut and Heard Gen. Washington Speak. Relishes His Toddy.

Is Noah Raby, of the Piscataway Poor Farm, New Jersey, the oldest man in the world? If the story of his life which he tells be true he has passed his 123d birthday.

It was about eighty-three years ago, according to his recollection, that Noah Raby, ordinary seaman, received his discharge papers from the stanch frigate Brandywine, which had just finished a cruise of inspection of the various ports of the United States and was then docked at the Brooklyn Navy Yard. The day after he left the naval service he betook himself to New Jersey, where he joined himself to a farmer and for money agreed to serve as a hired man. Since that time he has never stepped outside the boundaries of New Jersey. For more than half a century, with more or less steadiness, he followed the occupation he had chosen, and then, twenty-eight years ago, being full of years and decidedly averse to earning his own living any longer, he settled down at the Poor Farm in the township of Piscataway, not far from New Brunswick, and there he has since remained.

To-day he is totally blind, but his eyes, though sunken, have the sparkle of one who can see perfectly. His body is bent and his shoulders are contracted, but the muscles of his arms and legs are firmer than those of many a man not yet thirty. His jaws are toothless and his words are uttered with a whistling accompaniment, but his voice is strong and full and his laugh is as hearty as it was a century and more ago. His long hair is white, but thick and luxuriant; his whiskers are iron gray, his heavy, bushy eyebrows are still almost jet black, and he can dispose of a solid drink of good rye whisky with a sort of smack that betokens the heartiest relish. Though he believes his father to have been an Indian, his skin is white, and his features are of a pronounced Caucasian type.

When Raby was 21 he got away from Mr. Mills Field's plantation, in Gates county, N. C., where he was born, and started out to find employment.

"It was at Portsmouth and Norfolk, suh, that I shipped," the old man continued, "and I shipped on the Constitution—the Con-sti-tu-tion, suh. She had been a great vessel once, but then she was old and used for a receiving ship. Well, I worked for a year on the Constitution, going up and down the ratlines to the top 'on the mast, but no further. I never got to be anything more than an ordinary seaman. I didn't want to be an able seaman. I didn't want to go higher up the mast than the 'top.' That was as near heaven as I ever wanted to go till my time came.

"After I'd been on the Constitution a year I went on the Brandywine, on the inspection cruise. Do I remember the captain's name? You bet I do. It was Farragut. He was a fine, portly, good looking man, suh, and another man of the same name was a big captain afterward. No, I was never flogged, but I've seen lots of others punished. Once I come near being, but it was just because I tried to get away when some one else was being punished. Which of the ports we visited did I like the best? All of 'em, suh—all of 'em. I could have shore leave three times a week when we were in port, and we could always find ways of having good times—there were always bright eyes to shine on Jack Tar in them old days, suh—certain."

It was while he was at Norfolk and Portsmouth that Raby says he heard General Washington make a speech. Raby is not certain what the General was talking about, but there is no doubt in the oldest man's mind the Father of His Country was indignant and excited.

"Yes, suh," said Raby, "I saw the old Gineral and I heard him talk. He was pretty mad, too—oh, gracious, yes! I shall never forget one thing he said—it has stuck to me most a hundred years now:

"'Go right on, fellow citizens, as you have been going on, and I assure you that we shall have the devil to pay in this Republic and no pitch hot!'

"I left the navy because I was afraid there'd be a war, and I didn't want to fight. Well, there was a war, but I didn't see no fighting, only on the sea, and then I was on land and a good ways off. I've lost my discharge papers and I'm sorry. If I had 'em maybe I could get a pension, and, anyway, I could prove my age by them."

Are There No Clubs in Michigan.

"Do you appreciate," the old man asked of the youth who sought the hand of his daughter, "that marriage is attended with greater difficulties and discouragement than it ever was before?"

The youth would have spoken had not the patriarch waved him to silence.

"Do you realize"—he threw his whitened locks back from his brow—"that the lodge gag is worn so thin that a blind woman can see through it, and that as yet nothing has appeared to take its place?"—Detroit Tribune.

Only the Market Value.

"It seems to me that you want an unreasonably high price for this joke," said the editor.

"But," said the humorist, "it is an Irish bull. And when you consider the present high price of beef you must see that I am demanding nothing more than the ruling rates."—Cincinnati Tribune.

PYTHIAN PLEASURES.

Perseverance Lodge Knows How to Give a Good Time.

Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, Knights of Pythias, gave their members and friends an enjoyable time last evening at their rooms on West Second street. The attendance was very large. Eugene O'Reilly's orchestra opened the programme with a a selection which was followed with appropriate remarks by District Deputy Patterson. Robert Clark then rendered a solo. A recitation was given by H. S. Thatcher. Wm. Holmes sang a solo.

As an intermission Thomas Schaefer gave an exhibition of Indian club swinging. Edward Wolf was then introduced and gave character sketches. After a recitation by Miss Haberle and a solo by Asa Pope, "Bob" Whittaker then appeared and kept the audience in a continual laughter with funny remarks. A song by Master Robinson and one by Mr. Marrinus, preceded John Carney whose appearance was sufficient to have the desired effect of creating laughter.

The programme closed with a piano duet by the Misses Barnett. In the banquet room a collation was served. The committee to whom the success of the event was due consisted of Chairman J. S. Higham, R. H. Whittaker, J. Putterson, S. J. Robinson, and T. S. Milliken.

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE.

Imperial Dignity Conferred on the Man of Ajaccio.

PIUS VII PRESENTS THE CROWN.

No Ruler of Mankind Ever Confirmed by Such Acclaim—Plots Against His Life. Pichegru, Georges Cadoudal and the Duke of Enghien Put to Death.

[Copyright, 1895, by John Clark Ridpath.]

XV.—SERA-T-IL EMPEREUR DES FRANCAIS?

To the ancient order in Europe the apparition of Bonaparte was intolerable. His establishment in the Consulate was a menace to all that survived of the eighteenth century. To the princes of Christendom the Man of Ajaccio appeared at first as an ambitious adventurer. Risen to power, they esteemed him a parvenu and political bastard. Now they beheld him confirmed by the almost unanimous voice of a great people. For him the Gallic enthusiasm burst out in wild applause. By the Treaty of Amiens he was recognized as the fellow of kings and emperors. The greatest portent of all was this—that the peaceable ratification of the Consulate for life tended to make permanent the results of the French Revolution, thus invalidating the ancient regime, and converting its offspring into stalk-horses and specters.

The phantoms of the Past accordingly resorted to conspiracy. France had blown her feudal ghosts across the borders. Some of them hovered in London. Some were in Berlin. All places on the right bank of the Rhine were infested by them. The descendants of the Houses of Bourbon, of Orleans, of Conde, flitted dimly in the horizon. They had their following. Their secret friends squatted in the very shadow of the Tuileries. As for open war, they had had enough of that. Of secret intrigues and plots and crimes there was now no end. The desperation of the Royalists became all the more profound when the Consulate was seen to give peace, and to justify itself in the estimation of mankind. In such a situation the life of the First Consul appeared to the disappointed and despairing progeny of the past as a hateful and all-prevailing fact that must be destroyed.

The conspiracy which exploded in the Rue St. Nicaise was only the beginning of plots and plotting. It is in evidence that the agents of the British government lent a willing hand to the secret crimes that were to compass the destruction of Bonaparte. On his side there was corresponding vigilance. It was equivalent to death for any to lift the hand against him. His immediate subordinates were without exception loyal. But all the disappointed, hovering at a distance, scowled at his rising star. The years 1803-4 were pregnant with conspiracies. In the midst of the most untiring industry—consuming each day and a large part of the night in unparalleled application to the tasks of office—Napoleon was ever and anon distracted and enraged by the discovery of some plot against his life. His agents everywhere struck back, in light or darkness; and the bloody chalice was held to the lips of every intending assassin.

Among the plots of the day that of Georges Cadoudal, leader of the Chouans of Brittany, was conspicuous. From being an insurgent in the Royalist revolt of 1799, he had fled to England, where the count of Artois, afterwards Charles X., received him with open arms. In 1803 he made his way secretly to Paris. There he conspired with the disgraced General Pichegru, Napoleon's old master in mathematics at Brienne, to destroy the life of the First Consul. The plot was discovered. Pichegru was seized, imprisoned, and on the 5th of April, 1804, was strangled in his cell. Cadoudal, trying to escape, killed two policemen, but was overmastered, condemned, and on the 25th of June, 1804, was guillotined. General Moreau, the hero of Hohenlinden, who had become a Royalist, was accused of complicity in these schemes. Convicted of having knowledge of the plot of Cadoudal, he was condemned to two years' imprisonment; but Napoleon commuted the sentence into exile, and Moreau chose the United States as his refuge. After eight years, he entered the service of Russia, and in 1813 was mortally wounded at the battle of Dresden.

The result of these attempts was far-reaching. At this time the living representatives of the demolished monarchy were the count of Provence, afterwards Louis XVIII., who was at Warsaw; the count of Artois, in London; the young Orleans Philippe, afterwards the Citizen King, in Switzerland; and the duke of Enghien, descendant of the great Conde, at Ettenheim, in Baden. All of these were more or less implicated in the plots against Napoleon. The duke of Enghien in particular was believed to be a fellow-conspirator of Pichegru and Cadoudal. The latter had been secretly visited in Paris by a mysterious personage whom the passion of the hour declared to be the Conde prince. Notwithstanding the fact that Baden was neutral territory, a body of French soldiers was sent secretly to Ettenheim; the chateau was surrounded, and on the night of the 15th of March, 1804, the duc d'Enghien was seized in bed and hurried away to the fortress of Vincennes. A court-martial under General Hullin was immediately ordered, and without witnesses or other legal proof, the Duke was condemned to be shot. On the morning of the 21st of March, just before day, he was led into the ditch outside the wall, and there, by the ghastly light of torches, was shot dead. His body was thrown, without removal of the bloody garments, into a pit that had been digged the day before! The Consulate, as well as the Revolution which it succeeded, had a sword of sharpness for all its enemies.

The killing of Enghien created a tremendous sensation throughout Europe. Europe had not yet learned that the blood of kings and princes is even as the blood of other men. The European courts heard with horror and uplifted hands that a prince had been shot, as if by brigands, in the ditch of Vincennes. Abroad, in all governmental circles, opinion was confirmed against Bonaparte; but throughout France the execution of the duke of Enghien was applauded as an act of just vengeance against a conspirator. On the side of the First Consul many apologists appeared—some on the ground that he saved the Republic by saving himself at all hazards, and others on the ground that Napoleon had not been personally responsible for the killing of the prince.

Certain it is that the death of Enghien hastened the transformation of the Consulate into the Empire. The seat of the First Consul was already in everything but the name a throne. Why not make it a throne in fact? The facility of the French for change rendered easy the project which the temper of a heavier and more serious race would have rejected. Like the Athenian fancy, the Parisian mind flies quickly to the new. It hovers about the brilliant, the extraordinary. It satisfies itself with glory and enthusiasm. All these qualities in the soul of the people worked to the advantage and purpose of Bonaparte; but there was not wanting a measure of opposition. The Napoleonic desire soon found expression. Petitions began to be sent up from all parts of France. These were couched in suggestive hints to the First Consul that he should consolidate his power. Allusions about the advantages of a hereditary succession began to be circulated. Some of these were inspired by the agents of the government; others were spontaneous and sincere.

On the 13th of April, 1804, the first formal proposition for the conversion of the Consular Republic into an Empire was made by Curee in the Tribunate. The measure included the title of Empereur des Francais for Napoleon, with the right of hereditary succession in his family. Though the influence of the government was strongly devoted to the scheme, the proposal was met with serious opposition. The conspicuous voice of Lazare Nicolas Carnot, grandfather of the recently assassinated President of the French Republic, was heard above the din of affirmative applause. But on the 18th of May the measure was carried in the Senate. A consultum was promulgated, by which the Imperial dignity was conferred on Napoleon Bonaparte, and the decree was at once sent to the people. Another surprising election was held, at which 3,524,254 voters recorded their decision. Of these, 3,521,675 were in the affirmative, and only 2,579 in the negative! Whatever critical history may say of the antecedents of the Empire, certain it is that no other hereditary ruler of mankind was ever confirmed in power by such an acclaim of his countrymen! With good reason the feudal notion of territorial dominion hitherto expressed in the titles of rulers, gave way under this Imperial election; for Bonaparte was made Emperor, not of France, but of the French.

Notified by the Senate of the establishment of the Empire and of his own nomination thereto, Napoleon accepted the trust. The ceremony of notification was at St. Cloud. Josephine was also congratulated by the Senate. The Palace of St. Cloud was thronged on the occasion with the distinguished and elite of France. Just after the ceremony was over, a footman, rich in gold lace and scarf, made his way into the crowd, where the Baron Claude-Francois de Meneval—secretary to Bonaparte after the disgrace and dismissal of Bourrienne—was standing, and said: "Sir, the EMPEROR wishes to see you!" It was the first time that that astounding word had been applied to Bonaparte! History for nearly a century has confirmed it. At St. Helena he himself—offended at the small-minded officiality that designated him as General Bonaparte—said indignantly, "I shall always be known in history as the Emperor Napoleon!"

The Empire thus created was made to date from the 18th of May, 1804; but the coronation of Napoleon did not take place until the 2nd of the following December. Practically, the change in the government was not great. The stream of Consular power flowed into the widening river of Imperialism without a bend or the noise of cataracts. The coronation was a scene memorable in human annals. Pius VII., conciliated by the late Concordat, came willingly from Rome to crown the soldier of fortune, and to leave on him and his work the Papal benediction. It was at the altar of Notre Dame—where the Revolutionists of the Terror had danced the Carmagnole—that the Emperor-elect of the French knelt to receive the disdem. The Pope gave it; but Napoleon, taking it from his hand, put it on his own head—a thing most fitting to do; for he had made it for himself!

Josephine was crowned with her imperious lord. Returning from Notre Dame to the Tuileries, the Emperor, on reaching his own apartment, tore off as rapidly as he could the imperial vestments, and got himself into his usual apparel; for he was a man of business. The occasion was sunlit with splendor, and all hearts seemed full of life and light: all but one—the heart of Josephine. To her what ominous significance was in that clause of the senatus-consultum which made the crown hereditary in the family of Napoleon! Dire word was that word "family" to Marie Josephe Tascer, whilom Madame de Beauharnais, now Imperatrice des Francais. For she was forty-one and a-half years of age—epoch well nigh fatal to possible motherhood.

Only slight changes were made in the new Imperial administration. All such modifications looked to the unity and glory of the Empire. Napoleon preserved as much as he could of the personnel of the preceding Consular government. His two colleagues, Cambaceres and Lebrun, were appointed the one arch-chancellor and the other arch-treasurer of state; Joseph Bonaparte was made grand elector, and Louis the Imperial constable. Eighteen of the great generals who had become such with Napoleon in the field were made marshals of France. The transformation swept over the landscape like the dappled shadow of a sunny cloud. The Christmas holidays of 1804 came to Paris in a blaze of splendor. The Gallic world danced and smiled under wreaths of ivy and the flash of crystal candelabra, and the mutter of distant war was scarcely heard on the widened and confident borders of France.

JOHN CLARK RIDPATH.

Moliere.

Moliere, the French dramatist, tried hard to imitate the manners of the French nobility, but found the task one of great difficulty. After a reception he once attended he vowed he would never go to another until he got a new back, so tired did he become with bowing and scraping.

SKETCHES OF LINCOLN.

Congressional Aspirations and Their Fulfillment.

UNIQUE AND AMUSING INCIDENTS.

Brief Partnership With Stephen T. Logan Precedes the More Lasting One With William H. Herndon—Political Defeat. Elected to Congress.

[From "The Life of Lincoln" by William H. Herndon and Jesse W. Weik. Copyright, 1888, by Jesse W. Weik. Copyright, 1892, by D. Appleton & Co.]

XV.

After April 14, 1841, when Lincoln retired from the partnership with Stuart, who had gone to congress, he had been associated with Stephen T. Logan, a man who had, as he deserved, the reputation of being the best nisi prius lawyer in the state. Judge Logan was a very orderly but somewhat technical lawyer.

In 1843 Logan and Lincoln both had their eyes set on the race for congress. Logan's claim to the honor lay in his age and the service he had rendered the Whig party, while Lincoln, overflowing with ambition, lay great stress on his legislative achievements and demanded it because he had been defeated in the nominating conventions by both Hardin and Baker in the order named. That two such aspiring politicians, each striving to obtain the same prize, should not dwell harmoniously together in the same office is not strange. Indeed we may reasonably credit the story that they considered themselves rivals, and that numerous acrimonious passages took place between them. I was not surprised, therefore, one morning to see Mr. Lincoln come rushing up into my quarters and with more or less agitation tell me he had determined to sever the partnership with Logan. I confess I was surprised when he invited me to become his partner. I was young in the practice and was painfully aware of my want of ability and experience, but when he remarked in his earnest, honest way, "Billy, I can trust you, if you can trust me," I felt relieved and accepted the generous proposal. In after years, when he became more prominent and our practice grew to respectable proportions, other ambitious practitioners undertook to supplant me in the partnership. One of the latter, more zealous than wise, charged that I was in a certain way weakening the influence of the firm. I am flattered to know that Lincoln turned on this last named individual with the retort: "I know my own business, I reckon. I know Billy Herndon better than anybody, and even if what you say of him is true I intend to stick by him."

A Dangerous Rival.

Lincoln's effort to obtain the congressional nomination in 1843 brought out several unique and amusing incidents. He and Edward D. Baker were the two aspirants from Sangamon county, but Baker's long residence, extensive acquaintance and general popularity were obstacles Lincoln could not overcome. Accordingly, at the last moment, Lincoln reluctantly withdrew from the field. In a letter to his friend Speed, dated March 24, 1843, he describes the situation as follows: "We had a meeting of the Whigs of the county here on last Monday, to appoint delegates to a district convention, and Baker beat me and got the delegation instructed to go for him. The meeting, in spite of my attempt to decline it, appointed me one of the delegates, so that in getting Baker the nomination I shall be fixed a good deal like a fellow who is made groomsman to a man that has cut him out and is marrying his own dear gal." Only a few days before this he had written a friend anent the congressional matter: "Now, if you should hear any one say that Lincoln don't want to go to congress, I wish you, as a personal friend of mine, would tell him you have reason to believe he is mistaken. The truth is I would like to go very much. Still, circumstances may happen which may prevent my being a candidate. If there are any who be my friends in such an enterprise, what I now want is that they shall not throw me away just yet." To another friend in the adjoining county of Menard a few days after the meeting of the Whigs in Sangamon, he explains how Baker defeated him.

Accused of Being an Aristocrat.

The entire absence of any feeling of bitterness, or what the politicians call revenge, is the most striking feature of the letter. "It is truly gratifying," he says, "to me to learn that while the people of Sangamon have cast me off my old friends of Menard, who have known me longest and best, stick to me. It would astonish if not amuse the older citizens to learn that I, a strange, friendless, uneducated, penniless boy, working on a flatboat at $10 per month, have been put down here as the candidate of pride, wealth and aristocratic family distinction. Yet so, chiefly, it was. There was, too, the strangest combination of church influence against me. Baker is a Campbellite, and therefore, as I suppose, with few exceptions, got all that church. My wife has some relations in the Presbyterian churches and some with the Episcopalian churches, and therefore, wherever it would tell, I was set down as either the one or the other, while it was everywhere contended that no Christian ought to go for me, because I belonged to no church, was suspected of being a Deist and had talked about fighting a duel. With all these things Baker, of course, had nothing to do, nor do I complain of them. As to his own church going for him, I think that was right enough, and as to the influences I have spoken of in the other, though they were very strong, it would be grossly untrue and unjust to charge that they acted upon them in a body or were very near so. I only mean that those influences levied a tax of considerable per cent and throughout the religious controversy." To a proposition offering to instruct the Menard delegation for him, he replies: "You say you shall instruct your delegates for me unless I object. I certainly shall not object. That would be too pleasant a compliment for me to tread in the dust. And besides, if anything should happen (which, however, is not probable) by which Baker should be thrown out of the fight, I would be at liberty to accept the nomination if I could get it. I do, however, feel myself bound not to hinder him in any way from getting the nomination. I should despise myself were I to attempt it."

Baker's friends had used as an argument against Lincoln that he belonged to a proud and aristocratic family, referring doubtless to some of the distinguished relatives who were connected with him by marriage. The story reaching Lincoln's ears, he laughed heartily over it one day in a Springfield store and remarked:

"That sounds strange to me, for I do not remember of but one who ever came to see me, and while he was in town he was accused of stealing a jewsharp."

In the convention which was held shortly after at the town of Pekin neither Baker nor Lincoln obtained the coveted honor, but John J. Hardin of Morgan, destined to lose his life at the head of an Illinois regiment in the Mexican war, was nominated and in the following August elected by a good majority. Lincoln bore his defeat manfully. He was no doubt greatly disappointed, but by no means soured. He conceived the strange notion that the publicity given his so called "aristocratic family distinction" would cost him the friendship of his humbler constituents—his Clary's Grove friends. He took his friend James Matheney out into the woods with him one day, and calling up the bitter features of the canvass protested "vehemently and with great emphasis" that he was anything but aristocratic and proud. "Why, Jim," he said, "I am now and always shall be the same Abe Lincoln I was when you first saw me."

A Tempting Prize.

No sooner had Baker been elected to congress in August, 1844, than Lincoln began to manifest a longing for the tempting prize to be contended for in 1846. Hardin and Baker both having been required to content themselves with a single term each, the struggle among Whig aspirants narrowed down to Logan and Lincoln. The latter's claim seemed to find such favorable lodgment with the party workers, and his popularity seemed so apparent, that Logan soon realized his own want of strength and abandoned the field to his late law partner.

The convention which nominated Lincoln met at Petersburg May 1, 1846. Hardin, who, in violation of what was then regarded as precedent, had been seeking the nomination, had courteously withdrawn. Logan, ambitious to secure the honor next time for himself, with apparent generosity presented Lincoln's name to the convention, and, there being no other candidate, he was chosen unanimously. The reader need not be told who the Democrats placed in the field against him. It was Peter Cartwright, the famous Methodist divine and circuit rider. An energetic canvass of three months followed, during which Lincoln kept his forces well in hand. He was active and alert, speaking everywhere and abandoning his share of business in the law office entirely. Cartwright had extensive family connections all over the district, was almost 25 years older than Lincoln and in every respect a dangerous antagonist. Another thing which operated much to Lincoln's disadvantage was the report circulated by Cartwright's friends with respect to Lincoln's religious views. He was charged with the grave offense of infidelity, and sentiments which he was reported to have expressed with reference to the inspiration of the Bible were given the campaign varnish and passed from hand to hand. His slighting allusion expressed in the address at the Presbyterian church before the Washington Temperance society Feb. 2, four years before, to the insincerity of the Christian people was not forgotten. It, too, played its part, but all these opposing circumstances were of no avail. Our laborious efforts met with a suitable reward. Lincoln was elected by a majority of 1,511 in the district, a larger vote than Clay's two years before, which was only 914.

On the 5th of December, the day before the house organized, Lincoln wrote me a letter about our fee in a lawsuit and reported the result of the Whig caucus the night before. On the 13th, he wrote again, "Dear William—Your letter, advising me of the receipt of our fee in the bank case, is just received, and I don't expect to hear another as good a piece of news from Springfield while I am away." He then directed me from the proceeds of this fee to pay a debt at the bank, and out of the balance left to settle sundry dry goods and grocery bills. The modest tone of the last paragraph is its most striking feature. "As you are all so anxious for me to distinguish myself," he said, "I have concluded to do so before long." Jan. 8 he writes: "As to speechmaking, by way of getting the hang of the house, I made a little speech two or three days ago on a postoffice question of no general interest. I find speaking here and elsewhere about the same thing. I was about as badly scared, and no worse, as I am when I speak in court. I expect to make one within a week or two in which I hope to succeed well enough to wish you to see it." Meanwhile, in recognition of the assurances I had sent him from friends who desired to approve his course by a re-election, he says: "It is very pleasant to me to learn from you that there are some who desire that I should be re-elected. I most heartily thank them for the kind partiality, and I can say, as Mr. Clay said of the annexation of Texas, that, 'personally, I would not object' to a re-election, although I thought at the time, and still think, it would be quite as well for me to return to the law at the end of a single term. I made the declaration that I would not be a candidate again, more from a wish to deal fairly with others, to keep peace among our friends, and to keep the district from going to the enemy, than for any cause personal to myself, so that if it should happen that nobody else wishes to be elected I could not refuse the people the right of sending me again. But to enter myself as a competitor of others, or to authorize any one so to enter me, is what my word and honor forbid."

Chicago Speech July 10, 1858.

"My friend has said that I am a poor hand to quote Scripture. I will try it again, however. It is said in one of the admonitions of our Lord, 'As your Father in heaven is perfect, be ye also perfect.' The Saviour, I suppose, did not expect any human creature could be perfect as the Father in heaven, but he said, 'As your Father in heaven is perfect, be ye also perfect.' He set that up as a standard, and he who did most in reaching that standard attained the highest degree of moral perfection. So I say in relation to the principle that all men are created equal, let it be as nearly reached as we can. If we cannot give freedom to every creature, let us do nothing that will impose slavery upon any other creature."

A Presidential Blondin.

Gentlemen, suppose all the property you were worth was in gold, and you had put it in the hands of Blondin to carry across the Niagara river on a rope, would you shake the cable or keep shouting out to him, "Blondin, stand up a little straighter; Blondin, stoop a little more; go a little faster; lean a little more to the north; lean a little more to the south?" No, you would hold your breath as well as your tongue and keep your hands off until he was safe over. The government are carrying an immense weight. Untold treasures are in their hands. They are doing the best they can. Don't badger them. Keep silence, and we'll get you safe across.—Reply to Fault Finders at Executive Mansion

THE PRESIDENT AS A WRITER.

Preparing to Issue a Work on the Science of Economics.

Mr. Cleveland is to appear before his countrymen in a new role. He has become a literary man. It might be more correct to say that he has long been a literary man. He has spent four years, more or less, in writing a book, still incomplete, which seems likely to give him an altogether unique position in our long line of Presidents. It is a volume on economic science.

Everybody knows that Mr. Cleveland has theories of his own in the domain of politics. His views, however, in that academic field of the science cultivated by Adam Smith, Ricardo and Mill are very little understood. Now, if there is one study to which Mr. Cleveland has devoted his leisure, it is political economy and sociology. He is an omnivorous reader in these departments of knowledge. His library is stocked with the standard works on the various subjects. It is not so much as a means of acquiring information that Mr. Cleveland reads with this persistance, but in order to keep pace with the progress of thought. Those who have had opportunities of observing him in his private life are aware of Mr. Cleveland's fondness for reading, a fondness which has grown upon him of late. Another fact which has been noticed is that now he writes, writes, writes for hours. He is always making notes as he proceeds. In the matter of classifying his knowledge Mr. Cleveland shows decided expertness. He receives nearly all the current works of importance that issue from the press—those, that is, which are in his line. They are duly and promptly read, and notes made of them for future reference. It may be interesting to detail in this connection the volumes lately ordered by Mr. Cleveland for his private use—ordered personally. Mr. Cleveland does not have his books charged, at least not those with which the New York trade supplies him. His orders are accompanied by the cash and go to him at Woodley. The trade reports him a very good customer, purchasing regularly. He gets all the lists of the publishers, for his tastes are quite well known by this time in New York.

Here are ten books he has purchased recently, with the dates of orders. These orders come in typewritten memoranda, or mere slips cut from a catalogue. The dates accompany each:

December 10, 1894, "Social Evolution"—Benjamin Kidd.

January 5, 1895, "A Traveler from Altruria"—Howells.

January 5, 1895, "Claims of Christianity"—Lilly.

January 19, 1895, "Cæsar"—Froude.

February 6, 1895, "Decline and Fall of Roman Empire"—Gibbon.

March 6, 1895, "Republic" of Plato.

March 19, 1895, "Essays on Questions of the Day"—Goldwin Smith.

March 27, 1895, "Degeneration"—Max Nordau.

March 30, 1895, "Wealth vs. Commonwealth"—Henry A. Lloyd.

April 2, 1895, "History of the United States," Vol. IV.—J. B. McMaster.

It will be noted that Mr. Cleveland is rather severe in his tastes, and that he goes in for both old and new works. These books are merely those which have been ordered by him and sent from New York. He constantly receives books from all over the world. His library grows apace.—N. Y. Herald

To Attend Divine Service.

Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G.A.R., Major Anderson Post, No. 109, G.A.R., and John Hand Camp, No. 28, S. of V., will meet tomorrow evening at 7, and attend divine services in the Seventh-Day Baptist Church, when Dr. A. H. Lewis, the pastor, will preach a patriotic sermon.

Agreeably Surprised.

"I had a very severe cold on my lungs that caused much soreness and gave me considerable uneasiness in regard to the result," says Mr. T. E. Smith, of Billerica, Mass. "A local druggist called my attention to Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and on his recommendation I gave the remedy a careful trial. The result surprised me; I recovered entirely in three days." 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy.

A Remarkable Cure of Rheumatism.

From the Groton Connecticut Review.—"David Lewis, who has been afflicted all winter by rheumatism, is out again and all due to one of the medicines advertised in our columns. After trying everything possible, he used Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which has relieved him of all pain, from which he was a constant sufferer and promises to make him fit for duty soon. We know David has been a great sufferer and are glad to see him around again." For sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy.

Mr. D. Wiley, ex-postmaster, Black Breek, N. C., was so badly afflicted with rheumatism that he was only able to hobble around with canes, and even then it caused him great pain. After using Chamberlain's Pain Balm he was so much improved that he threw away his canes. He says this liniment did him more good than all other medicine and treatment put together. For sale at 50 cents per bottle at Reynolds's Pharmacy.

A PICTURE OF HEALTH TODAY.

Mrs. Moore Was Sinking---Paine's Celery Compound Made Her Well.

The people have given their verdict.

Every State, county and most humble village has had a voice in it.

There is a consensus of testimony from all America to the fact that Paine's celery compound is making sick, tired-out, nervous men and women well and strong again.

There have been published by thousands in every State in the country, this spring, testimonials from people in every station in life in those States telling of the many, many cases where this greatest of all remedies has made people well.

The Press has published the unsolicited testimony of well-known and highly esteemed people in this city who have found health and strength in the remedy that was first prescribed by Prof. Edward Phelps, M. D., LL. D., of Dartmouth college.

Men and women of national reputation have written thankful letters on the same subject, which have been published the world over, and have called forth unasked for responsive letters from equally prominent men and women in other lands.

Below is a letter that commends itself in this spring month of May to every woman in Plainfield. It was voluntarily written to Wells, Richardson & Co. by a lady whose portrait, given above, is assurance of her high character and honest disposition. She is a picture of womanly health. She is Mrs. Robert M. Moore, of Laporte, Ind., and she writes:

"Please accept my heartfelt thanks for the great good Paine's celery compound has done me. I do think that there cannot be too much said in its favor. I was completely run down a year ago, and had the advice and attendance of two of the best physicians in the town, who pronounced my sickness nervous prostration. I was treated by one for two weeks, and then went to another and at first he seemed to help me, but after a while instead of getting better I went from bad to worse.

"At the earnest solicitation of two of my children and a dear friend, who was very much interested in my case, I commenced to take Paine's celery compound, and took seven bottles, and am thankful to say that I am a well woman today. Considering the low state of health in which I was, my has been pronounced wonderful. You can use this communication as you see fit."

For recovery from the effects of too constant indoor work, worry, over-exertion of body or mind, and for the general depressed state of health that is so apt to result from a sedentary life of hard work and routine, Paine's celery compound is the one strictly accurate relief. It refreshes and restores the worn-out tissues, disposes the body to take on new flesh, and rapidly clears the system of the used-up elements that clog its healthy workings.

Drudging indoor workers who seldom get a long breath of fresh air—and there are many such, both men and women—recover vigor of the nerves and vital organs through the use of Paine's celery compound.

COLLEGE PRANKS.

A High School Graduate Made to Do Funny Things.

A recent pupil of the Plainfield High School, now at college in Boston, was the subject of the following playful notice the other day in The Herald of that city:

"W. E. C. Leonard of Boston University freshman class became a member of the Beta Theta Pi fraternity last evening.

"The form of initiation adopted by the Betas was, to say the least, unique, and of much interest to the public. Mr. Leonard is one of the college poets, and his verses have appeared at times in the University Beacon and much interest has been centered in his work. During the prize contest for the best articles in The Beacon Mr. Leonard carried off the greatest number of honors.

"Yesterday, as part of the initiation exercises, the poet was ordered to paste all effusions on an empty water pail, inside and out, and what remained of them on a piece of heavy cardboard. The pail he carried and the pasteboard was slung about his neck, and, with trousers turned up, Mr. Leonard paraded the streets until called into college, where he was compelled to cut up all manner of 'shines', for the benefit of the fair sex. On his way back to the clubhouse his jacket was turned wrong side out.

"During the evening Mr. Leonard was again taken in tow and placed in a conspicuous spot on Bowdoin street, where a tin pail was placed in his lap, a pair of blue goggles on his eyes and a placard stating that he was totally blind. The generosity of the public was shown in more ways than one, and the victim feels that begging is a lucrative business.

"After experiencing much more of a mysterious nature Mr. Leonard became a full-fledged Beta."

A Sacred Agreement.

An agreement was made a number of years ago between John Benner of Fanwood and John Mannion of Bound Brook that in case of either of them dying, the survivor should decorate yearly the missing one's grave sometime near Decoration Day. Mr. Mannion died a few years ago, and Mr. Benner with a few friends has since fulfilled the pledge then made and Saturday, accompanied by Thomas Buckley, John Bowman, and Edward Thorn of this city, decorated the grave in the cemetery at New Brunswick where Mr. Mannion was interred.

Mr. Sohl Retires.

Joseph Sohl retires from the management of Music Hall, June 1. Though Mr. Sohl had but little or no experience in theatrical affairs, previous to his taking hold of this playhouse, he has conducted it in a wonderfully satisfactory manner by presenting a high class of attractions, with courteous treatment of patrons, and last, but not least, by retiring with an evenly-balanced set of books.

Pitching Pennies a State Offense.

Charlie Cox is a bad boy. He is bad because he pitches pennies on Sunday. Policeman McCue caught him yesterday enjoying this pastime in the rear of the Jersey Central freight house. This morning Judge Coddington was obliged to let him go because pitching pennies is a State offense and not a violation of a city ordinance.

Miss Raybert's Ability.

The Westfield Standard compliments Miss Etta Raybert of this city as follows on the recitation she gave at the Y. M. C. A. entertainment in that place last Friday night:

Miss Raybert recited and responded to an encore. She was very bright and funny, and the facial expression and general style of delivery were heartily appreciated.

A Cow That Was Looking for Ice Cream—St. Joseph's Children of Mary Portray All Nations—Nell Picket Goes Up for Another Sixty Days—Notes—Personals.

—Samuel Moore and Samuel Taynor were the two extra marshals on duty Saturday night.

—Carney Bros. are putting all the modern improvements into Dr. Zeglio's property, corner Somerset and Pearl streets.

—Francis J. Doremus of Prospect place, represented one of the Assembly Districts of Morris County in the Legislature of 1878.

—Horace Doty of Harmony street, formerly conductor on the street railway, who has been ill for the past week is recovering.

—Harvey A. Bird, born at Mount Bethel, Oct. 18, 1819, and now rounding out his 76 years, says: "Plant your lima beans; the new moon's arrived".

—D. N. Groendyke of Mercer avenue has parted with the horse that led him such a spirited chase up Somerset street one day last week. George Conover is now the owner of the frisky critter.

—Two fakirs sang "On the Sidewalks of New York" Saturday evening at 8 to a large and seemingly appreciative audience on Somerset opposite Emily street. They were peddling "All the latest songs of the day at five cents per copy."

—Newt. Smalley, W. F. Wiliams, (Barney) S. B. Wheeler, "Al" Smalley, and George Randolph will fish for pickerel in a private lake at Rockaway, Morris County, Decoration Day. The party will be the guests of Mr. Hoagland of Rockaway, who is the owner of the lake.

—Town Committeeman Elias Allen is preparing to put 100 tons of crushed stone on the East Valley road, commencing in front of the Blume property, continuing on towards Scotch Plains as far as the same will go. The roads in North Plainfield township are the best in Somerset County—of course, excepting the borough roads.

—A stranger who was driving fast through the streets of the borough Saturday night, was stopped by Marshal Samuel Moore and reprimanded. George Miller, thinking that the marshal was going to arrest the stranger, interfered so persistently that it was found necessary to arrest Miller. This morning Justice Crosley fined him $3, which he paid.

—Marshal Wilson found Nellie Pickett, who is well known among her class, in a disorderly condition Saturday night at a late hour. She had been out on a racket, and returning to her home on Grove street attempted to break up housekeeping. She was arrested much against her will, and this morning when brought before before Justice Crosley, words could not express her feelings. The Judge thought that 60 days would be sufficient, and she was given that time in which to recuperate.

—Levi P. Dupee has a cow that is a unique specimen of the hoof tribe. This producer of the lacteal fluid broke loose from the lot near Rockview avenue, where she was pastured yesterday, and meandered unobserved down towards the center of the city. The owner finally discovered her absence, and made a search for the bossy. She was found in the rear of Compton's ice cream parlors on West Front street, as if seeking for a dish of what the young swain spend so much money for in the Summer months. After some trouble she was driven back to where she belonged. Mr. Dupee says that if he had only known that she wanted ice cream he would have furnished her with it direct from his own house.

—The Children of Mary gave a reception in St. Joseph's Church last evening, the programme being an enjoyable one. The countries represented and those representing them were as follows: North America, Miss McCaffery; South America, Miss Kate Egany; Africa, Miss Nellie Bagley; Asia, Miss May Hughes; England, Miss Kate Kiely; Ireland, Miss Richardson. The introductory part was taken by Miss Blanche Brizard, and the maids of honor were Miss Anna Sheridan and Miss Alice Kennedy. Miss Kate Cooley did the crowning, assisted by Miss Annie McCullough and Miss Mamie Carney. A feature of the event was a bass solo, "Veni Creator", by James Bailey, assisted by the chorus, and Miss Tinnie Smith rendered a delightful soprano solo, entitled "Ave Veruin". Following this Father Miller preached a very impressive sermon on the "Blessed Virgin".

CHOIR RECEPTION.

Crescent Avenue Church Members Enjoy Themselves.

A reception that was complete in every detail, was given Saturday evening by the members of the Crescent Avenue Church to Organist F. J. Smith, and the quartette choir: Miss Banta, soprano; Miss Hardenburg, alto; E. E. Runyon, tenor; Mr. Lewis, basso; assisted by Mrs. F. J. Smith, elocutionist; and G. E. Devoll, tenor, of New York. Mr. Smith had arranged an exceedingly fine programme of music for the occasion, and the rendition was perfect in every particular. The very large audience that filled the chapel of the church was largely composed of a number of Plainfield's music-loving people, and each selection received several encores. Mrs. Smith, as an elocutionist, gave evidence of unlimited talent and power, and her recitations with piano accompaninent were delightful. She was recalled several times, so fully appreciated were her efforts to please.

The appearance of G. E. Devoll was occasion for hearty applause. He is not a stranger in Plainfield, and his talent is well known. His rendition of Thine", by Bohm, completely captured the audience, and he was obliged to respond to a most flattering reception.

It would be manifestly unfair to enter into any criticism of the programme, as its uniformity was so marked. Suffice to say that in every detail it was all that could be desired. It was as follows:

Duett—{In Absence, Spring Song} Tassen
Misses Banta and Hardenberg.
Recitation—Village Gossip.....Kate Wiggin
Mrs. Smith.
Fair, Sweet and Holy.....Canter
E. E. Runyon.
My Darling.....F. J. Smith

Mary and Peter in Trouble.

Mary Jacks and Peter Conde looked forlorn when arraigned before Judge Coddington in City Court this morning. Mary and Peter were picked up on Front street Saturday night by Policeman Frederickson for quarreling and fighting. Peter said that Mary was drunk and that he was trying to get her home, when she repulsed his good intentions and commenced to fight him. Just then the officer came along and took the couple to the rookery. The Judge sent Mary to jail for 10 days and suspended sentence on Peter.

Councilman Frost Thinks it Will be $20,000 Less Than Estimated.

Councilman Frost told a Press reporter at the North avenue station this morning that it was thought that the cost of constructing the new sewer system, including the sewage beds, would be $20,000 less than the estimate. The total cost of the land for beds will be something over $23,000.

WORTHY LITTLE WORKERS.

Bright Misses Hold a Successful and Pleasant Fair.

A charming event was the fair held Saturday afternoon and evening on the lawn adjoining the residence of Mrs. Gilmore on West Second street. It was arranged and given entirely by Lulu Gilmore, May Mulford, Isabella Edwards, Violet Beerbower, and Helen Harned. Their object was to raise money to help the poor and they worked hard to make it a success.

A large number of very pretty articles were made of paper, such as dolls, flowers, small boxes, handkerchief cases. The lawn presented a pleasing picture with the various tables prettily trimmed.

The fancy table was in charge of Lulu Gilmore, and the candy table was well taken care of by Miss May Mulford, while the lemonade and cake was in the excellent care of Violet Beerbower. Isabelle Edwards and Helen Harned as waitresses looked after the needs of those present in serving.

As a result of their earnest efforts $17.67 was realized. There are a few things left which the little girls wish to dispose of, and as soon as the weather is clear they will endeavor to sell them at the gate of Lulu Gilmore's home.

CYCLING COMMENT.

An important meeting of the Crescent Wheelmen will be held this evening.

Miss Adel Kirby of Grandview avenue is the owner of a new Columbia wheel, purchased from the Eldridge Bicycle Company.

Mr. Armstrong, of Hotel Revere, purchased a Cleveland Swell Special from the Eldridge Bicycle Company Saturday morning.

Through the downtown agency of J. Hervey Doane, Morris Balantine purchased a Victor and Mr. Norma of LaGrande avenue a Columbia.

A colored man from New Brunswick had his wheel broken at the corner of Park avenue and Front street yesterday afternoon by colliding with another cyclist.

Joe Harrison of Asbury Park, who is entered in the Memorial Day meet, rode a practice mile on the Crescent Oval Saturday afternoon in 2:19. He was paced by George B. Cobb, Jr. His trainer is E. C. Johnson of the Harlem Wheelmen.

The New York Times of yesterday published the following: An unusually large and promising list of entries has been received for the Crescent Wheelmen's big national circuit meet at the Oval track on Decoration Day. Everything promises success for the tournament, and local cyclists are consequently in a pleasant frame of mind. The weather favoring, there will probably be 15,000 spectators on the grounds.

After the Irvington-Millburn meet is over next Thursday, it is expected there will be a great run to Plainfield to witness the races on the Crescent Oval, in the opening national circuit meet. The ride from Milburn, at the western end of the road race course, along the foothills of the Watchung Mountains to Plainfield, is beyond question one of the finest trips in this section, both from a scenic aspect and in consideration of the perfect macadamized highways.—New York Times.

Wheelmen in this vicinity will be pleased to learn that Plainfield has been placed upon the national circuit of bicycle meets. This means that the famous racers, Tyler, Titus, and all the rest of the cracks will compete at the meet of the Crescent Wheelmen, of Plainfield, on Decoration Day. From Plainfield the champions will go to Trenton. Plainfield and Trenton are the only New Jersey towns in the circuit, which takes in all of the United States, ending the season at Denver.—New Brunswick Times.

WAS WAR FOR THE LORD.

Dr. Lewis's Interesting Memorial Day Sermon.

VETERANS AND FRIENDS TURN OUT.

He Says That War, With All Its Evils, Has Been a Great Civilizer, and Human Rights Have Found Their Progress Along the Pathway of Earth's Battlefields.

Winfield Scott Post, No 73, G. A. R., Major Anderson Post, No 109, G.A.R., Woman's Relief Corps, No 10, auxiliary to Winfield Scott Post and John Hand Camp, No 28, S. of V., to the number of about 150, marched in a body to the Seventh Day Baptist Church last night and listened to a patriotic sermon by the pastor, Dr. A. H. Lewis.

Every seat in the handsome edifice was taken. After the organization had taken their seats, a very fine rendition of "My Country 'Tis of Thee" was given with variations on the organ by Miss Jessie Utter. This was followed with a beautiful anthem by the choir. Rev. Dr. Livermore then read the scripture selection and offered prayer, after which Miss Kate Opdyke, of Somerville, sang a solo that was very much enjoyed. Around the pulpit Old Glory was draped artistically and an excellent picture of Abraham Lincoln hung in the centre with a beautiful arrangement of flowers entwined. Beneath was a large picture showing the martyred President and his staff.

Dr. Lewis spoke in part as follows:

Dr. Lewis's text was from Rev. 19:6: "Alleluia! for the Lord God Omnipotent reigneth." Theme: God the Supreme Arbiter in the Affairs of Nations. History is full of evidence that a power unseen and often wholly unappreciated at the time decides every great issue in which questions of right and righteousness are at at stake. Men plan and purpose—but sooner or late God decides by resistless decisions. In all this He is educating men and making the world better. War, with all its evils, has been a great civilizer, and human rights have found their progress toward recognition and triumph along the pathway of earth's battlefields. It has been thus, but our natiou has now reached a point at which no more need or possibility of war ought to appear.

In the late war, as we can now see since the smoke of battle has cleared away, there were positive evidences of the overruling power of the Omnipotent Jehovah. For example: At the first, men said we will compromise and avoid war. We will not come to blows and bloodshed. God said: The evil is too great, the war must come. Then men said: We will save the Union and the Constitution, but we will not touch the real cause of the trouble—Slavery. God said: "You must let my people go." Then we said: We will settle the question of Slavery in some way by purchase, or by compromise. God said: It is too late to compromise, let my people go. To do all these things God chose the man for the hour and made him the "man of destiny,"—Abraham Lincoln. He inspired and guided him as Commander-in-Chief under God the Supreme Commander, to lead the Nation through the wearisome and bloody way to righteousness and justice, etc. Hence to victory.

Dr. Lewis here read various extracts from Lincoln's State papers, showing that the final issuing of the Emancipation Proclamation was the result of an agreement between God and Abraham Lincoln. Lincoln said: "I made a solemn vow before God that if General Lee should be driven back from Pennsylvania, I would crown the result by the declaration of freedom to the slaves." God kept his part of the contract, and gave you the victory at Gettysburg, that the world might see that He was leading his subordinates, your comrades, unto victory, and the Nation unto righteousness.

There are many new and vital problems again at hand, such as an honest ballot, just administration of governments in City, State and Nation; problems of economics, of immigration, of foreign interference, by direction or indirection, of separation of Church and State, etc. All of which God must settle, by guiding us, or they will never be settled rightly. And God will help us to settle them rightly, if we will listem to him.

In closing Dr. Lewis made an earnest and tender appeal to each veteran to believe that God guides individual men as He does Nations. That He waits to guard from temptation and evil, to strengthen in all right doing, and to lead to everlasting peace and salvation, all who will trust Him.

The service closed with the singing of "My Country 'Tis of Thee," after which Dr. Livermore pronounced the benediction.

WILL TRY DIPLOMACY

Campos' Next Move in the Cuban Rebellion.

Hopes To Win by Easy Means What He Cannot Crush with the Gauntlet of Steel—Insurgents Gaining Recruits—Sickness Among the Spanish Soldiers.

New York, May 27.—The staff correspondent of the United Press sends the following letter, dated Havana, May 22: The government claims to have absolute proof of the death of Marti, but Cubans here declare that the body must be viewed by others than Spanish army officers before the identity is established. Marti's aged mother who lives here, and his nephew have asked the government to bring the remains here for final interment. The finding of the watch and private correspondence, and the further identification when the body was disinterred at Ramanganagua is claimed by Col. Sandaval to have completed the proof of Marti's death, and it is doubtful if the government will proceed any further in the matter. Marti's private letters which were captured at the battle of Dos Rios were from Cubans in this city, Santiago and Holguin. The writers are now under surveillance by government officials, but no arrests have been made.

Probably Correspondent Woodbury.

The American newspaper correspondent who was reported killed in the Dos Rios fight is probably a young man named Woodbury who arrived at Santiago about a month ago. He represented the New York Morning Journal and one or two other papers. He went into the interior on May 6. He said he was going to join Maceo, Gomez and Marti, who were then together at Banabacoa, about thirty miles north from Santiago. He knew nothing of the country, the people or the language, and I warned him of the risk he ran. He was taken to the insurgent camp by a mulatto, who carried messages through the lines. Woodbury has not been heard from since May 6, and in all probability met his death with Marti.

What Spain Has Accomplished.

Aside from the killing of Marti and the reverses at Dos Rios, Spain has accomplished very little towards putting down the rebellion with force of arms, and Martinez Campos has now decided to try diplomacy as well. When he arrived in Cuba about six weeks ago he proclaimed war. No promise of righting wrongs was made, no hope of instituting reforms was held out. The marshal of Spain said he had come to crush out the rebellion, and when that was done and quiet restored he would use his influence to have put in practice the reforms which had passed the Spanish cortez some months ago.

Will Carry Out the Reform Bill.

Campos has found the insurrection far more serious than he at first supposed, and he has now decided to institute the reforms at an early day, with the hope of disarming the insurgents of the claim which wins them both sympathy and support, that Spain refuses all reforms. During his recent visit to this city Gen. Campos had interviews with Cubans who are recognized as leaders of the autonomist and reform parties. To them he imparted his intention to carry into effect the reform bill. This measure is a compromise affair and was passed by the cortez when it was seen that another revolution was brewing.

Expects To Win by Diplomacy.

Spain had failed to keep her promises made at the close of the last war and the Cubans were getting ready to fight again. The reforms were passed, but have not been put in practice. Spain has held them back as a mother withholds a sugar plum from an unruly child, but the behavior of the infant has grown worse instead of better. Now, Campos will grant the reforms, and, with his projected railroads and harbor improvements, he hopes to win with the soft glove of diplomacy what he cannot crush with the gauntlet of steel.

Will Keep on Fighting.

The effect will undoubtedly be marked on Cubans who have been teetering on the fence for two months—they will fall on the government side; but those who are already in arms at the eastern end of the island will not stop fighting for the trifling reforms that are promised. They say that if it is only by fighting that they can wring reforms from Spain, they will keep up the strife until they wrest independence from her.

Must Grant Absolute Autonomy.

The chief leaders of the three recognized political parties have declared for Spain and against the rebellion, but even with this concession to the government it is my honest belief that Spain will never win this war by force of arms. She must grant absolute autonomy. The cry that it is a negro rebellion is Spain's attempt to keep white men at home. It is not a negro rebellion, for the best white Cuban families are with the movement.

Insurgents Gaining Recruits.

The entire province of Santiago with the exception of the fortified towns is in arms. The insurgents, who numbered 3,000 when Campos landed, now number 8,000. They are constantly gaining recruits. Sugar grinding has ceased on all the plantations, and idle negroes, attracted by free beef and a roving life in the mountains, are joining the different bands. White men from the towns and cities are also going out.

Sickness Among the Soldiers.

Spain has sent over 20,000 regular troops and is preparing to send more. The hospitals of Santiago, Guantanimo, Manzanillo and Havana are filled with sick soldiers. Most of them are down with malarial fevers, a few have yellow fever. The rainy season has now begun and the yellow fever will increase rapidly. There are now fifteen cases at Santiago out of the 450 soldiers in hospital. Here there are 10 cases out of 160 soldiers. Smallpox is now epidemic in Havana, but as only a few soldiers are stationed here it will not affect military operations. The insurgents count upon the climate killing more Spanish soldiers with fever than they will with bullets.

The War Lacks Interest.

The war, from a military standpoint, lacks interest. Big battles will not be fought and strategy will not be displayed. Unless Spain succeeds by diplomatic means, the war will be long continued and will be one of endurance.

STEAM AND ELECTRICITY.

Comparative Tests as a Motive Power To Be Given.

Philadelphia, May 27.—Within the next ten days officials of the Pennsylvania railroad expect to be in a position to make determining tests of the comparative efficiency and economy of steam as a motive power for its smaller branches. For this purpose the Mount Holly branch of the Camden & Burlington county railroad, extending from Mount Holly to Burlington, N. J., a distance of seven miles, has been selected, and for months past the work of equipping it as a trolley road has been in progress. This line was picked out for the experiment because of its easy grades and its light freight traffic. As at present operated by steam, it is a source of greater expense than gain to the company. If by substituting the the trolley system it is found that the expenses be reduced and the receipts increased, making the line a profitable one, the trolley will doubtless be introduced on a number of other small branches of the company, which are in about the same position as the little road from Mount Holly to Burlington.

GRIFFIN'S EMBEZZLEMENT.

Confessed That He Appropriated Bank Funds.

Albany, May 27 — The announcement of the resignation of Edward A. Griffin as cashier of the Park bank was made on Thursday last. This action was explained somewhat when the state superintendent of banks Charles M. Preston gave out the following statement: "A regular examination of the Park bank of Albany was commenced May 16, 1895, and continued for several days, and resulted in the confession of the cashier, Edward A. Griffin, to the abstraction of a portion of the bank's funds, which sum was immediately made good by the stockholders of the bank, and the resignation of the cashier promptly accepted. No apprehens on need be felt concerning the entire soundness and stability of the institution, as its affairs were never in a better condition than they are at present, which fact is evidenced by the report of the examiner just completed.

CORBETT'S OPINION.

What Champion Jim Thinks of Peter Maher.

Pittsburg, May 27.—Michael Connelly, of this city, is in receipt of a letter from John J. Quinn, the manager of Peter Maher. In it Quinn tells of the match between Maher and O'Donnell, and in doing so throws some light on what Corbett thinks of the affair. Corbett was present when the match was being made, and the question naturally turned on the championship. During the remarks which passed Corbett said he thought pretty well of Maher, and that in his opinion the vanquisher of Marshall and all of the colored fighters of note could whip and man in the world. Brady, who was in the party, said: "Well, you can whip him, Jim." The only answer that Corbett made to this was that if he, Corbett, ever fought Fitzimmons and whipped him, he would retire from the ring and name Maher as his successor.

CENTRAL AMERICAN REPUBLIC.

First Step Taken by Nicaragua and Honduras.

Washington, May 27.—New treaties of far reaching importance have recently been made between Nicaragua and Honduras, and official copies have just been received in Washington. They are the first practical step toward the formation of a Central American nation out of the several small republics—Nicaragua, Honduras, Guatemala, Salvador and Costa Rica. The first treaty forms a defensive alliance in case of foreign war, and an offensive alliance against common enemies. It obliterates commercial frontiers, so that foreign goods once admitted to one country are free to enter the other. An express provision is made against the possibility of war between the countries by an article requiring differencies to be adjusted by arbitration by some government on the American continent.

Endorsed by the Federation.

New York, May 27.—The manifesto recently issued by the International Labor party of England, of which James Keir Hardie is president and "Tom" Mann secretary, to the socialists of the world, has been endorsed by the Central Labor federation, and it was decided to send a delegate to the International Socialist congress which meets in London in 1896.

Ravages of Chinch Bugs.

Topeka, Kan., May 27.—Reports from Leavenworth and other eastern counties in Kansas are to the effect that the ravages of the chinch bugs in wheat fields are severe. In Leavenworth county, where the wheat crop has never been known to fail, farmers are plowing up their wheat and planting the fields in corn.

FINANCIAL SITUATION

How the Income Tax Will Effect the Treasury.

The Outlook Not Considered Encouraging and May Possibly Lead to Another Issue of Bonds—A Scheme Formulating in the Treasury Department to Tax Tea and Beer.

New York, May 27.—The decision of the United States Supreme court against the constitutionality of the income tax law in its entirety naturally directs attention to the condition of the treasury. The commissioner of internal revenue estimated, before the early decision of the supreme court against the constitutionality of the law, so far as it affected bonds and rents, that a revenue of at least $40,000,000 per year might be expected from the operation of the law.

Would Offset About $15,000,000.

After the decision above referred to it was calculated that this would offset about $15,000,000 of revenue, leaving only $25,000,000 to be collected under the other provisions. Now the whole of the revenue is swept away, and nothing remains for the government but to rely upon customs and internal revenue, and to hope for such a revival of business as will keep the deficiency down to $4,000,000 per month for the remainder of the calendar year. The deficiency reported from Washington on the 18th was about $51,000,000.

Treasury Estimates.

Treasury officials claim that this amount will not be greatly increased during the next six weeks, so that at the end of the fiscal year the deficiency will stand at about $53,000,000. But there has been scarcely a month since the beginning of the year that treasury officials have not spoken in the same hopeful strain, and the results have shown that they were mistaken in their calculations.

Outlook Not Encouraging.

There is little reason to believe that their expectations for the next six weeks will be realized, or that the estimate of a deficiency of only $4,000,000 per month for the first half of the new fiscal year will prove correct. Yet, even admitting that only $21,000,000 will be added to the deficiency, the outlook is by no means encouraging. Something will have to be done to increase the revenue and to make up the loss sustained by the failure of the income tax.

A Beer and Tea Tax.

The treasury department is said to be formulating a scheme to tax tea and beer, hoping to get sufficient revenue from these sources. But it must be remembered that much time must elapse after the assembling of congress before any revenue measure can be considered, and meanwhile the deficiency will be increasing.

May Issue More Bonds.

The treasury department will prabably be able to draw about $190,000,000 in the general cash balance after the amount due from the bond syndicate shall have been paid in and this can be drawn upon without raising any question so long as the net gold reserve is held intact at about $100,000,000. This sum of $90,000,000, more or less, will be sufficient to carry the government along to the end of the calendar year and leave a fair, though small, working balance, provided there has not been any serious miscalculation as to the revenues. Should anything occur to reduce the estimates of revenue the only alternative will be to issue more bonds.

DECIDED TO RESIGN.

Reported That Chief of Police Byrnes Has Reached This Decision.

New York, May 27.—Chief Thomas Byrnes, of the police department, has decided to resign. It will not surprise his close friends if he severs his connection with the force to-day. He his realized the existence of antagonism to him ever since the mayor appointed the four new police commissioners, and he does not care to fight the new board, so he will take off his shield and retire forever.

Met with Unfavorable Response.

Berlin, May 27.—The renewed demand on the part of the British board of agriculture for the removal of the German restrictions upon the importation of live stock has met with an unfavorable response. The German experts who were sent to England report that the foot and mouth disease which prevailed there has not been entirely suppressed.

A GHASTLY DISEASE.
Different Doctors Give It Different Names.
The Result Always the Same.—Speedy Death.—Until Recently, Confidered Hopeless.—Now, New Methods. Salvation.
Nothing is more alarming than diseases of an ulcerous nature. A continual gnawing away of life-generating tissue, until a vital spot is reached, an artery is severed, or from sheer weakness death ensues.
Especially in Gastritis—ulcers of the stomach—is terrible suffering experienced. The symptoms, though not at first alarming (seemingly a slight attack of indigestion), gradually become worse, so that no nourishment can be retained on the stomach, and unless the trouble-causing ulcer produces death by perforation, the patient
Dies of Starvation.
In Consumption, where the ulcers attack the lungs, the termination is very similar, as it is, in fact, in any of the wasting diseases to which are given various names, according to the organs affected.
By the methods of physicians of to-day thousands of lives are being saved in cases that a few years ago were considered hopeless. The first step now taken to effect a cure is to make new blood and tissue, give the patient strength, and keep him "on the gain" by administering Bovinine.
Bovinine is not a medicine, but a greatly concentrated extract of the most vital elements of lean raw beef. The life-maintaining qualities of this wonderful preparation are simply marvellous. Dr. A. M. Cook, of New Castle, Pa., states that he maintained life in his wife, while suffering from gastric ulcers, for three weeks without giving her anything through the mouth, injecting Bovinine instead.
With such results as this, it is not to be wondered at that Bovinine is indorsed by physicians everywhere, and has become recognized as the greatest factor in saving life, hastening recovery from sickness, and warding off disease, ever given to man.

PANIC IN A CHURCH

A Woman Puts the Congregation To Flight.

Fires Two Shots at a Member of the Choir—Sister Clark Wanted To Kill Brother Brockenbow in East Orange Because He Would Not Marry Her.

Orange, N. J., May 27.—The morning services in the Oakwood Avenue Colored Baptist church, this city, yesterday, were proceeding decorously, and the pastor, the Rev. Paton H. Matthews, had just announced the text for his sermon, when the front door was burst open and a wild-looking colored woman entered and walked swiftly up the center aisle toward the organ. As she advanced several of the worshipers noticed that she kept something tightly clutched in her right hand, which was partially hidden under her cloak. Near the altar rail and just in front of the organ sat Andrew Brockenbow, a member of the church choir.

Fired Two Shots at Him.

As soon as he saw the woman he jumped from his seat with a startled exclamation, but before he could make a second movement she had drawn a pistol and fired two shots point blank at him, one of which passed through his coat sleeve, grazing the skin. The congregation became panic stricken and men and women jumped through the windows, carrying glass and sashes with them. The preacher rushed toward the woman, who turned and ran from the church.

Would-be Murderess Captured.

When captured she was arraigned before Justice Davis. She gave her name as Bella White and said she lived on Thompson street, East Orange, next door to where Brockenbow occupied rooms. She said Brockenbow had repeatedly promised to marry her. On Friday he told her he did not intend to fulfill his promise and she determined to kill him. A charge of atrocious assault and battery made against her by Brockenbow, and she was committed to the county jail at Newark.

JAPAN MAY HAVE TO FIGHT.

Her Landing on Formosa To Be Strongly Opposed.

London, May 27.—The correspondent of the Times at Hong Kong telegraphs that the Chinese general, Ku-Hung-Ku, supports the republican movement in the island of Formosa with his army. Money, arms and soldiers are being shipped from the mainland. The Japanese landing will be vigorously opposed. Local risings in sympathy with the republican movement have occurred on the mainland. A strong anti-dynastic feeling prevails in the south of China, and its leaders fear that the proclamation of the republic on the island of Formosa will wreck their schemes.

MURDER AT THE CHURCH DOOR

A Two-Year-Old Kentucky Feud Wiped Out with Blood.

Nicholasville, Ky., May 27.—A bad shooting affray took place at the Troy Presbyterian church on the line between this county and Woodford yesterday at noon between George and John Montgomery, brothers, and Arch D. Riley. Riley was killed and George Montgomery fatally wounded. The trouble is of long standing and grew out of Riley deceiving a sister of the Montgomerys two years ago. The wonder is that others were not killed while the shooting was going on, as the churchyard was filled with people.

REFORM IN CLEVELAND.

Unexpected Move of the Newly Elected Mayor.

Cleveland, O., May 27.—Moyor McKissen, whose term of office is but a few weeks old, has taken away the breath of Cleveland's "free and easy" element. A few nights ago every disorderly house on "Seneca Street Hill" was raided. Friday night the entire Hamilton street territory was gone over by the police and forty arrests made. Saturday night the scouring was continued, Broadway being the scene of action. Lake and Water streets were similarly treated and last night the warfare was resumed, Mayor McKisson taking a personal part in the raid.

THE DANVILLE LYNCHING.

Majority of the People in Full Sympathy with the Work.

Danville, Ill., May 27.—It is extremely doubtful if any of the mob which battered down the jail and lynched Halls and Royce here Saturday will be punished for the crime. Though none of the lynchers were masked it is impossible to find any one who can identify them. The coroner's jury returned a verdict to the effect that Halls and Royce came to their death by being hanged with ropes in the hands of a body of unknown men. The grand jury is at present in session, and it is said the matter will be brought to its attention, but there is scarcely a probability that any indictments will be found. While a few citizens deplore mob violence, the general majority of the people are in full sympathy with the work of the night. The wife of the sheriff is in an exhausted condition, she having thrice fainted while the mob was pounding down the doors. The mother of Halls is greatly distracted. Living in the edge of South Danville she could look across the river and see the crowd around the jail and hear the blows of the battering ram upon the iron doors of the jail. She ran through the streets of the village pulling her hair until restrained by friends. A public meeting has been called to meet in South Danville to-night at which time notice is to be served upon all tough characters in that place to leave the country or run the risk of meeting the same fate that befell Halls and Royce.

WHOLE BLOCK BURNED.

Disastrous Fire in Dalton, Pa.—Loss About $40,000.

Scranton, Pa., May 27.—A disastrous fire that visited Dalton, a borough of this county, yesterday swept away an entire block. It caught in F. Van Fleet's store, and fanned by a strong wind soon reduced to ashes the large lumber yard and buildings of Francis and Dershimer, including a dwelling and barn, a bakery shop and dwelling of W. A. Dean, a store of Oscar Stall, a hardware store of Rice & Son, and a store, barn and ice house of A. O. Eaton. The flames were not checked until the entire block was burned over. The loss is between $35,000 and $40,000, partially covered by insurance. While trying to save a set of books from the office of the lumber yard James Boardman fell from the second story, broke his ankle and sustained internal injuries from which physicians say he will die.

INSEPARABLY INTERWOVEN.

What Bismarck Thinks of the Questions That Agitate Germany.

Friedrichsruhe, May 27.—Replying to a deputation that visited him from Holstein, Prince Bismarck said that with age and infirmity he would avoid the reception of national demonstrations if it were not necessary to fortify that feeling by practice, but that he had always enjoyed these national displays. In the course of his remarks the old ex-chancellor declared that since 1848 two questions had troubled the German mind—Schleswig-Holstein question, and that of the German fleet. Both were inseparably interwoven. Germans must be thankful that the Danes by their arrogance roused German opposition to the climax of solving the Holstein question and the entire German question.

Advocates War with Turkey.

London, May 27.—In the course of his sermon delivered in the City Temple yesterday, the Rev. Joseph Parker, D. D., said that he had not attended the meetings in London to protest against the Armenian outrages for the reason that these meetings would not come to anything. It was the time for action, he declared, and the only action to be taken was a war against Turkey. Such a war would be the most holy, humane and righteous one the world had ever known.

FIGHTING IN GUIANA

French Marines Fired on by Chief Cabral.

Captain Lunier and Four of His Men Killed While Demanding the Release of a French Subject—The Chief and Sixty of His Followers Lose Their Lives.

Paris, May 27.—M. Chautemps, minister of the colonies, has received a cable dispatch from the governor of French Guiana reporting severe fighting. The dispatch narrates that some Brazilian adventurers captured and robbed a Frenchman named Trajane, a settler on the boundary. Other Frenchmen had been similarly treated, and consequently the governor sent the dispatch vessel Bengali and a number of marines to restore order. When the vessel reached Mapa fifteen boatloads of marines went up the river fifteen miles.

Fired on the Frenchmen.

Captain Lunier and some of the marines landed, and the captain, carrying a flag of truce, proceeded with a bugler and a sergeant towards the village where Trajane was held, intending to demand his release. When they came into the presence of the chief, Cabral, the latter fired at Captain Lunier and ordered his followers to shoot the Frenchmen. A general fusilade was opened on them from all the houses in the village.

Severe Fighting Followed.

Lieut. Destoux, hearing the firing, hurried to the village from the river with a company of marines, and a conflict followed that lasted two hours. Chief Cabral and sixty of his followers were killed. The French lost five killed, including Captain Lunier, and twenty wounded. The dead and wounded were taken to the Bengali, which then returned to Cayenne, where the dead were buried with military honors. M. Chautemps is now conferring by cable with the governor regarding the measures to be taken in the matter.

THE ITALIAN ELECTIONS.

Great Excitement Over the Results Pevail Everywhere.

Rome, May 27.—Advices from the provinces show that great excitement over the result of the elections prevails everywhere. The day passed without disorder, excepting an affray in Naples, in which three persons were wounded. The scrutiny of the ballots continues. The returns thus far received show that all members of the cabinet have been re-elected. Signor Crispi has been returned by several of the electoral colleges or districts of Sicily in which he stood as a candidate. Barbabo, the socialist leader, was elected in Milan and in several districts in the Romagan. Felice Cavallotti, the leader of the extreme radicals, was defeated in Corteolona, but was elected in Piacenza. The socialists seem to have gained several seats.

Morse, the Canton bank president, for breach of promise of marriage has been settled out of court by the payment by the defendant of $20,000. After a trial of three days the jury awarded a verdict of $40,000, but it was set aside. A second suit had been begun which is now supposed to have been settled.

Extraordinary Session Closed.

Jefferson City, Mo., May 27.—The extraordinary session of the legislature adjourned sine die Saturday. The principal objects for which the special session was called were to pass a fellow servant bill and a special election law. The fellow servant bill has never been in danger of passing the senate.

The Fourth Estate:—The Plainfield (N. J.) Daily Press celebrates its eighth birthday with a new and becoming dress.

Mr. Nelson of Dunellen says that the sewage disposal beds will cost the city $240,000. Mr. Nelson of Dunellen should have left off the last cipher and placed the comma after the 4. Then he would have been nearer right.

The following is from The New Jersey Contractor:

The business men of Plainfield are agitating a plan to organize a real estate board of trade and will no doubt have a board soon. Plainfield is a hustling town and her people abreast of the times.

ABOUT PLAINFIELD.

What the New Jersey Contractor Says of This City.

The followiug very flattering article on the advantages of Plainfield as a business and residential place appeared in the New Jersey Contractor of last Saturday.

This city has the distinction of being the third in importance in the suburban district and is exceeded in population by Newark and Elizabeth only. The last census gives it 18,000. As well as enjoying the honor of being the most beautiful city in the State, Plainfield is among the few habitatations that existed before the Revolutionary war, for it is on record that the first frame building was erected in 1735. It was from a high elevation on the neighboring mountain that General Washington used to look over the valley and observe the operations of the British army under General Howe. This spot is beautifully situated on the north side of a picturesque niche in the bold mountain, and has been marked by a tall white shaft that is easily discernible from passing trains.

About 100 years ago the population reached the century mark. A gain in population of over 3,000 is what the city has shown in five years, which speaks well for its attractiveness.

The city is established on a broad plateau, level as a floor, and a finer location could not have been chosen in which to develop a beautiful place of residence. The streets are wide and macadamized and the sidewalks are nearly all flagged. A drive about the city is like an outing in some park. The palatial residences, that are so numerous as to almost make the stranger marvel at the amount of wealth invested, are located back from the streets in the midst of green lawns, shrubbery and flowers, and no two are alike in their architectural designs

Along the curbs great rows of grand old shade trees throw their welcome shadows o'er the highways in Summer. The city has electric light, gas and water. The important feature of sewerage was under discussion previous to 1894, and in that year a system was begun that will extend throughout the city.

As to the water it may be said that a subterranean river underlies the city that is as mysterious as it is wonderful and beneficial. It imparts a moisture through the gravelly soil that furnishes a never-failing supply to those using the artesian well system. It is from this silent river that the sparkling Netherwood water is drawn, and it has never failed, even during the most severe droughts.

The citizens of Plainfield are, for the most part, from the large cities, and are on the alert for everything that savors of city comforts and conveniences. The local government consists of a mayor and common council chosen from the best citizens by election. There is not a dark spot on the record of any official that has thus far served the community, and the financial standing of the city is assured.

And Plainfield is a well-known sanitarium. The Blue Ridge mountain range on the north shields it from the piercing winds of Winter, while the historic Short Hills on the east protect it from the salt air of the ocean. The air is so modified by these natural barriers that persons affected with throat and lung troubles get instant relief. The general healthfulness of the city at all seasons is undisputed.

The amount of business transacted has justified the organization of a Board of Trade. Stores of all kinds furnish all necessary articles for household use. A few of these stores are among the largest in the State.

Plainfield's public schools are of the best. She has also several private schools of sufficient reputation to attract pupils from all parts of the United States. Churches of all denominations, some of them extremely costly and novel in their style of architecture, are located at various parts of the city, and the divines presiding take high rank in their profession.

Socially the city has many resources, including several musical organizations, and an amateur dramatic club, which has included in its membership many well-known society women.

The commuters are furnished an excellent train service, included in which are club cars, given exclusively to commuters' clubs for friendly intercourse, card playing, etc. Between 30 and 40 trains per day stop here each way. Some of them run to New York in 45 minutes.

H. Lewis, Rev. A. B. Blackwell, David Prescott Hall, Mrs. Florence Howe Hall and others. Mrs. Anna Rice Powell, President of Union County Equal Suffrage Association, will preside.

TO RESCUE PEARY.

MRS. PEARY'S LONG SOJOURN IN THE ARCTIC REGIONS.

Six Months of Darkness, Then Days of Bright Sunshine for 24 Hours. Wants to Save Her Spouse. She Will Lecture in Order to Raise the Funds.

While the warm spring sun is brightening the land and making it a bower of fragrant blooms, it seems strange to think of any one being in the barren wastes of rocks and perpetual snows. But this is just where Lieutenant Peary is spending the month of flowers, and where, unless a ship is sent to his relief, he will be destined to pass one more year.

In July, 1893, Lieutenant Peary and his wife left Philadelphia for the Arctic regions and in the September of the following year the wife returned to her home in this country, leaving her husband to spend the winter at his camp in the North. This winter Mrs. Peary has been at the home of her mother in Washington, where she and her baby are still living, waiting for the return of her husband and trying to raise money to charter a ship and go to his rescue. In describing her experience in the Arctics, Mrs. Peary said:

"Our first voyage was in June, 1891, when we started from Brooklyn on the Kite. But it was July when we came to the shores of Greenland, and a very desolate appearance they presented. Not a tree was to be seen, only a sparse undergrowth of low bushes and a wall of harsh, rocky cliffs frowning down on the tumbling sea.

"Mr. Peary had been unfortunate enough to break his leg on the voyage and had to be carried on a litter to the shore, where we had a tent erected and lived in it until a kind of cabin was built. It was now warm, for three months of the year in Greenland are very pleasant.

"The strangest of the new conditions which we had to face was the long day, for from the time we landed until in the fall it was a continuous bright sunshine that flooded the fields during twenty-four hours. It was hard to go to bed with a bright light out of doors telling you that it was day, but we were obliged to get rest and would make our meal times just as if the day was regularly divided as it is here.

"In November the weather grew very cold and as soon as the water froze over the Esquimaux came over in their sleds. I must say that of all nations of the earth these people are the most benighted. There is no religion among them; they have no written language and no morality, according to our ideas of that virtue.

"Men trade off their wives as they would a horse, and obligations of a husband to his wife are unheard of in this land. If a man fancies another man's wife he will go and make an offer and the husband only feels complimented at the tribute paid to the charms of his spouse. I do not think that in the whole of Greenland there is a person who has ever indulged in the luxury of a bath, and you cannot imagine a more filthy people.

"The days began to grow shorter, and by the 26th of October the sun had disappeared for a six months' stay. We were left in darkness, and had to do all our work by lamplight.

"My husband's wish is to come back to America this summer, but I do not see how we can send for him unless we can raise enough money to charter a vessel. It is for this object that I lecture. Of course, I dislike to appear in public, but I think it is my duty to do something for the relief of Mr. Peary, for if he does not get back this fall he will be compelled by the giving out of his provisions to spend the winter among the Esquimaux.

"When he gets home I think he will resume his old post in the navy, for he is now simply on leave and really under the orders of the Secretary."

Mrs. Peary is a very young and handsome woman, with a well rounded figure, hazel eyes, brown hair that waves into a soft bang and a clear complexion. The baby is a pretty little thing with flaxen hair and blue eyes, and has for a playmate an Esquimaux girl of about eight.

Endowment of Universities.

The noble gifts of Seth Low, John D. Rockefeller, Leland Stanford and others to our great colleges and universities are examples of wise generosity that make the world think better of its rich men. If the rich are to get richer and the poor poorer as the world goes onward to the end of destiny, what better method of helping to restore the equality can be found or suggested than the dissemination of knowledge among all the people? The endowments of our great institutions of learning might advantageously run less toward splendid buildings and more toward free scholarship.

The noblest gift to any college in this land was the Prince-Greenleaf bequest to Harvard in 1885, aggregating over $800,000 for the help of poor scholars. We hear much of scholarships, but in reality the end aimed at is not reached. A young man must have a "pull," as we say in politics to acquire a scholarship. Gentlemen, make these scholarships more easy of attainment for the poor young men of the country. The bone and sinew comes from the backwoods. Make it easy for that bone and sinew to get an education and we shall become the finest race on earth.

THE ASSASSINATION.

NOAH BROOKS' RECOLLECTIONS OF THE GREAT TRAGEDY.

The President Did Not Want to Go to the Theater, but Would Not Disappoint the Public, Which Expected Him.

The afternoon and evening of April 14, 1865, were cold, raw and gusty. Dark clouds enveloped the capital, and the air was chilly with occasional showers. Late in the afternoon I filled an appointment by calling on the President at the White House, and was told by him that he "had had a notion" of sending for me to go to the theater that evening with him and Mrs. Lincoln; but he added that Mrs. Lincoln had already made up a party to take the place of Gen. and Mrs. Grant, who had somewhat unexpectedly left the city for Burlington, N. J. The party was originally planned for the purpose of taking Gen. and Mrs. Grant to see "Our American Cousin," at Ford's Theater, and when Grant had decided to leave Washington, he (the President) had "felt inclined to give up the whole thing"; but as it had been announced in the morning papers that this distinguished party would go to the theater that night, Mrs. Lincoln had rather insisted that they ought to go, in order that the expectant public should not be wholly disappointed.

On my way home I met Schuyler Colfax, who was about leaving for California, and who tarried with me on the sidewalk a little while, talking about the trip and the people whom I knew in San Francisco and Sacramento whom he wished to meet. Mr. Lincoln had often talked with me about the possibilities of his eventually taking up his residence in California after his term of office should be over. He thought, he said, that that country would afford better opportunities for his two boys than any of the older States; and when he heard that Colfax was going to California, he was greatly interested in his trip, and said that he hoped that Colfax would bring him back a good report of what his keen and practiced observation would note in the country which he (Colfax) was about to see for the first time.

The next morning I was awakened in the early dawn by a loud and hurried knocking on my chamber door, and the voice of Mr. Gardner, the landlord, crying, "Wake, wake, Mr. Brooks! I have dreadful news."

When we had sufficiently collected ourselves to dress and go out of doors in the bleak and cheerless April morning, we found in the streets an extraordinary spectacle. They were suddenly crowded with people—men, women and children thronging the pavements and darkening the thoroughfares. It seemed as if everybody was in tears. Pale faces, streaming eyes, with now and again an angry, frowning countenance, were on every side. Men and women who were strangers accosted one another with distressed looks and tearful inquiries for the welfare of the President and Mr. Seward's family. The President still lived, but at half-past seven o'clock in the morning the tolling of the bells announced to the lamenting people that he had ceased to breathe. His great and loving heart was still. The last official bulletin from the War Department stated that he died at twenty-two minutes past seven o'clock on the morning of April 15.

Instantly flags were raised at half-mast all over the city, the bells tolled solemnly, and with incredible swiftness Washington went into deep, universal mourning. All stores, government departments and private offices were closed, and everywhere, on the most pretentious residence and on the humblest hovels, were the black badges of grief. Nature seemed to sympathize in the general lamentation and tears of rain fell from the moist and somber sky. The wind sighed mournfully through streets crowded with sad faced people, and broad folds of funeral drapery flapped heavily in the wind over the decorations of the day before.

Wandering aimlessly up F street toward Ford's Theater we met a tragical procession. It was headed by a group of army officers walking bareheaded, and behind them, carried tenderly by a company of soldiers, was the bier of the dead President, covered with the flag of the Union, and accompanied by an escort of soldiers who had been on duty at the house where Lincoln died. As the little cortege passed down the street to the White House every head was uncovered, and the profound silence which prevailed was broken only by sobs and by the sound of the measured tread of those who bore the martyred President back to the home which he had so lately quitted full of life, hope and courage.—Century.

To the average eye more than 5,000 stars are visible; to some extraordinarily keen eyes about 8,000 are visible. Through the largest telescope about 50,000,000 stars are seen; and there is every reason to believe that many times more exist.

"Harry, wait on this gentleman," Weiss called to his assistant. At the same instant I called as from the cellar: "Harry, Harry, come down here and let me out."

"Where are you?" shrieked the lad.

"In the cellar."

"How did you get there?"

"None of your business; come down here and let me out."

"No, I won't."

"Go down," said Weiss to his clerk, "and see who's there."

"Not I. He might do me up."

Weiss was in a quandary. He resolved to rid himself of his unwelcome visitor. Now thoroughly aroused, but fearing to venture down into the cellar himself, he called to the supposed intruder: "How did you get down there?"

Desiring to bring Weiss's voice up to its highest pitch, I replied as from below: "I can't hear you."

"How did you get down there?" fairly shrieked Weiss, as he threw himself on his hands and knees and bent close to the floor in order to make himself heard.

"Go hang yourself," came the voice from below. I had now thoroughly aroused his ire.

"We will see," he said, "who will hang. Harry, go get a policeman."

And forthwith Harry went. The enraged Weiss in his excitement wanted to tender me $3.75 in change for a $2 bill. I waited long enough to see the lad return with a big policeman. Together they repaired in haste to the cellar. I could hear the lad say, as they proceeded on the way:

"You'll hear him call you. He just told me I was a big fool."

Some idea of the extent to which victims may be carried when once under my control may be gleaned from the following incident, true in all its details:

Half a dozen Italian boys selling their "first editions" stood under the shadow of big St. Paul's on Vesey street, New York. Tony Manoli, Angelo and Michael Rossi, Jim Bertoli and Frank Romalo were the names of the five principal actors in the scene. It was midday. The lads were gazing curiously through the big iron fence bars, upon the grand old weather beaten tablets under which rest the bones of long departed folk of Revolutionary times. Suddenly a voice, as from the old church, called:

"Hey, Tony, bring me in a last edition."

The affrighted lads looked at each other in alarm. The more venturesome Tony cried out in answer:

"Where-a you are?"

"I am locked in here. Go and tell the policeman to let me out."

Tony was somewhat reluctant to do as he was bidden. The small lads all have an inherent fear of "de copper," so he replied mournfully:

"I'm afraida da cop."

"Go getta one," urged his companions, while one of them turned to me and asked:

"Wouldna you, Mist?"

"Who wants a paper?" I asked of Tony.

"A deada man. I tinka he mus-a be alive."

"Tony! Tony?" called the voice from the big edifice. "Let me out! I want to get out. I have been here seventy-five years and I am tired."

A crowd had now collected, but those in the rear could hear nothing, as the conversation I carried on was in the low, sepulchral tone. The lads appeared to be under a spell, and not a soul knew the cause of the disturbance.

"He mus-a be hungry." "How he get dere?" "Some-a bod mus-a let-a him out." "It's a big-a shame," they variously observed.

I called from the same spot: "Tony."

"What," he replied quickly, his face a picture of seriousness.

"Go over to the —— building and tell Mr. R. to come here right away. Tell him to let me out."

"What-a you name?"

I gave the name of a friend of Mr. R.

"All right," the lads chorused, and off they dashed for Mr. R.

Imagine my surprise to see Mr. R. ten minutes later with a crowd of eager and panting urchins at his heels, making for the spot with great haste. I tried to retreat without being observed, but the quick eye of my friend detected me in the act. The joke dawned on him at once, and taking me by the arm he led me to the nearest "grocery" to top off the event. C. A. HARTLEY.

The Quakeress Was Appreciative.

One is reminded these hot days of the story of the dainty and demure old Quakeress who didn't dare to express her feelings, and her neighbor in the street car who did. The atmosphere of the car was at the point which, did the thermometers name such a degree, would be termed "sweltering."

The soft cap and kerchief and the sweet smile of the Quakeress were apparently untroubled by such mundane matters as heat. Presently, a big, fat, puffing man entered the car. His countenance looked as if it had been well buttered, his breath came in quick, hard pants, and he was rubbing his handkerchief all over his face and neck.

As he took his seat beside the quiet Quakeress he ejaculated:

"Blankety, blank, blank, blank, dash it, dash, dash, dash, dash, blank, dash, dash, blank, dashety, blankety."

At which the dear old Quakeress turned to him and said: "Thank thee."

SKETCHES OF LINCOLN.

Settling Down to the Practice of Law.

EFFECT OF HIS POLITICAL DEFEAT.

His Talent as a Story Teller—How He Appeared In the Law Office—His Most Striking Characteristic—How the Fees Were Divided.

[From "The Life of Lincoln" by William H. Herndon and Jesse W. Weik. Copyright, 1888, by Jesse W. Weik. Copyright, 1892, by D. Appleton & Co.]

XVI.

While a member of congress and otherwise immersed in politics, Lincoln seemed to lose all interest in the law. Of course what practice he himself controlled passed into other hands. I retained all the business I could and worked steadily on until, when he returned, our practice was as extensive as that of any other firm at the bar. Lincoln realized that much of this was due to my efforts, and on his return he therefore suggested that he had no right to share in the business and profits which I had made. I responded that, as he had aided me and given me prominence when I was young and needed it, I could afford now to be grateful if not generous. I therefore recommended a continuation of the partnership, and we went on as before. I could notice a difference in Lincoln's movement as a lawyer from this time forward. He had begun to realize a certain lack of discipline—a want of mental training and method. Ten years had wrought some change in the law and more in the lawyers of Illinois. The conviction had settled in the minds of the people that the pyrotechnics of courtroom and stump oratory did not necessarily imply extensive or profound ability in the lawyer who resorted to them. The courts were becoming graver and more learned, and the lawyer was learning as a preliminary and indispensable condition to success that he must be a close reasoner, besides having at command a broad knowledge of the principles on which the statutory law is constructed. There was, of course, the same riding on circuit as before, but the courts had improved in tone and morals, and there was less laxity—at least it appeared so to Lincoln.

Political defeat had wrought a marked effect on him. It went below the skin and made a changed man of him. He was not soured at his seeming political decline, but still he determined to eschew politics from that time forward and devote himself entirely to the law. And now he began to make up for time lost in politics by studying the law in earnest. No man had greater power of application than he. Once fixing his mind on any subject, nothing could interfere with or disturb him. Frequently I would go out on the circuit with him. We usually at the little country inns occupied the same bed. In most cases the beds were too short for him, and his feet would hang over the footboard, thus exposing a limited expanse of shin bone. Placing a candle on a chair at the head of the bed, he would read and study for hours. I have known him to study in this position till 2 o'clock in the morning. Meanwhile I and others who chanced to occupy the same room would be safely and soundly asleep.

On the Circuit.

On the circuit in this way he studied Euclid until he could with ease demonstrate all the propositions in the six books. How he could maintain his mental equilibrium or concentrate his thoughts on an abstract mathematical proportion while Davis, Logan, Swett, Edwards and I sc industriously and volubly filled the air with our interminable snoring was a problem none of us could ever solve. I was on the circuit with Lincoln probably one-fourth of the time. The remainder of my time was spent in Springfield looking after the business there, but I know that life on the circuit was a gay one. It was rich with incidents and afforded the nomadic lawyers ample relaxation from all the irksome toil that fell to their lot. Lincoln loved it. I suppose it would be a fair estimate to state that he spent over half the year following Judges Treat and Davis around on the circuit. On Saturdays the court and attorneys, if within a reasonable distance, would usually start for their homes. Some went for a fresh supply of clothing, but the greater number went simply to spend a day of rest with their families The only exception was Lincoln, who usually spent his Sundays with the loungers at the country tavern and only went home at the end of the circuit or term of court.

"At first," relates one of his colleagues on the circuit, "we wondered at it, but soon learned to account for his strange disinclination to go home. Lincoln himself never had much to say about home, and we never felt free to comment on it. Most of us had pleasant, inviting homes, and as we struck out for them I'm sure each one of us down in our hearts had a mingled feeling of pity and sympathy for him." If the day was long and he was oppressed, the feeling was soon relieved by the narration of a story. The tavern loungers enjoyed it, and his melancholy, taking to itself wings, seemed to fly away.

As a Story Teller.

In the role of a story teller I am prone to regard Mr. Lincoln as without an equal. I have seen him surrounded by a crowd numbering as many as 200 and in some cases 300 persons, all deeply interested in the outcome of a story which, when he had finished it, speedily found repetition in every grocery and lounging place within reach. His power of mimicry, as I have before noted, and his manner of recital were in many respects unique if not remarkable. His countenance and all his features seemed to take part in the performance. As he neared the pith or point of the joke or story every vestige of seriousness disappeared from his face. His little gray eyes sparkled, a smile seemed to gather up, curtainlike, the corners of his mouth, his frame quivered with suppressed excitement, and when the point, or "nub," of the story, as he called it, came no one's laugh was heartier than his. These backwoods allegories are out of date now, and any lawyer ambitious to gain prominence would hardly dare thus to entertain a crowd, except at the risk of his reputation, but with Lincoln it gave him in some mysterious way a singularly firm hold on the people.

How Lincoln appeared and acted in the law office has been graphically and, I must confess, truthfully told by a gentleman, now in New York, who was for several years a student in our office. I beg to quote a few lines from him: "My brother met Mr. Lincoln in Ottawa, Ills., one day and said to him, 'I have a brother whom I would very much like to have enter your office as a student.' 'All right!' was the reply. 'Send him down, and we will take a look at him.' I was then studying law at Grand Rapids, Mich., and on hearing from my brother I immediately packed up and started for Springfield. I arrived there on Saturday night. On Sunday Mr. Lincoln was pointed out to me. I well remember this first sight of him. He was striding along, holding little Tad, then about 6 years old, by the hand, who could with the greatest difficulty keep up with his father. In the morning I applied at the office of Lincoln & Herndon for admission as a student.

A Modest Office.

"The office was on the second floor of a brick building on the public square, opposite the courthouse. You went up one flight of stairs and then passed along a hallway to the rear office, which was a medium sized room. There was one long table in the center of the room and a shorter one running in the opposite direction, forming a T, and both were covered with green baize. There were two windows which looked into the back yard. In one corner was an old fashioned secretary with pigeonholes and a drawer, and here Mr. Lincoln and his partner kept their law papers. There was also a bookcase containing about 200 volumes of law as well as miscellaneous books. The morning I entered the office Mr. Lincoln and his partner, Mr. Herndon, were both present. Mr. Lincoln addressed his partner thus: 'Billy, this is the young man of whom I spoke to you. Whatever arrangement you make with him will be satisfactory to me.' Then, turning to me, he said: 'I hope you will not become so enthusiastic in your studies of Blackstone and Kent as did two young men whom we had here. Do you see that spot over there?' pointing to a large ink stain on the wall. 'Well, one of these young men got so enthusiastic in his pursuit of legal lore that he fired an inkstand at the other one's head, and that is the mark he made.' I immediately began to clean up about the office a little. Mr. Lincoln had been in congress and had the usual amount of seeds to distribute to the farmers. These were sent out with Free Soil and Republican documents. In my efforts to clean up I found that some of the seeds had sprouted in the dirt that had collected in the office. Judge Logan and Milton Hay occupied the front offices on the same floor with Lincoln and Herndon, and one day Mr. Hay came in and said, with apparent astonishment, 'What's happened here?' 'Oh, nothing,' replied Lincoln, pointing to me, 'only this young man has been cleaning up a little.' One of Lincoln's striking characteristics was his simplicity, and nowhere was this trait more strikingly exhibited than in his willingness to receive instruction from anybody and everybody. One day he came into the office, and addressing his partner said, 'Billy, what's the meaning of antithesis?' Mr. Herndon gave him the definition of the word, and I said, 'Mr. Lincoln, if you will allow me, I will give you an example.' 'All right, John, go ahead,' said Mr. Lincoln in his hearty manner. 'Phillips says in his essay on Napoleon, "A pretended patriot, he impoverished the country; a professed Catholic, he imprisoned the pope," etc.' Mr. Lincoln thanked me and seemed very much pleased. Returning from off the circuit once, he said to Mr. Herndon: 'Billy, I heard a good story while I was up in the country. Judge D. was complimenting the landlord on the excellence of his beef. "I am surpirsed," he said, "that you have such good beef. You must have to kill a whole critter when you want any." "Yes," said the landlord, "we never kill less than a whole critter."'

"Lincoln's favorite position when unraveling some knotty law point was to stretch both of his legs at full length upon a chair in front of him. In this position, with books on the table near by and in his lap, he worked up his case. No matter how deeply interested in his work, if any one came in he had something humorous and pleasant to say, and usually wound up by telling a joke or an anecdote. I have heard him relate the same story three times within as many hours to persons who came in at different periods, and every time he laughed as heartily and enjoyed it as if it were a new story. His humor was infectious. I had to laugh because I thought it funny that Mr. Lincoln enjoyed a story so repeatedly told.

Dividing the Fees.

"There was no order in the office at all. The firm of Lincoln & Herndon kept no books. They divided their fees without taking any receipts or making any entries on books. One day Mr. Lincoln received $5,000 as a fee in a railroad case. He came in and said, 'Well, Billy,' addressing his partner, Mr. Herndon, 'here is our fee. Sit down and let me divide.' He counted out $2,500 to his partner and gave it to him with as much nonchalance as he would have given a few cents for a paper. Cupidity had no abiding place in his nature.

"I took a good deal of pains in getting up a speech which I wanted to deliver during a political campaign. I told Mr. Lincoln that I would like to read it to him. He sat down in one chair, put his feet into another one and said: 'John, you can fire away with that speech. I guess I can stand it.' I unrolled the manuscript and proceeded with some trepidation. 'That's a good point, John,' he would say at certain places, and at others, 'That's good—very good indeed,' until I felt very much elated over my effort. I delivered the speech over 50 times during the campaign. Elmer E. Ellsworth, after colonel of the famous zouaves, who was killed in Alexandria early in the war, was nominally a student in Lincoln's office. His head was so full of military matters, however, that he thought little of law. Of Ellsworth, Lincoln said, 'That young man has a real genius for war!'"

His Mother's Maiden Name.

Dennis and John Hanks have always insisted that Lincoln's mother was not a Hanks, but a Sparrow. Both of them wrote to me that such was the fact. Their object in insisting on this is apparent when it is shown that Nancy Hanks was the daughter of Lucy Hanks, who afterward married Henry Sparrow. It will be observed that Mr. Lincoln claimed his mother was a Hanks.

Lincoln's Hatred of Oppression.

To Newton Bateman, October, 1860: "I know there is a God, and that he hates injustice and slavery. I see the storm coming, and I know that his hand is in it. If he has a place and work for me, and I think he has, I believe I am ready. I am nothing, but truth is everything. I know I am right because I know that liberty is right, for Christ teaches it, and Christ is God."

A Fitting Tribute.

Mr. Lincoln seems to me too true and honest a man to have his eulogy written, and I have no taste for writing eulogies. I loved the man as he was, with his rugged features, his coarse, rebellious hair, his sad, dreamy eyes, and I love to see him, and I hope to describe him as he was and not otherwise.—Robert Dale Owen, Jan. 22, 1867, MS.

KNEW THE COLONEL.

I was sojourning in the land of the far Southwest and contentedly loafing, as particularly suits the climate and a second lieutenant, when the office door was opened slowly and a head covered with an old Grand Army hat was thrust in. The eyes of the head peered around from under their ragged eyebrows and took on a look of keen disappointment. The lips moved but made no sound: then the head was withdrawn and the door almost shut. It opened again a very little way, and disclosed part of a blue clad figure some six feet in height.

Then it closed again and opened as before, only somewhat wider. I swung round in my chair and waited to see what would happen. The man came in-si the room, but kept one hand on the knob, to facilitate his escape, if necessary, it appears.

I held my peace and watched him. He was worse than unkempt: he was, in fact, about as seedy an individual as I have ever seen covered by a Grand Army coat; his eyes were red and his hand shook badly. I suspected at once what the trouble was, knowing the failing of his class.

I let him decide to speak first, however; but he took his time. Reconciling himself to the shutting of the door, and relinquishing his grasp on the knob at last, he took off his hat and sat at the extreme edge of the chair. He studied the window panes intently and chewed his tobacco in a meditative fashion. There were no telling how long this might last, so I faced about to my desk again and began to write.

Fully ten minutes elapsed before the silent figure gave any sign.

"I'm busted again," it began.

The announcement evidently called for no expression of surprise. I gave none.

"Yes?" I answered.

"Uh-hu."

I went to my copying again. Five more minutes.

"Where's the Colonel at?"

"He's sick."

"Oh! he is?" This in a tone of a child reading a primer. "What's the matter with 'im?"

"He's got the grippe."

"When's he coming back?"

"In two or three weeks, perhaps."

"Oh, damn!" Quite as you or I might mildly say "pshaw."

The veteran continued to look at the window and chew.

"I wanted to see the Colonel."

"Is there anything that I can do for you?"

"Nope." A resumption of the window and tobacco. "I'm busted again."

"So you said."

"I've been drunk, too."

"Well, you look rather like it."

"Do I?" He examined his hat and hands and boots. "I reckon I do." He smiled genially. "Queer, ain't it, how you most generally can tell."

"Very queer," I agreed.

"Now, I thought I looked pretty good, but I reckon I was off."

"You might be worse," I consoled him. "I've seen them look worse."

"Yes, so've I." His knowledge of the world was evidently as good as mine. The pause was repeated.

"I told you I was busted, didn't I? Well, what in blazes do you suppose I told you for?"

"I really can't say."

"Can't you, really?" I felt that I was the target at which fine, sarcastic arrows were being aimed. "Wasn't you ever busted?"

With a truthfulness far greater than might generally be felt, I replied that I had been, sometimes. Only a second lieutenant like myself can appreciate the honesty of my answer.

"Well, what do you generally want when you're in a hole?"

"Money."

"That's what I want."

The deduction was so logical and obvious that I felt like a child who had been given to reason on some such axiom as "Green apples make boys sick. John ate green apples. John is sick." The old soldier was evidently pleased with the impression he had made. I felt my nerves trembling and fell weakly into the net.

"I suppose you want me to lend you some?"

"Nope, but I want you to give me some."

"Oh, do you? Doesn't it strike you that you are a bit cheeky?"

"Nope. You're going to give me some, ain't you?"

"Well, I really can't see why I should."

"The Colonel does."

I did not doubt it; the Colonel's unusual poverty was ascribed in the regiment to just that sort of thing.

"The Colonel may have some reason for it. Besides, how do I know he does?"

"I say so." The tone was above dispute.

"Very good; but as I said, the Colonel probably has some reason for it. How often do you go on sprees?"

"When I get my pension."

"And do you spend every cent?"

"Generally; yep."

"And does the Colonel act as your paymaster whenever you are hard up?"

"Yep."

"Might I inquire why he supports you in the path of destruction?"

"Huh?"

"Why does he help you go to the bad?"

"It does him more good than it does me hurt, I guess."

The depth of the sentiment was appalling; moreover, it was exquisitely convenient. From a physical standpoint it might be true enough, but looked at from the view of temporal comfort, the argument was bad. The Colonel was not one deliberately and in cold blood to care for the cultivation of his soul; there must be some other reason and I said so.

"I reckon there is."

"What is it?"

"I done him a service once."

"May I ask what it was?"

"I jest kept his little brother from getting shot."

"How was that?"

"Oh, it's a blamed long thing to tell."

"Never mind; I want to hear."

"Well, will you give me a quarter if I tell you?"

"What will you do with it?"

"Get two drinks."

"All right; go on."

He sat even further upon the edge of his chair and held one shaky arm out straight. I wondered if he might be going to declaim or repeat some ancient verse.

"That's how I got that arm."

"What arm?" I inquired, looking at the member.

"That. Don't you see I can't bend it?" I noticed it now for the first time and he rosé in my estimation. "The piece of shell cut through my arm and along in here," placing his palsied fingers on his side. "The Colonel set an awful lot of store by that brother of his. His name was Kingsley, and he wasn't more'n 18. He was a mighty fine feller, too, and they told a lot of stuff about his havin' a young wife up there in the North. They sez she was the very girl the Colonel was mashed on, too. I dunno how true it was, but I reckon it wasn't all lies, because the Colonel ain't never married, and onct when he had the fever he done a lot of talkin' about some woman named Dora, an' that was the name that Kingsley told me his wife had. The Colonel's a good hearted cus, ain't he?"

I replied with conviction that he was.

"If it had been me an' my brother, I'd have wanted him killed off, I guess; but the Colonel he like to have went crazy every time the youngest got in the hot part of a fight. He sez to him onct—I heard him—'If you should be shot, it 'ud jest end Dora'; and one time they got a letter sayin' that Dora had a little girl. The Colonel told Kingsley then that he'd have to take more care of himself than ever. Kingsley, he just laughed. He was a brave feller, kind of hot headed, and I guess he wasn't as much in love with his Dora as the Colonel was."

The story came to an abrupt end here. The veteran was thinking over his past. In course of time he went on:

"Onct, just before the baby was born, there was a fight and the Colonel couldn't make Kingsley stay where it was safe. He jest laughed and went right into the fuss as soon as he could get there. The Colonel, he was charging around like a hen that's hatched ducks and sees 'em swimmin'. But he couldn't get near his brother. He was by me for a minute and he sez to me to keep that fool boy out of trouble. 'Bout ten minutes later a shell busted near us and I got in front of Kingsley. That's all."

That was all. It certainly didn't sound like much, as the laconic old fellow put it. I looked at his face, which was to the last degree "battle scarred," as the soldiers say; at his nervous hands and wavering eyes, his filthy coat and shapeless hat. This was all that was left of a hero—a man who for a mere friend had risked death and endured worse than death. I admired a character I could not understand. Then, with the sophistry of my race and kind, the mighty virtue of small souls, I condemned his weakness.

He was disgusting; a dirty old drunkard, a beggar, too; a man who would ask for a dime to get a drink with; lost to all pride and sense of shame. It was men of his kind who gave old soldiers such a hard name; and then I remembered that it was men of his kind who had composed our army; who had "made a thoroughfare for freedom and her train"—a thoroughfare which no fifty by three hundred miles can measure—a thoroughfare for destiny and a pathway on eternity.

However, I came down to his mental level by degrees. He was quivering with anticipation and the hand of the good arm was lying on his knee, ready to be stretched out at a moment's notice. I assumed the air that went usually with the act of swearing men into Uncle Sam's service, and which is the nearest one to severe and unimpeachable virtue that a lieutenant can command.

"What makes you drink like that?" I felt that the role of reformer did not suit me.

"I like it."

"But why don't you try to stop?"

"Can't—now."

"You could have once?"

"Yep."

"Whatever made you start in?"

"The pain from the wound. I got drunk to stop it, and by and by, when it had stopped for good, I couldn't let up. Ain't you done askin' questions yet? I want that quarter."

Now, I have no doubt that I was guilty of an infringement of the laws of the State of California in assisting to promote drunkenness and disorder—if not legally, morally—and I also realize that the powers that be would have been justified in depriving me of the detail in that fair State which I thoroughly understood to be a very soft thing after the rigors of Montana weather, because I was helping one who drew the pension which the Government kindly gives to its disabled supporters, and who was the inmate of a soldiers' home, to bring discredit on his kind; but my conscience did not reproach me in the least for turning over to him enough of my month's pay to keep him gloriously drunk for a week, nor did it even when, two hours later, I saw him taken in a limp and senseless state to the station house. I told the Colonel and he paid the veteran's fine—for the thirty first time, he informed me.—San Francisco Argonaut.

Duty as Directed.

Dr. Pillem—Did you administer the opiate at 9 o'clock, as I directed?

Mrs. Gamp (with a sniff)—That I did, sir. But it seemed a pity to have to wake the poor man out of the first sound sleep he's had in four days to give it to him!

Agreeably Surprised.

"I had a very severe cold on my lungs that caused much soreness and gave me considerable uneasiness in regard to the result," says Mr. T. E. Smith, of Billerica, Mass. "A local druggist called my attention to Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and on his recommendation I gave the remedy a careful trial. The result surprised me; I recovered entirely in three days." 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy.

A Remarkable Cure of Rheumatism.

From the Groton Connecticut Review.—"David Lewis, who has been afflicted all winter by rheumatism, is out again and all due to one of the medicines advertised in our columns. After trying everything possible, he used Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which has relieved him of all pain, from which he was a constant sufferer and promises to make him fit for duty soon. We know David has been a great sufferer and are glad to see him around again." For sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy.

Mr. D. Wiley, ex-postmaster, Black Breek, N. C., was so badly afflicted with rheumatism that he was only able to hobble around with canes, and even then it caused him great pain. After using Chamberlain's Pain Balm he was so much improved that he threw away his canes. He says this liniment did him more good than all other medicine and treatment put together. For sale at 50 cents per bottle at Reynolds's Pharmacy.

THE DAILY PRESS

ESTABLISHED MAY 10, 1887. PLAINFIELD, N. J., TUESDAY, MAY 28, 1895. TWO CENTS A COPY—$5 A YEAR.

A CHORAL JAMBOREE.

A Delightful Evening With the Singers.

FIFTY CENTS WAS THEIR PROFITS.

Charles W. McCutchen is the President for the Coming Year—Success of the Past Gives Great Hopes for the Future—Artistic Programme Rendered at the Finale.

The most successful season of the Choral Society since its organization came to a fitting end last evening when the "jamboree", as it is called, was held in Vincent Chapel. It was largely attended by the members and their friends, and everyone declared it a delightful evening.

President Charles W. McCutchen introduced David E. Titsworth as "ring master" and under his guidance the entertainment was continued. Mr. Titsworth first announced a piano duet by Miss Jessie Utter, the accompanist and Edward J. Fitzhugh, the conductor, and remarked that "if he would conduct her to the piano she would accompany him". A march by Bohm was then rendered in a most artistic manner. Two selections "More and More" by Tosti and a "Lullaby" by Hughes were sung by George H. Simonds, baritone. Mr. Simonds, who is the New Jersey agent of the Home Life Insurance Company and a citizen of Newark, is the possessor of a very sweet voice and a richness of tone that quite delighted his hearers.

The Ladies Chorus of about forty-five next gave the cantata "The Lady of Shalott" by Bendell. Mr. Fitzhugh acted as conductor and the solo parts were sung by Miss Delphine Bowers, Mrs. Asa Collier and Mrs. Samuel Collins.

The rendering of this selection was most excellent, both on the part of the chorus and the soloists.

Lewis E. Bond next favored his fellow choralites with the tenor solo from the cantata "Rebekah" by Barnby. President McCutchen made a few remarks, speaking of the great success of the last year and the greater hopes for the future.

After another baritone solo by Mr. Simonds entitled "Anacreon, a Poet", by Arnold, a business session of the society was held. Mr. Howland was elected secretary, pro tem, as Nelson Runyon, the regular secretary, was detained at home as the result of a bicycle accident, and read the secretary's report. G. T. Rogers read his report as treasurer and showed that the society had paid all its debts and had 50 cents left.

The following officers were then elected for the coming year: President, Charles W. McCutchen; vice-president, David E. Titsworth; secretary, Nelson Runyon; treasurer, G. T. Rogers; librarian, N. Y. Hull; assistant librarian, S. R. Raynolds; directors, Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards, D. E. Davis, Dr. R. J. Shaw.

An amendment to the constitution providing for the appointment of an Advisory Board from the subscribing members was carried.

A vote of thanks was extended to the Ladies Chorus for the kind entertainment.

The meeting then adjourned and all united in spending a social hour together while a committee served ice-cream and cake.

The committee in charge of the refreshments consisted of Misses Runyon, Blair, Jackson, Sharp, Potter, Stevens, Woltman, Hasbrouck, Marsh, and Mrs. N. Y. Hull. They were assisted by a number of the young men in passing the good things.

After a very pleasant evening the Choral Society disbanded for the Summer.

Happy May.

Yesterday afternoon the eighth birthday of May Garrity of Arlington avenue was celebrated by her many little friends, who were Lilia and Gertrude Coddington, Julia Grisly, Kittie Conshee, Arthur Grisly, Etta Garrity, Willie Garrity, George Rittenhouse, Anna Cooper, Miss Evely Vardon, Mrs. Grisly, Mrs. Garrity, and Mrs. Conshee. Many presents were received. The party had a merry time playing games, after which cake, ice cream, and candy and lemonade were served.

It Did the Business.

Mr. J. H. Cobb, publisher of the Mirror, at Brockton, N. Y., says: "For nearly two years the Mirror has been publishing the advertisements of Chamberlain's Remedies. A few days ago the writer was suffering from a bowel trouble and resorted to an old remedy which did not prove efficacious; finally he tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and two doses did the business, checking it completely. LET GOOD MEN WEEP.

That is What Was Said When John Hand Died.

HIS FACE WAS TOWARDS THE FOE.

A Thrilling and Exciting Article From "The Plainfield Union" of 1861 That Will Interest the Boys in Blue and Every Other Patriotic Citizen—A Name That Lives in Memory.

The following article is taken from "The Plainfield Union", under date of Tuesday, Sept. 3, 1861, and is especially interesting at this time, as the Sons of Veterans, who have taken the name of John Hand, will hold special services over his grave at Scotch Plains, Thursday morning. He was a brother of Capt. William Hand of this city.

It reads as follows: "Let traitors rejoice and good men weep, for another patriot has fallen, with his face toward Heaven and his feet to the foe, and from the little band of noble men who went from among us to the field of battle, one has already been laid a bleeding sacrifice upon the altar of Liberty.

"John Hand, a name that will live long in the memory of our people, was one of those who went forth in our first quota to the war. Sundering all the ties of friendship, of social and domestic relations, he went out from among us to maintain the honor of our flag and defend our liberties; and yesterday he was brought back to his home cold in death, and clad in the simple uniform he had so honored. It appears that a party of about 40 men, of which Mr. Hand was one, was out on a scouting party, when they were attacked by a large rebel force, who attempted to surround and capture them. They retreated and were fired upon, and in this unfortunate skirmish two of them were killed, Mr. Hand of Plainfield, and Mr. Daily of Elizabeth. Mr. Hand's remains, in charge of an officer, were brought to his friends yesterday morning. As the news spread throughout the village that one of our company had fallen, a shadow seemed to settle down upon the place. Even the carriages seemed to glide along with a more subdued rumble, and everything gave evidence that some great sorrow had fallen upon our people. At noon the stores were all closed, business was suspended, flags hung at half-mast, and draped in mourning, and every token of respect was manifested toward the departed soldier. A sister had died on Saturday, the same day on which Mr. Hand was killed, and they were to be buried side by side. About one o'clock the procession moved, the soldier's hearse covered with the flag he had died in defending, and his coffin wrapped in its fold, while the young Zouaves formed his body-guard. A sadder procession, and perhaps a larger, never passed through our village. We counted 60 wagons, including the hearses, and many walked all the way to the Scotch Plains, where the funeral rites were performed. It spoke louder than words for the patriotism of our village, and was a fitting tribute to the patriotic dead.

"In the evening a large and enthusiastic meeting was held at the Methodist Church, to afford an opportunity for an expression of sympathy, and of patriotic determination. Excellent speaking was made by the Rev. Messrs. Luke, Atkinson, Bailey and Crandall, and also by Messrs. Runyon, Marsh, Orton and Hasbrouck. A more substantial evidence of sympathy in the shape of pecuniary aid, was proposed by Mr. Orton, and a collection was taken, but we have not learned the amount received. A series of resolutions were adopted by the meeting, expressive of their feeling. The meeting was every way a success. With no general notice of the meeting the church was well filled, and the enthusiasm more general and free than at any previous meeting."

Spalding Racing Team Entered in the National Circuit Meet.

THE TALENT COMING.

The Bicycle Riders Gathering for Thursday's Event.

THE SPALDING TEAM ARE HERE.

And With Them are Some of the Celebrities of the Sporting World—Record Breakers Who Will Try to Break More Records at the Meet.

Never before has there been so many noted sporting people in Plainfield as there are today, all of whom have come to attend the National Circuit meet of the Crescent Wheelmen on Decoration Day. Early this morning a party of the racers arrived from Louisville, whose names are well-known to every wheelman in the country. They are: David Shafer, trainer and manager of the Spalding racing team; Pete McCue, his assistant; Walter C. Sanger, the "Big Un"; L. Dute Cabanne, the "Black Adonis"; Fred J. Titus, the "Marble Heart"; Conn Baker, the Hoffman team crack and Manager E. N. Humphres; F. Ed Spooner, "On the Spot"; Master Lee Richardson, the premier fancy bicycle rider of the world; W. C. Ingersoll, representing the National Cycle News Bureau of New York. Pictures of the Spalding team are published above. The following is a brief sketch of Master Lee Richardson:

TITUS ON THE WHEEL.

In all the history of trick and fancy cycle riding, the game has never produced a better or more graceful exponent than Master Lee Richardson, who today holds the world's record for backward riding, both wheel and man traveling backwards. This is a feature of the performance that has never been attempted by any other rider, for even a short distance, while Master Lee rides half miles with as much grace and apparent enjoyment as do our cracks in the usual manner. Lee has been a rider for the past thirteen years, having mounted the smallest ordinary ever made, at the early age of three. His repertorie of tricks and forms of riding are extensive, enabling him to entertain the same audience for hours at a time. At Louisville on Saturday last he went against his own world's record of 2:32 2-5 for a half mile in backward motion, lowering it to the phenomenal time of 2:29.

Negotiations are now pending for Master Lee's appearance at the meet here on the 30th. If the arrangements are effected, Master Lee will go for a new world's record for a longer distance, and endeavor to lower his half-mile record.

CYCLING COMMENT.

The Crescent Wheelmen meet this evening.

The Rover Cycle Club of New York will have a run to this city July 7.

Charles Lister sold an Apollo wheel to H. Stewart of Cranford last night, and a Wynnewood to W. Western of North Plainfield.

W. J. Helfert of Utica, and Conn Baker of Columbus, O., are additional entries for the big cycle meet, Thursday, at the Crescent Oval.

The wheels belonging to the Spalding team, Titus, Sanger and Cabanne, together with several other wheels, arrived this morning on the 6:05 train from Louisville.

The kranks will have an opportunity on Saturday to witness an exhibition of the National game. The Y. M. C. A. team will meet the Cranfords on Crescent Oval. An admission of 15 cents will be charged, to help pay the expenses of the team. All lovers of the game should assist the young men in furnishing good sport this Summer.

The Spalding team of racing cyclists, consisting of Sanger, Cabanne, Fred Titus and others of less prominence, passed through Buffalo yesterday morning enroute to Plainfield, where they will compete in the National Circuit races. Sanger and the rest of the party were outspoken in their condemnation of the suspension of Eck and Johnson, and spoke of them as martyrs to Gideon's desire for revenge for an oldtime difference with Eck. It seemed to be the consensus of opinion among them that Gideon's administration of L. A. W. affairs would soon kill cycle racing by the scandals which it was occasioning.

What is practically a revival of the old New Jersey Road Racing Association is the movement being fostered by the Metropolitan Association of Cycling Clubs. And all of the New Jersey Clubs within its membership have signified their approval of the scheme. The plan is for a series of road races between teams representing the clubs of the association. There are two plans, by the way, which have been proposed as the best means of determing the championship of the association. The first is when more than three clubs compete, the teams are divided into sections, and trial heats ridden. Then the winners of the several heats meet in a final race for the championship. The other plan is to have each club meet every other club once and the winner of the most victories to be declared the champion team. The committee having this matter in charge will soon hold a meeting and determine upon the association's action, and if it is decided to hold the races, the particulars will be arranged. The distance, it is understood, is to be ten miles.

CABANNE ON THE WHEEL.

SANGER ON THE WHEEL.

MR. GOLDSTEIN INNOCENT.

He Was the Victim of Being Too Accommodating to Friends.

Jacob Goldstein, who was indicted by the Grand Jury on the charge of aiding, assisting and receiving the stolen goods of the Robinson boarding house theft, appeared in court in Elizabeth this morning and pleaded not guilty to the charge. He was released on $500 bail for appearance at trial on June 7.

It is the consensus of opinion by those conversant with the circumstances of the case that Mr. Goldstein is entirely innocent of the charges preferred against him. Though the goods were in his store a day or two, just as soon as he learned that there had been a robbery, he immediately made known the fact of their being there, and lent whatever aid he could in locating the guilty parties.

Judge Coddington appeared for Mr. Goldstein in court this morning.

TO KEEP PEOPLE SOBER.

Col. Hadley Explains a Temperance Movement.

WILL BE LOCALIZED TO PLAINFIELD.

The Object Is to Build Up and Strengthen the Church, Instead of Criticising and Weakening It—Politics and Denominationalism to Be Eliminated.

Sunday afternoon the audience at Reform Hall listened with close attention to an address from Col. Hadley, in which he described the new Christian Temperance Movement that has already become popular in many sections of the country. The technical or incorporate name of the society is The Christian Man's Union for Total Abstinence and Rescue Work. It was organized nearly two years ago with a National Committee in New York, whose headquarters are at 433 Lexington avenue, near the Grand Central depot. The officers are: John H. Huyler, president; Col. H. H. Hadley, vice-president and manager; A. E. Yates, secretary; George F. Langenbacher, treasurer. Among the members of the National Committee are: Rev. B. Fay Mills, the great evangelist; H. M. Moore of Boston, president of Moody's Seminary; C. N. Crittenton, the founder of the many rescue missions of his name; Samuel H. Hadley, superintendent of the Jerry McAuley Water Street Mission, New York; Col. Wm. Evans, Hon. John G. Wooley, C. H. Mead, Thomas Edward Murphy, Rev. S. Edward Young of Newark, and other noted workers, who feeling in this work the great need of an undenominational temperance work, neutral as to politics, formed this National Union which already has branches in many parts of the United States and Canada. It is claimed to be the only temperance movement on the platform of which all denominational and political preferences are buried.

According to Col. Hadley's description in order to be a member of any local Union the applicant must be a member of some evangelical church in the place, and to continue to be a member in good standing and must attend the meetings of their own church every Sunday and the prayer or class meetings once a week if possible.

The members further agree to help build up the churches to which they belong, and neither in public or private conversation criticise churches, church members, or those connected with any other religious or temperance movement. They are formed to represent in the community Christian, temperance and rescue work in connection therewith.

To this end each member agrees to try and seek and save at least one victim of drink each year, but before such recruit can become a full member of the Union he must unite with some church and be a regular attendant at its meetings.

The object of the Union thus being to strengthen and build up the church, instead of criticising and weakening it, and to that end the national committee in good faith invites the co-operation of the churches everywhere. At any meeting of the Union (local or National), any mention or attempt to discuss politics or denominationalism is equivalent to a resignation by the speaker, and he may be called to order as no longer a member.

The majority of the officers and members of a local Union must be men, and every member agrees to do individual rescue work, endeavoring to pay special attention to one drinking person by trying to bring him or her to the meetings of the Union; and through the Union, if he is worthy and sincere, into the church of his choice. It is hoped by the friends of the movement to inaugurate aggressive branches all over the country. During the past year seven of the local Unions which were formed throughout the country, have become successful rescue missions. It is a movement of the laymen for the non-churchgoers.

To Assume New Duties.

Captain March of the Salvation Army, who has been visiting in this city for the past three weeks, leaves tomorrow to take charge of Corps No. 9 on the Bowery in New York. She will be assisted by Lieutenants Mills and Watson. Sunday evening's the meetings will be conducted in Cooper Union.

The Factory Commenced.

The building which Chapot & Sons will use for their chamois skin finishing plant will be 41x200 feet and two stories high. The cost will be $8,000. Ground was broken for the building this morning by J. Manning & Son, who have the contract for erecting the structure.

MR. GRESHAM IS DEAD

Secretary of State Passed Away This Morning.

The End Came Peacefully at the Family Apartment in the Arlington Hotel—His Wife, Daughter and Son-in-law Present—The True Condition of the Secretary Was Withheld from the Public Until Last Evening—Acute Pneumonia Developed Last Saturday—Powerful Stimulants Used to Prolong Life—The President Kept From His Premier's Bedside by Illness.

Washington, May 28.—Secretary of state, Walter Q. Gresham, died at 1:15 o'clock this morning. No death could be more quiet, more calm or more peaceful. For two hours preceding dissolution there had been no indication either of a pulse or heart-beat. He lay during that time with his head resting on the arms of his daughter, Mrs. Andrews, while his devoted wife sat by his side, his hands clasped in hers; his face so turned that his last conscious gaze should rest upon her.

Like a Child Sinking into Slumber.

And so the minutes dragged slowly on until the end came. He was conscious to the last. He suffered greatly during the preceding forty-eight hours, after the pneumonic symptoms were complicated with his diseases and was only temporarily relieved by frequent hypodermic injections. But as the end approached his suffering disappeared, and he passed away as quietly as a little child sinking to slumber in the arms of its mother.

Funeral Arrangements.

Arrangements for the funeral will be made after Otto Gresham, son of the deceased, shall arrive in Washington this morning from Chicago.

Mrs. Gresham's Great Grief.

Mrs. Gresham's long pent up grief could not be restrained when she realized that the secretary was dead. She leaned over his body, calling him affectionately by name, and was with difficulty removed from his side. President Cleveland was at once notified by telegram.

Facts Held from the Public.

The official statement given out by the secretary's physicians last night, as to his condition, shows that it was much more serious since Saturday last than either they or the others who had admission to the sick room would acknowledge. After the pneumonic symptoms appeared injections of nitro-glycerine and strychnine were administered freely, and yesterday afternoon and last night normal saline injections, aggregating several quarts, were given.

Lay in a Stupor.

During the afternoon the secretary lay in a stupor, which was the foundation for the report that he was "resting easily." As soon as the physicians, however, realized that the end was approaching, the heroic measures usual in such cases, were adopted. Notwithstanding their efforts the patient sank rapidly. The physicians in attendance were Messrs. W. W. Johnston and Prentiss of this city, the latter having been called into the case within the past few days. Last evening Dr. Van Rensalear was also called in and it was he who performed the operation of injecting the normal saline.

The Sad News Announced.

At 10 o'clock Dr. Prentiss, acting for himself and his colleague, Dr. Johnston, prepared a brief statement of the secretary's condition, which closed with the declaration that his case was practically hopeless. In conversation with a United Press reporter a few minutes later, Dr. Prentiss said that his patient might live through the night and possibly until noon of to-day, but he believed this the utmost limit of time that he could last.

Telegrams To Relatives.

At 8.30 last night a telegram was sent to Judge Otto, of Philadelphia, telling him to come to the bedside of the secretary, as he is dying. Judge Otto was a comrade of the secretary in the late war. A telegram was also sent to Secretary Gresham's son, Otto Gresham, at Chicago, informing him that the end was near, and to hasten to Washington without delay.

Crowds in the Hotel Corridors.

The Arlington hotel, in the corridors and at the private entrance, was crowded with distinguished officials until late last night, anxiously awaiting the end. Among those who called were Chief Justice Fuller, the assistant secretaries of the department of state, Private Secretary Thurber, Assistant Postmaster General Jones and Maxwell, Comptroller Eckels and members of the diplomatic corps and other prominent department officials. No one, of course, was admitted to the Gresham apartments.

Acute Pneumonia Developed.

Dr. W. W. Johnson, the physician who has been in daily attendance on Secretary Gresham, gave out the following statement of the case at 9 o'clock last night: Mr. Gresham's illness has been an acute pleurisy with effusion, beginning on May 1. From May 13 his condition was enirely favorable and his speedy recovery was confidently expected. On May 25 symptoms of a relapse appeared, due to the development of acute pneumonia.

The President Kept Advised.

The president had been exceedingly anxious about the condition of Secretary Gresham, and was constantly advised as to it, though confined to his room for the past two days with a billious attack. He sent word that if it was possible for him to see the secretary or be of any assistance to him he would be glad to come in, but the physicians advised that it would be impossible for the secretary to see any one. The president was better last night and expects to be in the city to-day.

Left Alone With His Family.

At 10:10 p. m. a bulletin was issued. It said: Secretary Gresham is unconscious and unable to recognize any one at his bedside. At 11 o'clock the physicians ceased their efforts to revive him, as his system was entirely too weak to respond to their efforts. At midnight the secretary was sinking fast. His pulse was beating feebly. The doctors retired from the room, leaving the patient alone with his family.

The End Came at 1.15.

At 12.20 the announcement was made that the secretary could not live more than a half an hour and the end was expected at any moment. For the past hour the secretary gave no indications of a pulse or heart beat. At that hour he was conscious, but had lost the use of his voice. Mrs. Gresham was sitting by his side with his hands clasped in hers, while his daughter, Mrs. Andrews, held his head clasped in her hands. The only other person in the room was Mr. Andrews, his son-in-law. At 1 o'clock the dying man closed his eyes and at 1.15 passed away as if in a sleep.

Sketch of Gresham's Career.

Walter Quinton Gresham was little more than sixty-three years old when his record as soldier, jurist and statesman was closed by death. He was essentially an Indianian, though of late years claiming residence in Illinois. Born in Harrison county, Indiana, March 17, 1832, and receiving all his early education and legal training in that state, he abandoned a prosperous law practice, and a membership in the state legislature in August, 1861, to throw his whole energies into the prosecution of the war for the protection of the Union. His gallant and conspicuously able services in that capacity secured him the strong friendship of General Grant and the respect of his confederate opponents which was frequently manifested in after life.

Wounded at Atlanta.

He entered the service as lieutenant-colonel of the 38th Indiana volunteers, was breveted brigadier-general for gallantry in the siege of Vicksburg and ratified as major-general. In the operations before Atlanta, Ga., while commanding a division in General Frank Blair's corps he received wounds while charging at the head of his brigade which put him in the hospital for nearly a year and to a considerable extent incapacitated him up to the end of his life.

Declined a Pension.

He was awarded a pension for this disability but after he became secretary of state declined to receive it, although the constant and intense suffering resulting from those injuries undoubtedly augmented the physical ailments which contributed to his death.

Appointed District Judge.

After the war closed he was brought forward prominently as a political candidate. He ran for congress in the New Albany, Ind., district in 1866 as a republican and was defeated. Then he was appointed financial agent of his state in New York city, and while holding this position was selected by President Grant for appointment as United States district judge in his native state.

Defeated by Harrison for Senator.

In 1880, when one of the customary changes in the complexion of the Indiana legislature made it possible to elect a republican to succeed Joseph E. McDonald to the United States senate, Judge Gresham and Benjamin Harrison were the leading candidates for the position, and Mr. Harrison secured the election.

As Postmaster General.

After the death of Garfield in 1882 Judge Gresham was tendered the position of postmaster general in President Arthur's reorganized cabinet and resigned his district judgeship to accept it. When Secretary Folger died in 1884, after his defeat as candidate for governor of New York by Grover Cleveland, Mr. Gresham was transferred to the treasury portfolio thus vacated.

Circuit Judge.

The duties of a cabinet officer and the exacting requirements involved in the disposal of the patronage of one of the greatest executive departments of the government were not to his taste, and at his own request President Arthur nominated him, after barely three months' service as secretary of the treasury, to the positon of circuit judge for the seventh judicial circuit, which embraces the states of Indiana, Illinois and Wisconsin. He retained this position until, at Mr. Cleveland's urgent personal request, he joined Mr. Cleveland's second cabinet as secretary of state.

NEW YORK POLICE CHANGES.

Retirement of Chief Byrnes—Dr. Parkhurst Is Satisfied.

New York, May 28.—The retirement from the police force yesterday of Chief Thomas Byrnes was not a surprise to many as it was generally understood he was to go. The retirement was made upon his own application, and he was placed on the pension list at $3,000 a year for life. Inspector Conlin will be acting chief and Capts. Brooks, McCullock and Cortright will be acting inspectors.

Parkhurst Gratified.

On being asked what he thought of Chief Byrnes' retirement, Dr. Parkhurst said: "The result satisfies me and gratifies me. My warfare, however, has not been against Mr. Byrnes as a man, but as an official, and now that he has ceased to be an official, it seems to me that for me to pass any further comment upon the matter would be both unwarranted and undignified."

HALF A CROP EXPECTED

Reports From the Principal Wheat Growing States.

Unfavorable Weather and Insects Have Caused Much Damage—Acreage Harvested Will Be Materially Smaller This Year—Reserves of Old Wheat Very Small.

Toledo, O., May 28.—During the past four days a commission firm here has received replies from 4,578 reliable grain dealers and millers, covering every important wheat county in the six principal winter wheat states which generally raises two thirds of that crop in the United States. Three thousand one hundred and eleven replies are from the larger wheat producing counties and 1,467 from the less important. Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Kansas send about 900 reports each, while Michigan and Missouri, the smaller wheat states, contribute about 500 each.

Present prospects in the six states, reduced acreage considered, is for about half a wheat crop. Ohio and Michigan promise the best, about two-thirds of a crop; Missouri, about half a crop; Indiana, a trifle below half; Illinois worse, and Kansas about a quarter. Three hundred and twenty-two report prospects a trifle better than an average; 511 an average; 1,086 three-quarters of a crop; 1,590 half a crop; 461 about 35 per cent.; 430 only a quarter and 372 say it will be a failure. The latter are mostly from Kansas and Illinois.

Michigan shows but little and Illinois the most; 533 report no damage; 1,500 complain of the unfavorable weather; 1,130 say damage was caused by fly; 770 by chinch bugs; 1,087 say frost and 122 rust. Missouri has suffered from chinch bugs; Kansas had bad weather early; Illinois and Indiana suffered most from fly. Michigan has had no insect trouble yet.

Only 91 say it will be a trifle more; 916 say it will be about the same; 1,177 an eighth smaller; 637 a quarter smaller; 421 a third smaller; 629 a half less; 403 say two-thirds or more less. Kansas and Illinois show the worst. More is being plowed up than usual.

Small Reserves of Old Wheat.

Reserves of old wheat are very small. Ohio has the most. Sixty-three of all report a third of last crop remaining; 300 say a quarter; 183 a fifth; 2,120 an eighth; 1,348 a sixteenth, and 1,488 say none left.

The body was buried at Santiago de Cuba at 8 o'clock yesterday morning after it had been fully identified.

DEBS DENIED A WRIT

The Strike Leader Must Serve His Sentence.

Decision of the United States Supreme Court in the Contempt Cases Growing Out of the Great Railway Strike in the West—Judge Woods Says He Is Greatly Gratified.

Washington, May 27.—The supreme court in an opinion read by Justice Brewer denied a motion for an order for the issue of a writ of habeas corpus filed by Debs and his associates of the American Railway union. They will have to serve the sentence imposed upon them by the court. The case, it will be remembered, arose in the United States circuit court of the northern district of Illinois. Debs and others disobeyed the order of the court enjoining them from further interference with interstate commerce and the carrying of the United States mails.

Three to Six Months Sentences.

They were brought before the court for contempt and sentenced to from three to six months imprisonment. The case was brought before the supreme court on a motion for leave to file a petition for writ of habeas corpus, which was fully argued by Debs' counsel on the one side and Attorney-General Olney on the other. The decision of the court sustains the decision of the court below.

Judge Woods Gratified.

Chicago, May 28.—Judge Woods, when informed by a United Press reporter of the decision of the supreme court in the Debs contempt case, said he was highly gratified to learn that his opinion had met with the sanction of the supreme court. "Especially, in this instance," he continued, "do I feel more than a usual gratification. I believed that I was right in issuing the injunction last summer against the officers of the American Railway union and being right in the law, the right to punish the men for contempt followed as a natural consequence.

Will Not be Crowded.

"I do not know when the men will enter upon their uncompleted sentences, but I suppose that they will be given a reasonable time to report to the marshal." Asked if the criminal proceedings, pending in the district court, will now be abandoned on the ground that the sentence he imposed was for the commission of the same acts with which they are charged in the indictments, Judge Woods said: "I cannot understand why the criminal proceedings should be abandoned."

Attorney Darrow Surprised.

BUCHANAN TO DIE JULY 1.

Believed That His Lawyers Have Exhausted the Last Resource.

Albany, May 28.—The case of Dr. Buchanan is the first on record where a condemned murderer has been taken before the court of appeals to show cause why he should not be resentenced. Yesterday's sentence was the fourth death sentence passed on Buchanan, and it is generally believed that his attorneys have now exhausted every technicality in the law to further delay the execution. Buchanan was brought to Albany by Warden Sage, State Detective Jackson and two keepers. He was handcuffed to the keepers. The proceedings before the court were brief. District Attorney Fellows, of New York city, addressing the court said: "It is the contention of the people that the judgment stands in effect, but the day of execution having passed, a new day must be set."

Asked for More Time.

Buchanan's counsel said that he had already filed a brief with the court, but he desired to add that lately he had discovered new evidence. "I am satisfied," said he, "that if we have time we can prove this man's innocence, and if the court will give us a commission to inquire as to his guilt or innocence we will present proof." Judge Andrews then said that the court could not consider the merits of the case, because it has already, in a former decision, given its opinion as against the defendant, and as to the question whether anything has intervened between that time and now to cause a delay, they had, after a very careful consideration of the questions presented, concluded that it was their duty to obey the statute. The warden of Sing Sing was then commanded to execute Buchanan during the week beginning July 1.

OYSTER WAR IS ON.

Pirates and Owners Exchange Shots and One Man Is Wounded.

Bridgeton, N. J., May 28.—The first real battle between the oyster pirates and riparian owners of Delaware bay took place yesterday. Eight pirate craft have been steadily working over the grounds. Oliver and Harry Gandy and others fired on them to frighten them off. Instead of having a terrifying effect the fusilade incited the pirates to give battle, and their boats came in and landed eight men, who chased two riparian men, believed to be the Gandy brothers, two miles through the marsh, firing at them as they ran. The two became exhausted and in desperation stopped and fired on their pursuers, shooting Capt. John Hilton, of the sloop Armstrong, in the knee and making a dangerous wound. The battle then stopped. Hilton was taken on a boat to Port Norris for treatment.

WAR ON FREE SILVER

New York State Board of Trade To Act.

They Decide To Enter Upon a Crusade To Make at Once a Definite Issue Between Cheap Money and Sound Money—The Fight To Cover the Whole Country.

New York, May 28.—The chamber of commerce of the state of New York have decided to enter upon a crusade against free silver coinage. Their announced intention is to make at once a definite issue between cheap money and sound money and lay all other questions aside, calling upon every friend of sound currency to enlist at once in the campaign against cheap money.

The Line of Attack.

The crusade is to cover every section of the country, a general committee of twenty-eight members, including leaders in every line of business in the metropolis, has been appointed to direct the line of attack. Among its members are Isador Straus, Gustav H. Schwab, Frederick A. Constable, August Belmont, J. Pierpont Morgon, Carl Schurz, Cornelius Vanderbilt, John Sloane, Anson Phelps Stokes, Morris K. Jesup and Edward King.

To Formate Sound Money Clubs.

The general committee includes an executive committee of nine, of which Gustav H. Schwab is chairman, and there are sub-committees on press and publication, on correspondence, on co-operation with kindred organizations, on formation of sound money clubs and on finance.

The Objects Outlined.

Gustav H. Schwab, in outlining the position of the Chamber of Commerce, says: "The committee hold that they represent not only the New York business man who can protect himself and make money on a silver basis, as well as a solid basis, but the interests of the wage-earner, who cannot protect himself against the avarice of the mine owner.

No Bank Currency Plan.

The committee does not discuss plan of bank currency. Mr. Schwab is himself a mine owner. Francis Lee Chrisman, a former Washington correspondent and a well known newspaper man of this city, has been placed in charge of the committee's headquarters.

Washington, May 28.—Orders have been telegraphed to commander Charles M. Thomas, of the Bennington, now at Mare Island Navy Yard, Cal., to proceed to Honolulu as soon as repairs on his vessel are completed, and report to Admiral Beardslee. The Bennington will remain in Hawaiian waters indefinitely for the protection of American interests and the flagship Philadelphia, upon being relieved of that duty, will come to San Francisco for extensive repairs and docking. Admiral Beardslee is expected to return in his flagship, as it is not deemed necessary to keep a naval officer of his high rank any longer in the islands, especially as his station includes the entire western coast line of this continent from Point Barrow to Cape Horn.

Dynamite Outrage on an Old Veteran of the Late War.

Reading, Pa., May 28.—Frank Bossler, a veteran of the late war and a pensioner, occupies a log hut near Bowers, this county. He lives alone and is employed at a stone quarry. Sunday night some unknown person placed a dynamite bomb alongside of the cabin and the structure was almost completely demolished, including the bed in which Bossler slept. Strange to say, however, Bossler escaped injury. He was robbed some time ago of thirty dollars, and it is supposed the same party blew up the hut with a view of robbing or killing him.

Can anyone blame The Daily Press for saying yesterday "Shoot the dog", when they read the prize dog communication given below.

In the death of Secretary of State Walter Q. Gresham the nation loses a type of a man whose personal convictions rather than party pledges and precedents guided his public career.

Mr. Nelson of Dunellen says that such land as the city wants for sewage purposes will cost $1,000 per acre. Mr. Nelson of Dunellen should come down just one-half in his estimate. The city has purchased 53 acres for $23,500.

After wrangling for a month or more over the disposition of spoils, the Paterson Board of Aldermen have at last got together and made their selections. The reformers of New Brunswick should follow suit.

A CAVALRY CHARGE.

BY M. QUAD.

[Copyright, 1895, by American Press Association.]

We had been held in reserve on the second day at Gettysburg so long that men and horses became nervous and afraid. My horse was an old veteran who would drop his head and pick at the green grass with a battery firing on either side of us, but as the moments dragged away on this occasion he evinced a woman's nervousness. I looked down the lines and saw that the alignment was constantly being broken by the horses backing up or forging ahead. They could see the fighting to the right and in front, and the smoke from the Union battery to the left and in front of us drove back and over us and the horses breathed it in and blew it out of their nostrils in gasps.

A tremor of excitement—a sort of shiver—ran down the line.

The wind had shifted a bit to blow the smoke to our left, and down across the meadows we saw the Confederate cavalry forming, with the green woods for a background. Jeb Stuart's men were there, Ashby's men, men from Hampton's legion, Imboden's Virginians, Rosser's rangers, guerrillas from Mosby's command. There were fragments from every cavalry command we had met on the turnpikes of old Virginia, and there wasn't a squadron which wouldn't stand for a charge. The battery began firing more rapidly, and there wasn't a man of us who did not realize what was coming long enough before we got the word. Some of the horses knew it too. You could feel them filling their lungs and stringing up their nerves for hard work.

"They are going to charge our battery!" was the exclamation on every man's lips, but we could not be sure of just the part we were to play in the affair. If dismounted and used as infantry to support the guns, we could make a desperate fight of it, and for several minutes we listened to hear such an order given. During this time an aid rode up with an order to the colonel. It was an order from the general to retire the battery. It had come too late. Some of the battery horses had been killed and a number of others wounded by the explosions of the [illegible] shells thrown at us from the woods by the Confederate cavalry, and the way to the rear was also blocked by the ammunition wagons which had come up. The battery would be lost or saved right where it stood.

At the end of five minutes, while we yet sat waiting, the troopers in gray wheeled into line under a fire which must have tried the nerves of the bravest, and then the compact mass got the word to advance. They were coming for our battery, which was without infantry supports. There we stood, two thin, short lines, representing a thousand dragoons, but not numbering one-half of that figure, and a body of five to one was moving down upon us. I saw several of the gunners look back. They saw the odds and wondered perhaps why we did not run away.

"Attention!"

We had obeyed the order before it was given.

"Right dress!"

We were a few seconds ahead of the command.

"Forward—draw sabers—guide right—trot!"

Ah! We are off! The gray moves north and the blue moves south. We are going to meet in the meadow below. We must hold them back until infantry supports can be brought up. Every man knows that he is moving down into a maelstrom of death, but no one lags. A strange exultation creeps into the heart. It is as if you had heard some grand, good news, and wanted to shout over it and tell everybody of your good luck.

"Gallop—charge!"

Death! Why, if one could die a score of times instead of only once, there would be no fear. I sit so lightly in the saddle that my horse seems to have no weight to carry. He skims over the ground as if he had wings, and I begin cheering and yelling in chorus with my comrades. It is a living missile of 500 men thrown at the front of 3,000. What a crash there will be! How horses will go down and men pitch from their saddles! Afraid? No! Why, man, I would not miss this scene for a year's life! My hand clutches the saber with a strength I did not know I possessed. I feel a hunger for blood such as I never felt before.

"Yi, yi! Whoop—rah!" and we strike them fair in the center. The 500 have the greatest momentum, and we drive through the 3,000 as a wedge is pounded into soft wood. Men strike at me. There is a flash, flash, and a pop, pop, of pistols. I strike back. I feel the desire of the tiger to slay.

"Rally!"

We have driven through the mass, and the bugles sound the call to gather for the return. The horses obey it without a touch of the rein. It seems that the whole living mass is riding in a circle, and that there is blood on every man and horse. All of a sudden we shoot out from under the smoke cloud into the sunshine—not the 500, but the 300—and the battery opens again. We are to the right of it, and it sends grapeshot into a wild mob to drive it back into the cover of the woods. It is a sight to look down over that field. Five hundred dead and wounded men and horses are lying there. It is only as I sit on my horse and look over the field that I begin to feel weak and grow frightened. My head begins to swim, things grow dark, and some one helps me to the ground. I have a pistol ball in my shoulder, and the blood is running down my back from a saber cut on the head.

Not Forgotten.

When the sun sinks to rest on Memorial day, lighting with red flashes the green hills of May, wherever the dust of a soldier awaits the call of Gabriel's bugle there will flutter a fresh flag and bloom a wreath of flowers. Man dies, soldier and civilian, in war and peace, but the memory and gratitude of the nation live and will live till republics are no more and the earth is rolled together like a scroll.

THE BISHOP'S GHOST AND THE PRINTER'S BABY.

By Frank R. Stockton.

(Copyright, 1895.)

Around the walls of a certain old church there stood many tombs, and these had been there so long that the plaster with which their lids were fastened down had dried and crumbled so that in most of them there were long cracks under their lids, and out of these the ghosts of the people who had been buried in the tomb were in the habit of escaping at night.

This had been going on for a long time, and, at the period of our story, the tombs were in such bad repair that every night the body of the church was so filled with ghosts that before daylight one of the sacristans was obliged to come into the church and sprinkle holy water everywhere. This was done to clear the church of ghosts before the first service began, and who does not know that if a ghost is sprinkled with holy water it shrivels up? This first service was attended almost exclusively by printers on their way home from their nightly labors on the journals of the town.

The tomb which had the largest crack under its lid belonged to a bishop who had died more than a hundred years before, and who had a great reputation for sanctity; so much so, indeed, that people had been in the habit of picking little pieces of plaster from under the lid of his tomb and carrying them away as holy relics, to prevent disease and accidents.

This tomb was more imposing than the others, and stood upon a pedestal so that the crack beneath its lid was quite plain to view, and remarks had been made about having it repaired.

Very early one morning, before it was time for the first service, there came into the church a poor mason. His wife had recently recovered from a severe sickness, and he was desirous of making an offering to the church. But having no money to spare, he had determined that he would repair the bishop's tomb, and he consequently came to do this before his regular hours of work began.

All the ghosts were out of their tombs at the time, but they were gathered in the other end of the church, and the mason did not see them, nor did they notice him; and he immediately went to work. He had brought some plaster and a trowel, and it was not long before the crack under the lid of the tomb was entirely filled up, and the plaster made as smooth and neat as when the tomb was new.

When his work was finished, the mason left the church by the little side door which had given him entrance.

Not ten minutes afterward the sacristan came in to sprinkle the church with holy water. Instantly the ghosts

"COULD YOU GET OUT AND GO TO YOUR OWN TOMB?"

began to scatter right and left, and to slip into their tombs as quickly as possible, but when the ghost of the good bishop reached his tomb he found it impossible to get in. He went around and around it, but nowhere could he find the least little chink by which he could enter. The sacristan was walking along the other side of the church, scattering holy water, and in great trepidation the bishop's ghost hastened from tomb to tomb, hoping to find one which was unoccupied into which he could slip before the sprinkling began on that side of the church. He soon came to one which he thought might be unoccupied, but he discovered to his consternation that it was occupied by the ghost of a young girl who had died of love.

"Alas! alas!" exclaimed the bishop's ghost. "How unlucky! Who would have supposed this to be your tomb?"

"It is not really my tomb," said the ghost of the young girl. "It is the tomb of Sir Geoffrey of the Marle, who was killed in battle nigh two centuries ago. I am told that it had been empty for a long time, for his ghost has gone to Castle Marle. Not long ago I came into the church and finding this tomb unoccupied, I settled here."

"Ah, me!" said the bishop's ghost, "the sacristan will soon be around here with holy water. Could not you get out and go to your own tomb; where is that?"

"Alas, good father," said the ghost of the young girl, "I have no tomb; I was buried plainly in the ground, and I do not know that I could find the place again. But I have no right to keep you out of this tomb, good father; it is as much yours as it is mine, so I will come out and let you enter; truly, you are in great danger. As for me, it doesn't matter very much whether I am sprinkled or not."

So the ghost of the young girl slipped out of Sir Geoffrey's tomb, and the Bishop's ghost slipped in, but not a minute before the sacristan had reached the place. The ghost of the young girl flitted from one pillar to another until it came near the door, and there it paused, thinking what it should do next. Even if it could find the grave from which it had come, it did not want to go back to such a place; it liked churches better.

Soon the printers began to come in to the early morning service. One of them was very sad, and there were tears in his eyes. He was a young man, not long married, and his child, a baby girl, was so sick that he scarcely expected to find it alive when he should reach home that morning.

The ghost of the young girl was attracted by the sorrowful printer, and when the service was over and he had left the church it followed him, keeping itself unseen. The printer found his wife in tears; the poor little baby was very low. It lay upon the bed, its eyes shut, its face pale and pinched, gasping for breath.

The mother was obliged to leave the room for a few moments to attend to some household affair, and her husband followed to comfort her and when they were gone the young girl approached the bed looked down on the little baby. It was nearer death than its parents supposed and scarcely had they gone before it drew its last breath.

The ghost of the young girl bowed its head; it was filled with pity and sympathy for the printer and his wife. In an instant, however, it was seized with an idea, and the next instant it had acted upon it. Scarcely had the spirit of the little baby left its body than the spirit of the young girl entered it.

Now a gentle warmth suffused the form of the little child, a natural color came into its cheeks, it breathed quietly and regularly, and when the printer and his wife came back they found their baby in a healthful sleep. As they stood amazed at the change in the countenance of the child, it opened its eyes and smiled upon them.

SHE HAD A LONG CONVERSATION WITH THE BISHOP'S GHOST.

"The crisis is past!" cried the mother. "She is saved, and it is all because you stopped at the church, instead of hurrying home, as you wished to do." The ghost of the young girl knew that this was true, and the baby smiled again.

It was eighteen years later and the printer's baby had grown into a beautiful young woman. From her early childhood she had been fond of visiting the church, and would spend hours among the tombs reading the inscriptions, and sometimes sitting by them, especially by the tomb of Sir Geoffrey of the Marle. There, when there was nobody by, she used to talk with the Bishop's ghost.

Late one afternoon she came to the tomb with a happy smile on her face. "Holy father," she said, speaking softly through the crack, "are you not tired of staying so long in this tomb which is not you own?"

"Truly, I am, daughter," said the Bishop's ghost; "but I have no right to complain. I never come back here in the early morning without a feeling of the warmest gratitude to you for having given me a place of refuge. My greatest trouble is caused by the fear that the ghost of Sir Geoffrey of the Marle way some time choose to return. In that case I must give up to him his tomb. And then, where, oh where, shall I go?"

"Holy father," whispered the girl, "do not trouble yourself; you shall have your own tomb again, and need fear no one."

"How is that?" exclaimed the Bishop's ghost. "Tell me quickly, daughter."

"This is the way of it," replied the young girl. "When the mason plastered up the crack under the lid of your tomb he seems to have been very careful about the front part of it, but he didn't take much pains with the back where his work wasn't likely to be seen, so that there the plaster has crumbled and loosened very much, and with a long pin from my hair I have picked out ever so much of it, and now there is a great crack at the back of the tomb, where you can go in and come out just as easily as you ever did. As soon as night shall fall you can leave this tomb and go into your own."

The Bishop's ghost could scarcely speak for thankful emotions, and the happy young girl went home to the house of her father, now a prosperous man, and the head printer of the town.

The next evening the young girl went to the church and hurried to the Bishop's tomb. Therein she found the Bishop's ghost, happy and content.

Sitting on a stone projection at the back of the tomb, she had a long conversation with the Bishop's ghost, which, in gratitude for what she had done, gave her all manner of good advice and counsel. "Above all things, my dear daughter," said the Bishop's ghost, "do not repeat your first great mistake; promise me that never will you die of love."

The young girl smiled. "Fear not, good father," she replied. "When I died of love I was, in body and soul, but 18 years old, and knew no better; now, although my body is but 18, my soul is 36. Fear not, never again shall I die of love."

DECORATION DAY.

'T'S lonesome, sort o' lonesome.
It's a Sund'y day to me,
It 'pears like, mor'n any day I nearly ever see.
Yit with the stars and stripes above
a-flutterin in the air
On ev'ry soldier's grave, I'd love to lay a lily thare.

They say, though, Decoration days is ginerly observed
Most everywhares—espeshally by soldier boys that's served—
But me and mother's never went—we seldom git away,
In p'int o' fact, we're allus home on Decoration day

They say the old boys marches through the streets in columns grand,
A follerin the old war tunes they're playin on the band,
And citizens all jinin in and little children, too—
All marchin under shelter of the old red, white and blue

With roses, roses, roses—ev'rybody in the town
And crowds o' little girls in white—just fairly loaded down
Oh, don't the boys know it from theyr camp acrost the hill?
Don't they see theyr com'ardes comin and the old flag wavin still?

Oh, can't they hear the bugul and the rattle of the drum?
Ain't they no way under heavens they can rickollect us some?
Ain't they no way we can coax 'em through the roses jest to say
They know that ev'ry day on earth's theyr Decoration day?

We've tried that, me and mother, whar Elias takes his rest
In the orchard in his uniform and hands acrost his brest,
And the flag he died fer smilin and a-ripplin in the breeze
Above his grave and over that the robin in the trees

And yit it's lonesome, lonesome. It's a Sund'y day to me.
It 'pears like, mor'n any day I nearly ever see
Still with the stars and stripes above a flutter in in the air
On ev'ry soldier's grave, I'd love to lay a lily thare

VON GRIFF'S SURRENDER.

BY SEWELL FORD.

[Copyright, 1895, by American Press Association.]

All who knew Von Griff, the baker, knew him to be a proud man Perhaps his pride was so well known because he did not hide it But concealment was something too subtle for the warm hearted, impetuous German His likes and his dislikes were as easy to read as the big blue sign above his bakery door. Some there were among his customers whom he treated with open scorn. Yet they were not driven away, for Von Griff's bread was good

There were several things of which Von Griff was proud, but his ever increasing bank account was not one of them

Von Griff had a daughter Rosie was her name He loved Rosie, and he was proud of her Von Griff also had a sword. It is not too much to say that he loved his sword, and it is but stating the bare fact to say that he was intensely proud of it.

A picture of Von Griff's heart would have revealed two shrines In one shrine would have been seen his daughter—in the other his sword.

None questioned him his pride in Rosie. There were those, however, who ridiculed his pride in his sword and scoffed at his love for it The ridiculing and the scoffing took place apart from the presence of Von Griff.

The sword was a huge, wicked looking blade of steel in a brass bound, battered scabbard It hung by day over the little desk at the end of the bakery counter. At night it was suspended on the wall of Von Griff's chamber and was the first object on which his eyes rested when he woke, as it was the last on which they closed when he lay down to sleep

All who were friends of his knew the story of that sword, and had admired it. His particular friends had even been allowed to draw the huge blade This assured them that they stood high in Von Griff's esteem To these he told stories of his war spent youth, pointed to the white line which started just above his right temple and was lost in the grizzled hair on top of his head, and, with flashing eye and nostrils once more a-quiver, spoke of the field of Sedan where a French saber had left that mark

And so it was that many knew the story of that sword To strangers was pointed out the baker who, as a German soldier

"YOU—YOU—YOU VANT TO MARRY MINE ROSIE!"

had once met face to face a giant of the terrible Old Guard of Napoleon in deadly conflict and left him with his skull cleft in twain by a single stroke of that big sword Doubters were shown the very sword and silenced

When Von Griff left the fatherland, his sword was the greater part of his property True, there was a tin trunk, and his good wife carried a few precious thalers which the passage money had not absorbed. He had not so much pride in the sword then. But as he prospered in the new land his pride grew, and he fixed it on the cherished blade, and when Rosie grew into a bright eyed, pink cheeked, fluffy haired beauty, she, too, shared in his pride. The hard-working mother had died just as the industry of herself and her husband began to bring generous reward.

Von Griff's pride, as has been hinted, was not a purse born pride. Even after he owned two large tenements and two cottages he still lived over his store and wore the same gray clothes

Simple were the habits of Von Griff. He loved to sit, on summer evenings, under the bakery awning, pipe in hand, and gossip with his neighbors. Sometimes he read—always of wars.

It happened that he was thus occupied one evening when Rosie, with sparkling eyes and flushed cheeks, came into the sitting room. He held a magazine in one hand and his long pipe in the other.

"Oh, Rosie, mine dear, come here. I vos reading someding here, und I like you to finish id for me. Eh? That's a good girl."

"All right, papa, after I've"—

"Now, Rosie, now Let dot vait und read me."

So Rosie, who was a good girl, proceeded to read. It was a story of Gettysburg's fierce fight The tale was little to Rosie's liking, but she did not hesitate. As she read on and the story pictured that fearful three days' struggle on the hill tops, the warlike baker's blood was stirred. As the story detailed the slaughter in the bloody angle and in the wheatfield, and how Little Round Top was lost and captured again, his eyes flashed with excitement. But it was when the writer told of how, for hour after hour, the troops of both armies lay, face to the ground, while above them flew the iron storm from the opposing batteries, that he was stirred most. Von Griff told himself that not even on the historic field of Austerlitz was there such an awful cannonading. The description of the roar that seemed to shake the earth and sky as well reached him with full force. Had he not known the same terror himself? Heartily he agreed with the writer that the men who stood their ground there and waited during that duel of iron throated monsters until their turn came were indeed brave men and heroes.

"Rosie, dot vos grand, grand, grand!" he exclaimed when she had finished.

"Yes, I know, papa. But now I want you to listen to me. There's some one in the parlor who's coming in to say something to you, and I want you to be real nice to him."

Then she gave her father a kiss and a hug and tripped into the next room

"Vot is dot you say, Rosie?"

Von Griff could not change the current of his thought so quickly, and Rosie's words were all but lost upon him.

On his mind was still pictured the field of Gettysburg when a young man came in from the parlor

"Ah, dot vos grand, grand! Heroes dey were, heroes Yes, und—vell, vell?"

He had realized that some one was present

"Ah, Meester Fairfieldt. Vell, vot is id now? Vant to dake Rosie to some more dances, eh? My chrachious, but you boys vill turn mine hair vite. Always vanting mine Rosie to go somevere."

"Mr von Griff," said Jack Fairfield "I want to ask you something more serious than that this time."

"Vell, vell, oudt with it," said the unsuspecting baker.

"I want—sir, I—I"—

Jack hesitated in spite of himself while he groped for the carefully prepared speech. But it was gone. He could not remember a word of it, and there he was standing stammering like a schoolboy with a half learned lesson.

"Vell, vell," said Von Griff impatiently.

Jack made a last effort to recall that elusive speech and then blurted out, "I want Rosie, Mr. von Griff, for my wife."

"Vat?"

The word seemed to be the result of an internal explosion. The baker had leaned forward in his chair in an effort to rise quickly to his feet, but had failed. All this had added to the lurid color of his face and deducted from his lung power. He made another effort to rise and succeeded.

"Vat!" he exploded again. "You—you—you vant to—to marry mine Rosie?"

"Yes, sir," said Jack, half wondering whether the baker was really going to explode or only choke himself. "She is willing, for I have asked her, and I came to get your consent."

"You—you did, eh? Hah! My consent! Vell, sir, you vill nefer get it—nefer. Vat, mine Rosie marry a jackanapes of a nobody! Mine Rosie"—

"But I'm somebody to Rosie," put in Jack, thinking a little argument might be a relief.

"To Rosie, eh? Hah! But vat are you? Who are you? Answer me dot Who is your father?"

"You know my father, Mr. von Griff."

"Yes, I know him. He iss another nobody—a nobody, I dell you. Leaf mine house und nefer come here some more. Go avay quick!"

There seemed to be nothing for Jack to do but go It was very plain that the baker was in no mood for argument, and, much as Jack wished to retort to the statement that he and his father were nobodies, he turned on his heel without a word and left the house.

Jack did not understand the cause of Von Griff's wrath. He looked upon it merely as the temporary ruffling of an old man's temper that a day would smooth out But Rosie knew better. She fully comprehended the contempt in which her father held those whom he thought were of common clay and far outside the nobility of arms which he had constructed for himself. She knew that his pet project was to take her back to Germany and buy for her an army husband—a creature with waxed mustache, high boots, a clanking sword and epaulets. She realized that her father's money would attract many such and that the giving of her hand in marriage would be only a question of how high a rank the fortune of the rich baker would bring Rosie did not propose to be made a factor in any such bargain. How to escape it though, she did not know.

Von Griff, after a troubled night, began the day in a passion which was felt by every one within reach of his voice. At last he could contain himself no longer. Putting his broad brimmed brown hat solidly on his head, he started out to find Jack's father

Now John Fairfield was as quiet and inoffensive as the baker was irascible and pugnacious As a humble tinsmith, he worked steadily in his little shop day after day, attracting no attention. He was retiring and slow spoken He seemed to fill a chink in the social scheme—a chink in an out of the way corner Yet he was not a morose man. He was something of a philosopher in his quiet way, and a cheerful sort of philosophy was his too.

When Von Griff stormed into the tin shop, Fairfield was giving a teakettle an new lease of life by the judicious application of solder.

"Meester Fairfieldt, you haf a son, haf you not?" abruptly began the baker.

"I have," said the tinsmith, suspending operations on the teakettle.

"Und I have a daughter," went on Von Griff. "Your son, Meester Fairfieldt, has asked me for mine Rosie to marry."

"Ah?" said the tinsmith, with a smile.

"Hah, yah!" exploded the baker. "For mine Rosie to marry. Meester Fairfieldt, your son is young. He knows noddings yet. He knows not dot he is a nobodies See vat he does! He vants to marry the daughter of a Von Griff. Hah!"

The tinsmith smiled placidly at this tirade and put his iron in the blazing charcoal.

"A Von Griff," continued the baker, throwing out his chest and striking it with his clinched fist.

"Meester Fairfieldt, I vos a soldtier, und I fights me at Sedan und Metz. Who vos you?"

The tinsmith smiled and took up the teakettle. Turning his back on the baker, he held the kettle to the light and began a search for unwelcome holes. But the baker had not finished.

"Who vos you?" he repeated.

As the tinker did not answer, Von Griff replied to his own question.

"You—you vos—a—dinker—a tam dinker. Und tink you mine Rosie efer marry the son of a dinker? No, py chracious, never! Meester Fairfieldt, your son petter keep away from mine house. I haf spoken, und I am a man of my vort."

Having thus delivered himself Von Griff turned sharply on his heel.

"Well, I guess Jack can take care of himself," remarked the tinsmith quietly.

"MEESTER FAIRFIELDT," BEGAN THE BAKER.

The baker turned fiercely at the words, glared ferociously at the unruffled object of his anger, and then left the shop.

With many a chuckle Jack's father told him of the baker's visit, and added, "The next time you go courting Rosie Von Griff, you'd better wear a suit of chain armor, my boy."

But Rosie would not let Jack run any such risks. She made him promise not to go near her father until she should give him permission to do so, and to repay him she planned many ingenious meetings. So the courtship went merrily on in spite of Von Griff and his big sword.

May had almost gone and spring was fairly installed in winter's place when one day Rosie met Jack with reddened eyes and serious face

"Why, Rosie, what's the matter? You've been crying."

"I know I have, and I'm going to make you cry, too," she said dolefully.

"Oh, now don't! Just think, wouldn't I look nice weeping?"

"Now, Jack Fairfield, you just stop making fun of me and listen. Something dreadful's going to happen."

"Well, what is it?"

"My papa is going—going—oh, Jack—he's going to take me to Germany and marry me off to an old army officer. There—how do you like that?"

"But he's not going to do anything of the kind."

"Yes, he is. We're to start in June."

"Then we'll be married tomorrow. I'd like to see him take you off to Germany then."

"Oh, Jack, I wouldn't dare do that. He would—oh, he would kill you! I shudder every time I see him handle his big sword now!"

"Nonsense, Rosie. He would do nothing of the sort. He might lose his breath and say things, but folks are not carved up nowadays by their fathers-in-law. Don't you worry."

Rosie insisted, though, that she would worry, but she admitted afterward that her father had not definitely decided when they should start, and that nothing had been said concerning the army officer.

A few days later Jack saw Von Griff, and he was tempted to go to him then, and tell him that he knew all about his plan to take Rosie off to Germany. The baker was standing out in the street before his store directing the work of two of his assistants who were tacking festoons of red, white and blue bunting on the awning. It was the afternoon of the day before Memorial day, and it was in honor of this that the patriotic baker was decorating.

But Jack saw Rosie looking from an upper window, and he contented himself with slyly throwing a kiss in her direction. Rosie hid herself from the view of her father below and threw one back.

When the parade of the veterans passed down the main street of the village the next day, Von Griff's bakery was resplendent with the national colors. What was lacking in taste was made up in lavishness. Flags little and flags big were tacked in rows across the front of the building. The awning posts were swathed in red, white and blue cambric, and there was a big red lettered motto painted on cotton cloth, which read:

"HONOR TO THE HEROES."

Von Griff, the author of all this display, stood under the awning looking happy, and beaming with suppressed enthusiasm.

With a martial roll of drums the parade came down the street. First came the grand marshal on a prancing big gray horse. Then came the local officials, in two open barouches, next the band, and behind, marching with heads erect and in as good time as rheumatism and age stiffened limbs would allow, came the veterans; some in full Grand Army uniform, with white crossed belts over blue suits and brass tipped helmets, and some with only the black slouched hat, ornamented with wreath inclosed post number and the cord and tassel, to denote that they were of those who had fought side by side with those whose graves they had just decorated.

The marshal of the day noticed Von Griff's patriotic display and determined to reward the spirit in which it had been made.

Reining in his gray steed, he wheeled and gave the order to halt. Then bringing the veterans to a company front up and down the street he roared as he waved his sword:

"Com-pan-ee, attention! Sa-a-a-a-alo-o-oot!"

As each veteran swung his right hand up, palm outward, to his hat brim Von Griff, heart swelling and eyes dimmed, drew himself up to the most stiffly martial attitude which his corpulency would allow and returned the salute.

As the veterans again formed into fours and began to march on, Von Griff's gaze fell on a man in veteran's uniform marching modestly in one of the rear ranks It was John Fairfield.

On the day following the parade the tinsmith was hard at work in his shop when in walked Von Griff.

"Meester Fairfieldt," began the baker, with his usual abruptness, "I am von idiot, und you are von hero. I came here to ask of you your pardons."

"Oh, that's all right," said Fairfield, with a laugh at the baker's earnestness and humility

"Vill you shake mine handt?"

"Why, of course."

With due formality and solemnity the handshaking was accomplished. But the baker had not finished.

"Meester Fairfieldt," he continued, "yesterday I learn dot you vos a hero. Today I find dot you are also von gentlemans."

"Well, I never considered myself a hero, Mr. von Griff, but I thank you for the latter expression of your esteem," replied Fairfield, still with an amused expression on his face

"But you are von hero," persisted the baker warmly. "Dey tell me how you fought at Gettysburg. Dot iss enough. Meester Fairfieldt, I vos a soldtier mineself, und I fight at Sedan, but I never fought in von grandt, von terrible struggle like you haf, und vonce more, Meester Fairfieldt, I salute you as von hero. As for your son, I vant you to say to him dot he iss as welcome in mine house as in his own, und dot when he iss ready vonce more to ask me somedings vich he vonce alretty does I vill be pleased to hear him."

THE PATH OF MURTOGH.

By Harold Frederic.

(Copyright, 1895.)

A curse is laid on one long narrow strip of the sea down in front of Dunlogher.

No matter how lifeless the sunlit air may hang above, no matter how silken-smooth the face of the waters nearest by, lifting themselves without a ripple in the most indolent Summer swell—an angry churning goes always forward here. Disordered currents will never tire of their coiling and writhing somewhere underneath; the surface is streaked with sinister markings like black shadows, which yet are no shadows at all, and these glide without ceasing out and in among the twisted lines of gray-white scum, and everything moves and nothing changes, till Judgment Day. It has the name of the Slighe Mhuircheartaigh (spoken Shlee Vurharthee), of the Path of Murtogh.

Though 'tis well known that the grandest ling and turbot and wonderful other big fishes lie swaying themselves in the depths of this wicked water, with giant crayfish and crabs to bear them company, the fishermen of Dunmanus and Goleen and Crookhaven, and even the strangers from Cape Clear, would not buy a soul from Purgatory at the price of drawing a net through it. They have a great wish to please the buyers in the English ships, and the Scotch and Manx. Oh yes; but a creel of gold would not tempt them to meddle in "Murty's Path." They steer their boats far to one side, and bless themselves as they pass in the manner of their fathers and grandfathers before them.

These poor men, having not much of the Irish now, and not rightly understanding what their elders may have heard the truth of, say this snake-like forbidding stretch bears its name from Mutry Oge O'Sullivan. Their thought is that the uncanny boiling began in the wake of the English Speedwell, as the corpse of the vanquished privateer spun and twirled at her keel through the foam on its savage last journey from Castletown to Cork. But it is enough to look down at this evil place, to see that the malediction upon it must be older than Murty Oge's time, which, in the sight of Dunlogher, was as yesterday. Why, men are living this year who talked with men who saw his head spiked over South Gate. There were no great curses left unused in Ireland at so late a day as his. And again, would it be the waters of Dunlogher that would tear themselves for an O'Sullivan?

No, the curse threads back a dozen lives behind poor Murty Oge. The strange currents weave and twine, and the greasy foam spreads and gathers, gathers and spreads, in the path of another, whose birthright it was that they should baptize him. The true tale is of Murty, the Proud, or, if you will have his style from the Book of Schull—Murtogh Mordha O'Mahony, chief in Dunlogher. And his time is not so distant in one way, as men take account of years. But in another it is too remote for any clear vision, because the "little people" of the old, fearful kind have left every other part of Ireland, and they were just halting together for a farewell pause in Dunlogher, by reason of it being the last end of the land, and their enchantments fanned up a vapor about Murty Mordha to his undoing. And it is as if the mist still rose between us and his story.

When the sun began to sink out of sight, down behind the sea, two men

"ARE WE TO THE BRINK ITSELF?" HE ASKED.

stood on the edge of the great cliff of Dunlogher, their faces turned to the west.

The yellow flame from the sky shone full in the eyes of Murtogh, and he held his huge, bare head erect with boldness, and stared back at it without flinking. His companion, a little, shriveled old man, whom he held by the arm, had the glowing light on his countenance as well, but his eyelids were shut. He bent himself against his chief's thick shoulder and trembled.

"Are we to the brink itself?" he asked; his aged voice shook when he spoke.

"Here, where I stand, when I would grip you, and hold you forth at the length of my arm, and open my hand, you would fall a hundred fathoms in the air." Murtogh's free arm and hand made the terrible gesture to fit his words, but he tightened his protecting clasp upon the other, and led him back a few paces. The old man groaned his sigh of relief.

"It is you who are the brave nobleman, Murty," he whispered, admiringly. "There is none to equal your strength or your grand courage, in all the land. And the heart of pure gold along with it!"

Murtogh tossed his big head, to shake the twisted forelock of his hair to one side. "I looked straight into the sun at noon on St. John's day," he said, quietly, with the pride of a child. "If it were a hundred times as bright, I would look at it, and never fear for my eyes. I would hold my own son out here, stretched over the abyss, and he would be no safer in his bed. Whatever I wished to do, I would do it."

"You would—O, you would!" assented the old man, in tones of entire sincerity.

The chieftain kept his eyes on the sky-line, beneath which, as the radiance above deepened, the waters grew ashen and coldly dark. Musing, he held his silence for a time. Then, with abruptness, he asked:

"What age were you, Owny Hea, when the MacSwineys put out your eyes? Were you strong enough to remember the sun well?"

"I was of no strength at all," the other whimpered, the tragedy of his childhood affecting his speech on the instant. "I was in my mother's arms. There were the men breaking in through the wall, and the kine bellowing outside, and my father cut down; and then it was like my mother drew her cloak tight over my head—and no one came ever to take it off again. I forget the sun."

Murtogh nodded his head. "I will go to Muskerry some day," he said, in a kindly way. "I cannot tell when, just now; but I will go, and I will burn and desolate everything for six miles around, and you shall have a bag for your harp made of eyelids of the MacSwineys."

Old Owny lifted his sightless face toward his master, and smiled with wistful affection. "Ah, Murty dear," he expostulated, mildly, "it is you who have the grand nature—but think, Murty—I am a very old man, and no kin of yours. It is fifty years since the last man who took my eyes drew breath. If you went now, no living soul could tell what you came for or why the great suffering was put upon them. And, moreover, the O'Mahonys Carbery have wives from the MacSwineys these three generations. No feud lies now."

The Lord of Dunlogher growled sharply between his teeth, and Owny shrank further back.

"How long will you be learning," Murtogh demanded, with an arrogant note in his voice, "that I have no concern in the O'Mahonys Carbery, or the O'Mahonys Fonn-Iartarach, or any other? I do not take heed of Conogher of Ardintenant, or Tiege of Rosbrim, or Donogh of Dunmanus, or Donal of Leamcon. I will give them all my bidding to do, and they will do it, or I will kill them, and spoil their castles. You could not behold it, but you have your song from the words of others how last year I fell upon Diarmaid Bhade and crushed him and his house, and slew his son and brought away his herds. His father's father and mine were brothers. He is nearer to me in blood than the rest, yet I would not spare him. I made his Ballydevlin a nest for owls and bats. Let the others observe what I did. I am in Dunlogher, and I am the O'Mahony here, and I look the sun in the face like an eagle. Put that to your song!"

The sound came to them from the walled bawn and gateways beyond the Three Castles, a hundred yards behind, of voices in commotion. The old bard lifted his head, and his brow scored itself in lines of listening attention. If Murtogh heard he gave no sign, but gazed again in meditation out upon the vast waste of waters, blackened now as the purple reflections of the twilight waned.

"Blind men have senses that others lack," he remarked at last. "Tell me, you, does the earth we stand on seem ever to you to be turning round?"

Owny shuddered a little at the thought which came to him. "When you led me out beyond here, and I felt the big round sea pinks under my feet, and remembered they grew only on the very edge"—— he began.

"Not that," the chief broke in, "'tis not my meaning. But at Rosbin there was a book writ by Fineen, the son of Diarmaid, an uncle to my father's father, and my father heard it read from this book that the world turned round one way, like a duck on a spit, and the sun turned round the other way, and that was why we were apart all night. And often I come here, and I swear there is a movement under my feet. But elsewhere there is none, not in the bawn, or in the towers, or anywhere else but just here."

The old man inclined his face, as if he could see the ground he stood upon, but shook his head after a moment's waiting. "It would not be true, Murty," he suggested. "Old Fineen had a mighty scholarship, as I have heard, and he made an end to edify the angels, but—but"——

Murtogh did not wait for the hesitating conclusion. "I saw his tomb when I was a lad, in the chapel at Rosbrin. He was laid at his own desire under a weight of stone like my wall here. I saw even then how foolish it was. These landsmen have no proper sense. How will they rise at the blessed resurrection, with all that burden of stone to hold them down? I have a better understanding than that. I buried my father, as he buried his father, out yonder in the sea. And I will be buried there, too, and my son after me—and if I have other children"—he stole a swift glance at the old man's withered face as he spoke—"if I have others, I say, it will be my command that they shall follow me there when their time comes. I make you witness to that wish, Owny Hea."

The bard hung his head. "As if my time would not come first!" he said, for the mere sake of saying something. Then gathering courage, he pulled upon the strong arm which was still locked in his, and raised his head to speak softly in the O'Mahony's ear.

"If only the desire of your heart were given you, Murty," he murmured; "if only once I could hold a babe of yours to my breast, and put its pretty little hands in my beard—I'd be fit to pray for the men who took my eyes from me. And Murty dear," his voice rose in tremulous entreaty as it went on—"tell me, Murty—I'm of an age to be your father's father, and I've no eyesight to shame you—is she—is your holy wife coming to see her duty differently? Have you any hope that—that"——

Murtogh turned abruptly on his heel, swinging his companion round with him. They walked a dozen paces toward the sea gate of the castles before he spoke. "You have never seen her, Owny!" he said, gravely. "You do not know at all how beautiful she is. It is not in the power of your mind to imagine it. There is no one like her in all the world. She is not just flesh and blood like you, Owny, or even like me. I am a great lord among men, Owny, and I am not afraid of any man. I would put the MacCarthy, or even the Earl of Desmond, over my cliff like a rat, if he came to me here, and would not do me honor. But whenever I come where she sits I am like a little dirty boy, frightened before a great shrine of Our Blessed Lady, all with jewels and lights and incense. I take shame to myself when she looks at me that there are such things in my heart for her to see."

Owny sighed deeply. "The grandest princess in the world might be proud to be mated to you," Murty," he urged.

"True enough," responded Murtogh, with candor. "But she is not a princess—or any mere woman at all. She is a saint. Perhaps she is more still. Listen, Owny. Do you remember how I took her—how I swam for her through the breakers—and snapped the bone of my arm to keep the mast of the wreck from crushing her when the wave flung it upon us, and still made land with her head on my neck, and hung to the bare rock against all the devils of the sea sucking to pull me down"——

"Is it not all in my song?" said Owny, with gentle reproach.

"Owny, man, listen!" said Murtogh, halting and giving new impressiveness to his tone. "I took her from the water. Her companions were gone, their vessel was gone. Did we ever see sign of them afterward? And her family—the Sigersons of that island beyond Tiobrad—when men of mine sailed thither and asked for Hugh, son of Art, were they not told that the O'Flaherty had passed over the island and left nothing alive on it the size of a mussel shell? Draw nearer to me, Owny. You will be thinking the more without your eyes. Have you thought that it may be she—whisper now!—that she may belong in the water?"

A Remarkable Cure of Rheumatism.

From the Groton Connecticut Review.—"David Lewis, who has been afflicted all winter by rheumatism, is out again and all due to one of the medicines advertised in our columns. After trying everything possible, he used Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which has relieved him of all pain, from which he was a constant sufferer and promises to make him fit for duty soon. We know David has been a great sufferer and are glad to see him around again." For sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy.

Mr. D. Wiley, ex-postmaster, Black Breek, N. C., was so badly afflicted with rheumatism that he was only able to hobble around with canes, and even then it caused him great pain. After using Chamberlain's Pain Balm he was so much improved that he threw away his canes. He says this liniment did him more good than all other medicine and treatment put together. For sale at 50 cents per bottle at Reynolds's Pharmacy.

Use it in Time.

Catarrh starts in the nasal passages, affecting eyes, ears and throat, and is, in fact, the great enemy of the mucous membrane. Neglected colds in the head almost invariably precede catarrh, causing an excessive flow of mucous, and if the mucous discharge becomes interrupted the disagreeable results of catarrh will follow, such as bad breath, severe pain across forehead and about the eyes, a roaring and buzzing sound in the ears and oftentimes a very offensive discharge. Ely's Cream Balm is the acknowledged cure for these troubles.

LAY HIM LOW.

LOSE his eyes, his work is done.
What to him is friend or foe man,
Rise of moon or set of sun,
Hand of man or kiss of woman?

Lay him low, lay him low,
In the clover or the snow.
What cares he? He cannot know.
Lay him low.

As a man may he fought his fight,
Proved his truth by his endeavor.
Let him sleep in solemn night,
Sleep forever and forever.
Lay him low, lay him low,
In the clover or the snow.
What cares he? He cannot know.
Lay him low.

Fold him in his country's stars,
Roll the drum and fire the volley.
What to him are all our wars?
What but death bemocking folly?
Lay him low, lay him low,
In the clover or the snow.
What cares he? He cannot know.
Lay him low.

Leave him to God's watching eye,
Trust him to the hand that made him.
Mortal love weeps idly by.
God alone has power to aid him.

ADMIRABLE INSTITUTION

What the Muhlenberg Hospital Has Done For a Year.

THEY ARE ALMOST FREE OF DEBT.

Treasurer's Report Shows That They Owe $150—All Legacies Will Be Preserved Intact As Memorials of the Donors—New Operating Room Completed and Equipped.

The Board of Governors of the Muhlenberg Hospital held their annual meeting on Monday evening, listened to reports of the past year and elected officers and committees for the coming year.

One hundred and seventy-seven patients have been cared for in the Hospital, and the average time of their stay there has been twenty-four and one-half days. That is, there has been an average of twelve patients in the Hospital every day throughout the year. Of all these, but sixty-five have paid anything; the other one hundred and twelve having received board, nursing, medicine and medical and surgical attendance free. What the latter means no one but the doctors themselves can fully understand; but persons who have had in their own families such severe cases of illness as abound in the Hospital, and have enjoyed the services of the faithful and talented members of the Hospital staff of physicians will have some idea of what a contribution those physicians make every year to the sick and needy.

The treasurer's report gave receipts and disbursements as follows:

Receipts.
Donations	$2,907
Hospital Sunday	447
Woman's Auxiliary Board	898
Nurses fees	8
Patients	1,300
Interest from Burlingham fund	104
Money borrowed	150
Disbursements.
Various expenses	$1,400
Medicine	573
Provisions	1,798
Salaries and wages	2,241
Paid on mortgage	400

leaving the Hospital in debt $150.

The new operating room has been completed and equipped at a total cost of about $2,600, and is paid for. Among the furnishings of the operating room two of the most important articles are a combined hospital-wagon and stretcher, presented by W. R. Cock, and an operating table, which, like the stretcher, is of the very latest and most improved construction, presented by Miss Elizabeth R. Cock.

A training school for nurses has been established and is now in complete operation with four pupil nurses.

In March the Hospital received a legacy of $500 from the estate of the late Joanna K. Craig. Within a few months $1,900 will be received under the will of William R. Clarkson, and some real estate and a small sum of money from the estate of Henry F. Stites of Scotch Plains. In reference to the treatment of these and future legacies the following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That all funds received as legacies by the Hospital be preserved intact as memorials of the respective donors, and that only the income therefrom be used for the support of the Hospital.

Though a foundation is thus laid for an endowment of the Hospital, yet, as the treasurer's report shows, considerable debt for current expenses has already been incurred, and it will be larger before the Summer is ended, while current receipts during this season are small.

The officers and committees are now as follows: President, Edward B. Clark; vice-presidents, Chas. Schipper and Samuel Huntington; secretary, William R. Cock; treasurer, George H. Goddard; managing committee, Messrs. Erickson, Cock, Huntington, Case and Goddard; finance committee, Messrs. Wood, Lowe, Bull, Whiton and Schipper.

Do n't Forget This.

Some of these warm evenings when you want a nice cool place to eat a nice cool dish of ice cream just drop around to Tier's lake house. But if you do n't want the cream and just want some candy why go around to his Park avenue store and there you will find all the confections you desire.

Doing Good Work.

Honan & Sons have the city roller on their work today, and are making an excellent job of West Sixth street. They will not lay pipe tomorrow, but will keep the teams at work all day clearing up.

Coming Slow.

It is calculated that it will be August 1 before the Borough Council will be able to take definite steps towards the extension of Watchung avenue.

THE COUNTRY COUSIN.

Monroe Avenue Chapel Thespians Make Their Friends Laugh.

"The Country Cousin" and "The Bridal Wine Cup" were the titles of two dialogues given in Monroe Avenue Chapel last evening, in an entertainment arranged by the Ladies Aid Society.

After a piano solo by Stephen Haff, the curtain was drawn for the first scene of "The Country Cousin". Miss Philips as the hostess and Miss Brower as her friend were seated together discussing plans for a party when Stephen Aldrich, the English servant, brought Miss Philips a letter which announced the coming of a girl cousin from the country. The hostess, knowing very little of country girls, decided, contrary to the advice of her friend, to write a letter to her cousin telling her she would be out of place at the coming party and therefore not to come.

The next scene represented the home of the country cousin, which part was splendidly acted by Miss Lottie Aldrich, with Mrs. Aaron Brower as her older sister. The letter was received and the two sisters were horrified at its harshness. Then the younger sister resolved to go, but in the most outrageous costume possible and with manners still worse.

The third scene was in New York again and at the home of Miss Philips. She and her friend were again discussing the party when Kate, the country cousin, arrived. Miss Aldrich's costume and actions brought down the house and completely horrified the hostess and her friend. But to add to their dismay, the servant announced a distinguished count that was visiting in New York. After another very laughable scene Kate recognized the count as Bill Jones, the butcher at her home who had disappeared. The supposed count exposed Kate's disguise also and, after declaring his real name, left for his old home. A general reconciliation then took place, after which Adam Neuman, as the father of the hostess, appeared and escorted his niece to dinner.

"The Bridal Wine Cup" was presented. It was in one scene only. Miss Emma Haff made a very pretty bride with Willard Haff as the groom. James A. McGee took the part of the bride's father. The other characters were taken by the Misses Philips, Mrs. Haff and Clifford Pierson. The bride was asked to throw aside her principles for once and pledge herself in wine, but before she would drink she told the story of her only brother who died from the effects of wine. The father and the husband both wept at the last and then thanked her for saving them from drinking also. Then one of the guests, Clifford Pierson, stepped forward and solemnly said that the toast should be drunk with Hood's Sarsaparilla, which purifies the blood, etc.

The audience departed well satisfied with the evening's entertainment.

QUEER ACCIDENT.

W. R. Cock Fractures His Kneecap While Riding a Bicycle.

W. R. Cock of 235 East Fifth street and his friend, Clifford Wharton, went out for a bicycle ride yesterday afternoon. Before he left he told his sister that if he did not return early not to worry as he might make a call.

They went as far as Westfield and while riding along slowly Mr. Cock felt a sudden snap in his right leg, and was unable to use it. He was taken to a house near by and Dr. Harrison of Westfield was called. He found that the knee cap was fractured. The injury was bandaged. A little later a carriage was procured and he was brought to Plainfield, and at his own request was taken to Muhlenberg Hospital. He then notified his sister, which was about 10 last evening.

Dr. Endicott is in attendance and today Mr. Cock is resting quietly and has little pain, though he suffered considerably while riding to Plainfield.

He thinks that his right leg has become weakened through bowling.

Mr. Cock is one of the founders of Muhlenberg Hospital and the only one now living. He is at present secretary of the Board of Governors.

ANENT THE BIG MEET.

Gossip From Among the Wheeling Flyers.

CRACKS OF THE COUNTRY HERE.

Brown Is In the Pink of Condition—Sanger Thinks the Oval a Good One for Racing—"Baron" Hand Will Ride a Special Exhibition Mile—Notes.

Everything now is about ready for the meet, and all that's wanting is pleasant weather, and a crowd of people.

The Spalding team together with a few other riders went out on the road to Metuchen yesterday afternoon for a spin, as Trainer Shaffer thought it would help his men.

Conn Baker of the Hoffman team is developing speed and strength every day, and when in condition will surely give all the boys a ride "clear through" from start to finish.

While at the track yesterday Cabanne exhibited a little of his fire and enthusiasm, and he will no doubt be among the leaders if the same spirit is put into his riding.

Ernest Hand, who travels with the Spalding team, is a great favorite with the boys, and has recently received his official title, which is "Baron" Hand, and he accepts his name good naturedly.

Brown, the curly-headed medicine man, the only M. D. on the path, is in the pink of condition, as is his teammate Harry Maddox, and with the Spalding team of "hot cracks", a day's sport is assured.

Sanger who was recently ill with fever, was asked by Dr. Fritts how he was feeling, and he said that while he had not regained his old form, his muscles were in the best of condition and he was feeling good. He expressed himself as being highly pleased with the oval and belives there will be some fast time made

The finish in the two-mile handicap at Louisville, Saturday, between C. Baker and Cabanne was one of the most sensational and exciting moments ever seen on a race course. There was hardly a rim's width between the men. It is an indication of the blood that is up between the riders this year, and the consequent interest that will be excited.

The Sterling team, Dr. Brown and Harry Maddox, with their trainer and manager, Will Highland of Chicago, put in appearance yesterday afternoon, as did Stevenson and M. F.

H. H. MADDOX—"PACE MAKER."

Carter of the Stearns team of "yellow fellers." Carter is a good-natured boy with a broad brogue, almost as broad as Pat O'Connor, the only real Irishman on the path. Keep your eye on Carter.

All interest now centres in the National circuit meet to be held tomorrow afternoon on the Crescent Oval. From all directions bicycle racers of more or less note are flocking to the city in preparation for the event, which gives promise of being one of the most successful ever held under the sanction of the L. A. W. Sanger, Cabanne and Titus arrived yesterday, and in the afternoon went to the track hoping to have an opportunity of riding, but the condition of the track was such that it was thought best not to do so. However, it will be in the best of condition tomorrow.

CYCLING COMMENT.

A young man by the name of Tingley of Orchard place, while riding his bicycle on Somerset street at 10:15 last night, collided with Collector Spencer's delivery wagon, considerably damaging his wheel, and injuring his right hand.

At the meeting of the Crescent Wheelmen last night the committees reported, showing that the work for the meet was progressing favorably, and that everyting was being done to make it a complete success. It was stated that "Baron" Hand would ride a mile exhibition race, paced tomorrow afternoon, for which the club decided to offer a gold medal. The "Baron" will try to break his record. The complete and full account of cycling news in The Daily Press of yesterday was highly complimented by the wheelmen at the meeting.

CAN FLEE FROM WRATH.

Mr. Nelson, Though, Feels Sorry for Dunellen.

THE OBJECTORS ARE EXCITED.

Dr. Brakely Says Plainfield's Cheek Is Appalling—Mr. Nelson Gets Sarcastic and Calls Plainfield Pinch Gut—Dunellen Residents Are Going to Petition the Council.

That Dunellen is very much interested as to where Plainfield locates her sewage beds, was evidenced last night when a meeting called by the Borough Commissioners was held in the W. C. T. U. rooms. There was a large attendance of citizens and property owners, who have become thoroughly aroused over the subject. John Moynihan, who is a member of the Sewer Committee, called the meeting to order and made a statement as follows:

"Last Fall Plainfield threatened to locate their sewer beds near Dunellen. You appointed a committee to go to Plainfield and present our side of the case, and we thought that we had succeeded in persuading them not to locate near us, but it seems not, and now they have decided to come to our very doors. I think it is only a question of time when Plainfield will have to go to tidewater with their sewage but before they do, will probably expend from $75,000 to $100,000 in experimenting. We ought to be able to raise a reasonably strong protest. The Plainfield Councilmen claim the system to be harmless, but they have not demonstrated it to me. You all understand the matter as well as I do and something should be done."

By a vote of those present John Moynihan was elected chairman and George Day secretary. Opinions were then asked for in regard to the subject under consideration.

Alfred B. Nelson read a petition that was being circulated among Plainfield citizens protesting against the location of the sewage beds as intended. Residents of Clinton and Grant avenues had been seen by him and he asserted that a number of signatures had been secured. Mr. Nelson then spoke as follows: "Plainfield is with us, as I have not found but one man who is in favor of the filtration system. The Plainfield people people say it 's an outrage for us to allow the beds to be located on the property purchased, and would not blame us if we should take up arms against them. The land has cost them nearly $25,000 and they have not put one penny of expense on it. I have the plans of every intermittent filtration plant in the country and know a little about the system. Framingham is cited by the Plainfield Councilmen. They have a population of 6,000 and it cost them $145,000 to put in the system, while Plainfield with her 13,000 inhabitants has been told that the plant will cost them $10,000. It costs Framingham $6,000 a year to maintain their system while Plainfield is informed that a man and one boy is all that is necessary to look after their system. You know what a boy's work is? Our friend, Mr. Frost, says there will be no solid matter; it will probably be the first case of the kind. For Plainfield there will be about 8,000 tons of solid matter."

Mr. Nelson here drifted from his line of thought and related a funny story. Continuing he said:—"A number of years ago Plainfield was called Pinch Gut, and today she claims to be the richest city, per capita tax, this side of the Adirondacks, but she is still Pinch Gut. I suppose there will be no solids in the sewage matter, that people will be flocking from all directions to get a drink of the pure stream that will empty in the beds. In talking with a man tonight from Lincoln, England, where the same system is used, he told me that when the wind blew from the direction of the beds, the stench was terrible. When the proposed beds are located in Plainfield instead of people residing in that vicinity you will find goats and geese, as they will be the only ones able to stand the atmosphere. I can flee from the wrath to come, but you who own property will probably have to stay and suffer."

Secretary Day moved that Mr. Nelson be instructed to draw up a petition for Dunellen people to sign. The motion was carried, and the instructions followed out.

Mr. Craig stated that Councilman Frazee was decided as to which was the best course to pursue, and that was tide-water; and that the latter had been told by Councilman Moore, previous to the last Council meeting, that if the sewage beds were located as intended it would be the means of depreciating the value of property fully 25 per cent., and yet Mr. Moore went to the meeting and voted for the beds.

Fred Wilcox said that in talking with a Plainfield man, who owned property near the proposed beds, he told him that he would take $2,000 or $3,000 less than he originally asked.

Dr. Brakely was asked for his opinion, and said that Plainfield's cheek was appalling. No words could express his indignation. These bon tons who only sleep in Plainfield would not be affected, and they did not care how the others suffered. He remarked that Councilman Frost had said "That the Plainfield sewers would be his monument", when someone in the audience replied, "That he probably would be buried under it."

Dr. Brakely then made a motion, which was carried, that Mr. Nelson present the petition with the Dunellen signatures to the Council at the stated meeting.

Those present then signed the petition that had been prepared, and the meeting adjourned.

FROM THE SEWAGE BEDS.

Councilmen Return From Framingham More Satisfied Than Ever.

The Councilmen who went to Framingham, Mass., yesterday to investigate the sewage beds of that place returned home this morning. The party was composed of Councilmen Ginna, Fisk, Westphal, Moore, Consulting Engineer Farquar and R. H. Higgins.

The gentlemen made a thorough inspection of the workings and effects of the intermittent filtration system and return home convinced that Plainfield is doing the right thing in adopting this plan of sewage disposal.

Councilman Westphal was seen by a Press reporter this morning, and was very enthusiastic over his trip. He said that he was convinced beyond a doubt that there were no evil effects from the operation of sewage beds, and that the Dunellen citizens who had become so wrought up over this matter, did not know what they were talking about.

Mr. Westphal brought home a bottle of the raw sewage as it comes direct from the mains, and a bottle of the clear water which is the outflow; also a small quantity of earth from a field over which the sewage has flowed for six years. The party drank a quantity of the clear outflow which was apparently as good as any water. In fact, the Massachusetts Board of Health states that it is much better than the water the city of Boston uses.

The specimen water and earth are on exhibition in the windows of The Daily Press.

Mr. Westphal stated that he brought everything from the beds except the odor, and an effort was made to find that, but without any results.

WHAT BOYS CAN DO.

An Instructive Exhibition in the Boys Club Last Night.

The Manual Training Department of the Boys Club, held its first annual exhibition last night, at their rooms corner of Park and North avenue, and was a decided success. In the main clubroom, four tables were filled with specimens of the boys work, some of which were marvels of skill, considering the age of the young artisans. There were, for instance, some nice specimens of carved work which attracted everyone's attention; they were exhibited by George Apgar who is only 15 years old. A gate, designed and drawn by scale, afterwards executed in a first-class manner, called for many favorable comments; this was made by a 15 year old, John Butcher, who also exhibited a well made window frame. A small table, and a small step-ladder by Willie Skinner came in for a good share of praise. Pen trays, paper knives, boats, picture frames, match safes, (in shoe shape) dumbbells, Indian clubs, and many other articles were exhibited by other boys, some of whom were: Tunis Hewitt, M. O'Keefe, C. W. Beitter, W. Lawler, J. Taylor, G. Killoran, Dan O'Keefe, F. McIntyre, W. Connett, Elmer and Harry Hoffman, Joe Berry, Peter Galbraith, Raymond Johnson, and many others.

In the Manual Training rooms, the work benches were filled with boys busy with various articles in course of formation. They were plied with questions by the numerous visitors, in regard to their work, and in their answers showed the thorough instruction they had received by Olaf Sangstad.

Every one of the many visitors expressed their interest in the work exhibited, and one gentleman even bought one of the articles as a souvenir.

—Peck's store will be closed tomorrow, as usual, on Memorial Day.

Last week was court week for this county, and Judge Norwood came here on Monday morning under the influence of liquor and continued drinking until, at the hour when court should have been opened, he was too much under the influence of liquor to hold court, and remained in his room all day at the hotel. Tuesday he was able to open court at the usual time, but Wednesday he again fell and there was no court. The same thing occurred on Thursday and the next day. So the grand jury of the judge's own court found an indictment against him for drunkenness. The legislature can impeach the judge, but the legislature of this state will not meet again until January, 1897.

DIPHTHERIA
Too many homes bear this fear-inspiring placard, denoting the prevalence of that most insidious and dreaded of all diseases—Diphtheria.
It is to-day a recognized fact among the best practitioners that nine out of ten cases formerly considered hopeless may be brought to a happy termination by the use of that great original raw food product, Bovinine.
This great blood-generating, life-maintaining, strength-developing, and flesh-producing product of lean, raw meat, contains the greatest amount of life-preserving qualities in the least possible bulk of any preparation known.
In cases of Diphtheria, Bovinine has special advantages. In this disease, as in others, the rapidity with which it is assimilated gives to it a preference over all other foods, passing, as it does into the system immediately, without causing the digestive organs to perform any labor. And considering the fact that the lesions in the throat prevent the swallowing of solid food, it becomes an absolute necessity. In the worst cases, where even liquids cannot be taken by the mouth, Bovinine by being used as an injection. Above all, Bovinine is in itself a germicide, and in all such diseases as Diphtheria, caused by microbes, it not only performs its greatest mission of maintaining life, but antidotes the existing bacilli.
Bovinine has done wonders in thousands of cases of Diphtheria. When your doctor uses it you may cease to worry, and be assured of a speedy recovery. To neglect its use may mean years of remorse in the feeling that some loved one might still be with you if everything possible had been done. Bovinine is sold by all Druggists.

OVER 100 LIVES LOST

While Trying To Get Off the Rocks Her Boilers Exploded and the Vessel Went Down Almost Immediately—Only the Captain and Twenty-nine Others Saved.

Cadiz, May 29.—The French steamer Dom Pedro, bound for Carril, Spain, was wrecked Monday night off cape Corrubedo, on the west coast of the province of Galicia. At Carril the steamer was to have embarked 200 additional passengers, but on her way to that port she ran on a rock. In trying to get off her boiler exploded and the vessel foundered almost immediately afterwards.

Only the captain and twenty-nine of the crew were saved. Between ninety-five and 100 persons being drowned.

The Dom Pedro was a 3,000-ton steamer and was engaged in running regularly between Havre and the Argentine Republic, after calling at Bordeaux, France, and Pasages and Carril, Spain, for freight and passengers. "MY POOR BOY IS DEAD."

Grief of Mr. Gresham's Mother Before the End Came.

New Albany, Ind., May 29.—Mrs. Sarah Rumley, mother of Walter Q. Gresham, lives at Lanesville, Harrison county. The hamlet has no railroad or telegraph communication and the news of her son's death did not reach Mrs. Rumley until yesterday, although she was expecting the sad news. Monday evening a dispatch was received from Secretary of War Lamont containing information of the alarming condition of her son. Volunteers were secured to convey the sad news, who reached the old homestead at 10 o'clock and were met by Mrs. Rumley, who instantly understood the purpose of their errand before they could speak. "Walt is dead. My poor boy is dead," moaned the mother, wringing her hands and weeping bitterly in her intense grief. The messengers informed her of the critical illness and thus afforded her slight comfort by conveying the information that her son was not yet dead.

AN ANTI-BLOOMERS ORDINANCE

To Prohibit the Wearing of Knickerbockers in Chicago.

Chicago, May 29.—An ordinance was introduced in the city council here which is intended to prevent women from wearing bloomers or knickerbockers within the city limits. The ordinance recites that "this craze has assumed such proportions that it menaces the public morals of this good city," that "it is unhealthy, un-American and un-ladylike for women to appear in such costumes." The ordinance proposes a fine for every woman caught upon the streets without the conventional "skirt." It caused considerable mirth in the council and was laid over for consideration at some future time.

LAST DUTY TO GRESHAM

Funeral Services in the White House To-day.

The East Room Handsomely Decorated with the Stars and Stripes, Potted Plants and Cut Flowers—A Strictly Military Funeral, and the Second Ever Given To a Man Not of the Regular Army—Bishop Hurst Conducted the Services—All the Cabinet, Diplomatic Corps and Other Distinguished Personages Present—Troops To Escort the Remains to the Railway Station.

Washington, May 29.—Walter Quinton Gresham is to-day receiving a soldier's burial. Except gallant John A. Logan, of Illinois, no other man, not of the regular army, has ever before been honored by the ordering out of United States troops to attend his funeral. The preliminary services are being conducted this morning in the east room of the White house, which has witnessed some memorable obsequies, the last being those of President Harrison's wife, but which has never before been the scene of funeral services over a cabinet officer.

Stars and Stripes the Emblem.

Further distinctive feature in to-day's sad ceremonies is that the draperies and other accessories are entirely military in character. The flag which General Gresham loved so well, for which he fought so bravely and in whose defense he was so grievously wounded, is the chief emblem of mourning wound round his funeral casket.

Services Conducted by Bishop Hurst.

Bishop Hurst of the Methodist Episcopal church will conduct the services. He was a warm personal friend of the dead secretary, who himself was brought up in the Methodist faith, his father and mother belonging to that denomination. All the cabinet members are present except Secretary Carlisle, who will join the funeral cortege en route to Chicago, where the interment will take place.

Diplomatic Corps Present.

The diplomatic corps, headed by Sir Julian Pauncefote, the British ambassador, met at the British legation this morning and proceeded to the White house in a body. The supreme justices also entered the White house in the same manner. All the executive departments are closed and there is no public business of any nature being transacted to-day.

Honorary Pall-Bearers.

The honorary pall-bearers are Secretary Lamont, Attorney General Olney, Secretary Smith, Postmaster General Wilson, Secretary Herbert, Secretary Morton, acting Secretary Uhl, representing the state department, and acting Secretary Hamlin, representing Secretary Carlisle. All these will accompany the remains to Chicago, with the exception of Mr. Hamlin, whose place will be taken by Mr. Carlisle.

Elaborate Decorations.

The decorations of the east room are most elaborate, and exceeds in beauty and impressiveness the attempts made on similar occasions. To carry out the intention to make the occasion purely military, the American flag is predominent in the decorative display. Wherever the eye wanders the stars and stripes are seen. Each of the four great saloon mirrors is half hidden by a large flag, and every window is curtained by hangings composed of the national standard twenty feet long.

Plants and Cut Flowers.

These form the background for an effective display of growing plants and cut flowers. Great, spreading palms branch out from every window and alcove, and are surrounded by potted oleanders and other greenery. White and gold flower pots, holding smaller palms and innumerable varieties of evergreen, are banked on the mantels and beneath them, and cut flowers are interspersed here and there, while wreaths of smilax entwine mirrors and windows and doorways. The effectiveness of the arrangement is greatly enhanced by the glow of electric lights rendered soft through hemispheres of thick glass of a pinkish hue.

State Department Clerical Force.

The officials and clerical force of the state department assembled at the department at 9 30 o'clock this morning and proceeded to the White house in a body. Four of their number, Messrs. Renick, the chief clerk; Chilton, Haywood and H. T. Smith, seated the members of the diplomatic corps, while Messrs. Biddle and Keller, of the department, received the diplomats as they arrived at the entrance to the ground.

Military Escort.

Troops of the escort began to assemble at 9 o'clock in Pennsylvania avenue in front of the executive mansion under command of Maj.-General Ruger. All the troops stationed about Washington were ordered out—the marine corps, the six companies from Fort Myer and the artillery from the arsenal.

Order of March.

At the conclusion of the services at the executive mansion the funeral escort will move in the following order from the executive mansion to the Baltimore & Ohio depot:
Clergy and physicians who attended the deceased.
Pallbearers and hearse.
Relatives of the deceased.
The president and heads of departments.
Members of the senate and house of representatives.
Justices of the supreme court and diplomatic corps.

EDITORIAL CHANGE.

With this issue of The Daily Press the name of Walter Irving Clarke as Managing Editor is removed from the head of its columns. The facts leading up to this action are substantially these:

On Saturday, May 18, Mr. Clarke left his desk promising to return on the evening of that day. Since that time he has been absent from his work. Upon the earnest solicitation of his wife and relatives it was agreed not fill his position until ten days had elapsed from the time of his departure, from the fact that urgent business, a sudden attack of illness or an accident may have been the cause of his continued absence, thus preventing him from conveying the reason thereof to his employer.

A determined effort has been made to locate Mr. Clarke, but it has been without result.

Eleven days have now elapsed and no word has been received from him. The position which he held has therefore been filled and Mr. Clarke is no longer connected with The Daily Press.

Sarcasm and abuse are not arguments. Therefore the talk of the Dunellenites last night is not the kind that will have any effect on sensible people. The great trouble with these objectors in that all they know is what some one tells them or what they read from books. Plainfield people can depend on it that no Plainfield man, whose interests lie in Plainfield, is going to force any plan of sewage disposal on to the city that will in any way injury its residental or business prospects.

Women Who Want to Vote.

Just now, there are flying about in this town, and indeed all over the State, a thousand or more copies of the petition asking that School Suffrage be restored to the women of New Jersey. This petition will be presented to the Legislature at Trenton next week, and it is strongly hoped that they will take favorable action on it.

"No one has refused to sign for me", said a lady who is one of the canvassers for Plainfield; "and one conservative gentleman said 'Sign that petition? Yes indeed, I would go a long way to sign it." All who are interested in the cause of education, and who is not, should attend the meeting at High School Hall on Saturday evening of this week, when many well-known speakers will give the reasons why women should have a voice in school elections, and will tell how well school suffrage for women has worked in our own State (in the rural districts) and elsewhere.

"Dr. Deane's Dyspepsia Pills

GIRLS CLUB OPENED.

A Place for Recreation and Instruction for Young Women.

The reading room of the Girls Club, on West Second street near Madison avenue, was formally opened last night, under the auspices of the Ever-Ready Circle of King's Daughters.

The rooms, with piano, chairs, tables covered with books, papers and games, pictures, lamps, and a profusion of flowers, presented a very pleasant and homelike appearance.

At 8:30 every chair was filled, and a little entertainment was given. First came a piano solo by Miss Clyde Burnett, "The Prophetic Bird", by Schumann; then a recitation by Miss Mary Luckey, "Briar Rose". Miss Violet Irnell followed with a violin solo, "Polish Dance", by Kuiawiak, accompanied on the piano by Miss Burnett. The next number was another piano solo by Miss Burnett, "Dance Caprice", by Grieg, after which Miss Luckey recited "How she entertained her sister's beau", which kept her hearers laughing from beginning to end.

Miss Lillian Estelle Oakley, President of the Ever-Ready Circle, then said a few words, explaining to the audience that the reading room would be open from 7:30 to 9:30 every evening except Sunday, through the Summer, and that girls were cordially invited to go there, where they would find good books and magazines, entertaining games, the piano always open, and some one to welcome and make them feel at home. She then asked those who would enjoy these privileges to sign their names in the register in order that the Circle might know how many were interested. She spoke of the intention to open classes in cooking, sewing, etc., in the Fall, and closed by inviting all present to remain while refreshments were served.

Other members of the Circle served lemonade and cake, and a social time was enjoyed by all, the King's Daughter and their friends endeavoring to make their guests enjoy themselves and feel at home.

At the close of the evening, the register showed a long list of names and addresses.

The rooms will be open, in future, every evening except Sunday.

The young women are very grateful for all the gifts that have been sent them, especially for the piano, and for the kindness of The Daily Press in allowing them the use of its columns. There are still, however, many things that they greatly need; especially would they be grateful for two or three lamps, and for some comfortable chairs.

CHURCH CHIMES.

The young people at the First Presbyterian Church are planning for an enjoyable time tomorrow when they will conduct a strawberry festival.

Mrs. Howard Pope, Mrs. Dunn and Miss Blisch compose the committee in charge of the festival to be held at the First Presbyterian Church tomorrow afternoon and evening and Friday evening.

Rev. C. R. Barnes, D. D., pastor at the First Methodist Church, has kindly consented to take charge of the preparatory services in Trinity Reformed Church, Friday evening, for Rev. Cornelius Schenck, the pastor, who is ill.

THE SECRET ORDERS.

At the regular meeting of the Carpenters and Joiners, held last night, P. T. Bogert, W. H. Lunger and P. A. VanFleet were appointed to confer with the Red Men's committee on the Fourth of July celebration.

THE PATH OF MURTOGH.

By Harold Frederic.

CHAPTER II.

(Copyright, 1895.)

They stood motionless in the gathering dusk, and the bard turned the problem over deliberately. At last he seemed to shake his head. "They would not be displaying such piety, as the old stories of them go," he suggested, "or—I mean it well to you, Murty—or breaking husbands' heart with vows of celibacy."

The O'Mahony pushed the old man from him. "Then if she be a saint," he cried, "why, then, it were better for me to make ten thousand more blind men like you, and tear my own eyes out, and lead you all headlong over the cliff there, than risk the littlest offense to her pure soul!"

The old bard held out a warning hand. "People are coming!" he said. Then gliding toward his chief, he seized the protecting arm again and patted it and fawned against it. "Where you go Murty," he said eagerly, "I follow. What you say, I say."

Some dancing lights had suddenly revealed themselves at the corner of the nearest castle wall. Murtogh had not realized before that it was dusk. "They will be looking for me," he said, and moved forward, guiding his companion's steps. The thought that with Owny it was always dark rose in him, and drove other things away.

Three men with torches came up—rough men with bare legs and a single shirt-like tunic of yellow woolen cloth, and uncovered heads with tangled and matted shocks of black hair. The lights they bore gleamed again in the fierce eyes which looked out from under their forelocks.

"O'Mahony," one of them said, "the liathan priest is at the gate—young Donogh, son of Donogh Bhade, who fled to Spain. He is called Father Donatus now."

"What will he want here?" growled Murtogh. "I have beaten his father; if I have the mind, his tonsure will not hold me from beating him also."

"He has brought a foreign Spaniard, a young man with breeches and a sword, who comes to you from the King of Spain."

Murtogh straightened himself and disengaged the arm of the blind man. "Run forward, you two," he ordered sharply, "and call all the men from the bawns and the cattle and the boats, and I will have them light torches, and stand in a line from the second tower to the postern, and show their spears well in front and be silent. I will not have any man talk but myself, or thrust himself into notice. We were Kings of Rathlin, and we have our own matters to discuss with the Kings of Spain."

A FOREIGN SPANIARD WHO COMES TO YOU FROM THE KING OF SPAIN.

Three score fighting men, some bearing lights, and all showing shields and spears or javelins or long hooked axes, crowded in the semblance of a line along the narrow way to the large keep—and behind them packed four times their number of women and children—watched Murtogh when he brought his guests past from the gate.

He moved proudly up the boreen, with a slow step and the gleam of a high nature in his eyes. His own people saw afresh how great was his right to be proud. The broad hard muscles of his legs, straining to burst their twisted leather thongs as he walked; the vast weight and thickness of the breast and shoulders, under the thin Summer cloak of cloth from the Low Countries, which he held wrapped tight about them; the corded sinews of his big bare neck; above all, the lion-like head, with its dauntless regard and its splendid brown-black mane, and the sparkle of gold in the bushing glib on his brow—where else in all Ireland would their match be found? But for that strange injunction to silence, the fighters of the sept would be splitting the air with yells for their chieftain. They struck their weapons together and made the gaze they bent upon him burn with meaning, and he, without looking, read it, and bore himself more nobly yet, and the mothers and wives and little ones huddled behind in the darkness, groaned aloud with the pain of their joy in Murty Mordha.

It swelled the greatness of Murtogh when they looked upon those who followed him. "It is the soggarth liathan," they whispered, at view of the young priest, with his pointed face and untimely whitened hair. He would not turn his ferret glance to right or left, as he followed close in his cousin's lordly footsteps, for the reason that these sea wolves of Dunlogher had ravished and burnt his father's country within the year, and slain his brother, and gnashed their teeth now, even as he passed, for rage at the sight of him.

And the messenger who came to speak to Murty the words of the King of Spain! They grinned as they stared upon him. An eel-fly, a lame fledgeling gull, a young crab that has lost its shell. Thus they murmured of him. His legs were scarce the bigness of a Cape woman's arms, and were clad in red silken cloth stretched as close as skin. He had foolish little feet, with boots of yellow leather rising to the knee, and from the mid-thigh to the waist were unseemly bulging breeches, blown out like a buoy, and gashed downwise with stripes of glowing colors, repeated again in his flowing sleeves. His burnished steel corselet and long reed-like sword would be toys for children in Dunlogher. His face, under its wide plumed hat of drab felt, was that of no soldier at all—a thin, smooth, rounded face of a strange smoky darkness of hue, with tiny upturned moustachios, and delicately bended nose. And the eyes of him! They seemed to be the half of his countenance in size, what with their great dusky-white balls, and sloe black centres, and their thick raven fringes and brows that joined each other. The armed kernes who stood nearest took not much heed of these eyes, but the older women, peeping between their shoulders, saw little else, and they made the sign of the cross at the sight.

"I COME ON THE BUSINESS OF GOD."

When two hours had passed the baser folk of Dunlogher knew roughly what was in the wind. Two wayfaring men of humble station had come in the train of the Spaniard, and though they had no Irish, their story somehow made itself told. A ship from Spain, which indeed Dunlogher had seen pass a week before, had put in at Dingle, on the Kerry coast, and had landed James Fitzmaurice, the Papal legate Sanders, some other clergy, and a score and more Spanish gentlemen or men at arms, with a banner blessed by the Holy Father. A great army from Spain and Italy would follow in their wake. But, mean time, the first comers were building a fort at Smerwick, and the clan of Fitzgerald was up, and messengers were flying through the length and breadth of Munster and Connaught, passing the word to the Catholic chiefs that the hour of driving the English into the sea was at hand.

The lower floors of the castle and the pleasant grassy bawns outside, cool with the soft sea wind of the Summer night, were stirred to a common fervor by these tidings. The other O'Mahonys, the chiefs of Dunmanus and Dunbeacon to the north, of Ballydevlin, Leamcon, Ardintenant and Rosbrin to the south, and elsewhere in Desmond the O'Sullivans, MacCarthys, O'Driscolls and the rest were clashing their shields. Ah, when they should see Murty striding into the field!

In the big hall overhead, where after three courses of stone stairs were climbed—so narrow that a man in armour must needs walk sideways—the abode of the chieftain and his own blood began—Murtogh was ready to hear the message of the King of Spain.

The broad, rough-hewn table, with its dishes of half-cleaned bones and broken cheeses and bread, its drinking horns and flagons, and litter of knives and spoons, had been given over to the master's greyhounds, who stood with forepaws on the board and insinuated their long necks and muzzles noiselessly here and there among the remains of the meal. A clump of reeds, immersed in a brazier of fish oil, burned smokily among the dishes for light.

When, at the finish of the eating, Murtogh had given the signal for departure to the dozen strong men nearest akin to him, or in best favor, there were left only his son, a slow, good lad, born of a first wife long since dead, the blind Owny, the Spaniard and the liathan (or prematurely gray) young priest.

Then Murtogh said to this last man. "Donogh, son of Donogh Bhade, I have not frowned on you nor struck you, for the reason that you are my guest. But because my hand is open to you, it is no reason that I should lie, and pretend that I am your friend or you mine. Your brother, Diarmaid, the one I could not get to kill, calls himself my heir, and twice has sought to take the life of my son here, my Donogh baoth. Therefore, I will have you go now, and sit below with the others, or read your prayers in your chamber, where you will sleep, because I will hear now what the King of Spain says to me, and that is not meant for your ears."

The priest stood on his feet. "Your pride does not become you, Murty Mordha," he said, "even as I am sent to you for your soul's sake and the glory of religion." His voice was thin and high-pitched, but there was no fear in it.

"I will not be taking trouble for my soul just now," replied Murty; "that will be for another time, when I am like to die. And then I will have my own confessors, and not you, nor any one like you. So you will go now, as I bid you."

Father Donatus, standing still, curled his lip in a broad smile. "You are a great man, Murty! You could dishonor my father and slay my brother like the headstrong bullock that you are; but there are things you cannot do. You cannot lay your finger to me because I come on the business of God."

"It is the business of the King of Spain that I will be thinking of," said Murty, with curtness.

"They are the same," rejoined the young priest. "And you are wrong to say what you will be thinking of, because you have not a mind to think at all. If you could think, you would know that you cannot have the words of the King of Spain except when I interpret them to you. This noble gentleman, who comes with me, speaks more tongues than one, but he has no Irish, and you—it is well known that you have nothing else. Don Tello has sat at your side for two hours, and you have not observed that each word betwe-

THE TURN OF LIFE.

WOMAN'S CRITICAL PERIOD

Contemplated with Less Fear than of Old.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

There is no period in woman's earthly career which she approaches with so much anxiety as the "change of life." Yet during the past twenty years women have learned much from a woman.

It is safe to say that women who prepare themselves for the eventful period pass through it much easier than in the past.

There is but one course to pursue. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound should be used in time to subdue the nervous complications, and prepare the system for the change.

It is well for those approaching the time to write Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., and get her free advice.

Such testimony as the following should be convincing:—

"Your Vegetable Compound has been a God-send to me: it saved my life when all else failed. I would have been in my grave ten years ago but for it. My womb had fallen and rested on the bladder. The doctor could not relieve me: my mind was deranged. Your Compound cured me. It helped me through the change of life all right: am now in good health. It has also cured my husband of kidney trouble: made him like a new man. Please state my words in the strongest terms. I am glad to send you my picture. I travelled twelve miles to have it taken for you. MRS. W. L. DAY, Bettsville, O.

WENDELL PHILLIPS.

Tribute to the Composer of "The Star Spangled Banner."

Two years after the attempted hanging of Garrison—on the 8th of December, 1837—this same Boston mob came together again, this time in Faneuil Hall, the old cradle of liberty, to put down a handful of abolitionists who had convened there to announce the killing of Elijah P. Lovejoy by the patriotic people of Alton, Ill. After the reading of the resolutions, drawn by William Ellery Channing, a storm of hisses swept through the house, and in the midst of the storm the attorney general of Massachusetts mounted the platform and began to denounce the resolutions. They were incendiary, he said; they were treasonable. Lovejoy had "died as the fool dieth," and the Alton rioters were a patriotic band, worth to rank with the "orderly mob" who in 1773 had thrown overboard the tea in Boston harbor.

Wendell Phillips was there. He was only 25 years of age and had never spoken in public, but now he elbowed his way through the dense throng and clambered up the steps of the platform. As he stepped to the front his manly beauty and perfect self-possession drew to him instant attention, and with his utterance a deep stillness fell upon the noisy assemblage. "When," he said, "I heard the gentleman [the attorney general] lay down principles which placed the rioters, incendiaries and murderers of Alton side by side with Otis and Hancock, with Quincy and Adams, I thought those pictured lips [pointing to the portraits along the walls] would have broken into voice to rebuke this recreant American, this slanderer of the dead. For the sentiments he has uttered on soil consecrated by the prayers of Puritans, the blood of patriots, the earth should have yawned and swallowed him up." Then, standing face to face with that mob, which had come expressly to break up the meeting, he poured forth a torrent of indignant eloquence which sent the crowd away enthusiastic upholders of the liberty that had been trodden down at Alton. Such was the magic of his tongue, such the remarkable power by which in a moment he could create a crowd of "orderly conservatives" into as many "howling fanatics."

This was the first brand that Phillips threw upon the great bonfire that was to be extinguished only in the blood of 500,000 of freemen. There arose an army of agitators, but none of such transcendent ability as Phillips. More even than Garrison he became the leader of the Abolitionists, and like the big gray horse that Rosecrans rode through his campaign in West Virginia, he always managed, no matter how rapid the march, to keep fully a length ahead of the remainder of the battalion.—Edmund Kirke.

Epigrams By Lincoln.

We cannot escape history.

Let none falter who thinks he is right.

If slavery is not wrong, then nothing is wrong.

Come what will, I will keep my faith with friend and foe.

All that I am, all that I hope to be, I owe to my angel mother.

There is no grievance that is a fit object of redress by mob law.

This country, with its institutions, belongs to the people who inhabit it.

I authorize no bargains for the Presidency, and will be bound by none.

For thirty years I have been a temperance man, and I am too old to change.

No man is good enough to govern another without the other's consent.

I believe this Government cannot permanently endure half slave and half free.

Gold is good in its place, but living, brave and patriotic men are better than gold.

This Government must be preserved in spite of the acts of any man or any set of men.

Nowhere in the word is presented a Government of so much liberty and equality.

Slavery is founded in the selfishness of man's nature—opposition to it in his love of justice.

If I live this accursed system of robbery and shame in our treatment of the Indians shall be reformed.

Understanding the spirit of our institutions to aim at the elevation of men, I am opposed to whatever tends to degrade them.

The reasonable man has long since agreed that intemperance is one of the greatest, if not the greatest of all evils among mankind.

The purposes of the Almighty are perfect, and must prevail, though we erring mortals may fail accurately to perceive them in advance.

I protest against the counterfeit logic which concludes, because I do not want a black woman for a slave I must necessarily want her for a wife.

Phillips' Red Hot Retort.

The Rev. Dr. F. W. Gunsaulus, of Chicago, relates that he was once listening to a vehement arraignment of the slave traffic by Wendell Phillips in Philadelphia when a clergyman arose and said to the orator: "Sir, if you really believe these things you are saying, why don't you go South and save them?" To which Phillips replied in tones of thunder: "And you, sir—you profess to save souls from hell—why don't you go to hell to save them?"

EDDIE LEONERT—"STRAIGHTWAY."

the Nathan priest, and did not move toward him. "You are in the right to wear a gown," he said, slowly, "because you have the tongue and the evil temper of an ugly girl. You speak foolish things in your heat, and they disgrace you. I have the best mind that any man in my family ever had. I have more thoughts in my mind than there are words in your Latin book. I would speak whatever I chose to this gentleman, and I would understand his speech when I troubled myself to do so. But I will not do that—for some time at least; I will have my wife come, and she will sit here, and she will tell me his words, and I will be taking my ease."

Murtogh Mordha called his son to his side, and gave him a message to deliver.

The priest, smiling in his cold way, leant over and spoke for the space of a minute in a tongue strange to Dunlogher into the Spaniard's ear. Then he stood erect, and gazed at Murtogh with an ill-omened look, and so turned and strode after the lad out of the door.

CHAPTER III.

(Copyright, 1895.)

A young woman of the rarest beauty, tall and slender, and with the carriage of a great lady, came into the chamber and moved across to the high, carved chair which Murtogh made ready for her, and seated herself upon it as upon a throne. She had a pale, fair skin, and her hair, coiled heavily in plaits upon her shoulders, was of the hue of a red harvest sun. There were jewels in this hair, and upon her throat and hands and her long robes were of rich shining stuffs. A chain of wooden beads, with a cross of gold at the end, hung from her girdle, and she gathered this in her fingers as she sat.

The boy, Donogh baoth, came with her, and crouched in humility on the floor at her side. His thick form and dark hair, and his over-large head, which was not to be noted before, spoke a likeness now to his father. When, as if under the spell of her attraction, he nestled nearer the lady's chair, and touched her garment with his hand, she drew it away.

Murtogh Mordha, before he took his seat again, and leant back to half lie upon the skins thrown upon it, told her the Spaniard's name, and explained to her his errand. The Spaniard, bowing himself low, sank upon one knee, and reverently kissed her hand, as Murty had seen his father kiss the ring of the Bishop of Ross. He was proud to observe this, because his wife was holier and more saintly still than any bishop.

The lady smiled upon the Spaniard, and all that she said to him, and he to her, was in his tongue. "I cannot speak it well," she said. Her voice had the sweetness of a perfume in the air. "I lived at Seville, in the old convent there, for only two years. I have no joy of remembrance now save in the peace and charm of those years there: but I fear my memory of the dear speech is dimmed. But I will listen with all my ears—and oh, so gladly!"

She fastened her regard upon his eyes—the great, rolling, midnight eyes—and held it there, that she might the better follow his speech.

"Beautiful lady," the Spaniard said, "I learn only now the power of our language, spoken by such lips, may have to enthrall the hearing. Condone my error, I pray you, but I caught from Father Donatus that you were this strong chieftain's wife, and I see that you are his daughter; and even that is strange, to look upon him and you."

"I am his wife, but only in name, naught else," she answered. The wave of comprehension sweeping over the surface of the Spaniard's eyes made instant confidence between them. "I am in captivity here. He is a pirate, a Goth, a murderous barbarian. He and his savages here—but of this more a little hence. I beg you now to speak something of your mission—your errand here. He is as helpless to follow our words as one of those hounds; but no dog is keener to suspicion."

A YOUNG WOMAN OF THE RAREST BEAUTY.

The Spaniard, with eager swiftness of speech, piled one upon another the curtailed topics of his business. The lady, moving her fingers along the beads, gleaned the marrow pith of it, and dressed it forth in new phrases for the Lord of Dunlogher.

The Schools Talked About.

The Plainfield Branch Alliance of Unitarian and Other Liberal Christian Women met yesterday afternoon for the last time this season. They will resume their meetings next Fall. The interesting subject discussed yesterday was "The Public School System; is it effective, progressive, satisfactory; Kindergartens and Manual Training; Compulsory Education." Mrs. H. B. Wells read a very interesting paper on the subject, after which Principal H. M. Maxson gave a helpful talk telling of his experience in school matters. Mrs. Opdyke followed with an exceedingly well prepared paper on "Manual Training". Miss E. M. Browne added materially to the interest of the meeting by giving facts that were indisputable. Mr. Maxson gave the women an invitation to visit the East Orange High School, on Monday and Tuesday next, when they could witness an exhibition of manual training work.

Mr. D. Wiley, ex-postmaster, Black Breek, N. C., was so badly afflicted with rheumatism that he was only able to hobble around with canes, and even then it caused him great pain. After using Chamberlain's Pain Balm he was so much improved that he threw away his canes. He says this liniment did him more good than all other medicine and treatment put together. For sale at 50 cents per bottle at Reynolds's Pharmacy.

It Did the Business.

Mr. J. H. Cobb, publisher of the Mirror, at Brockton, N. Y., says: "For nearly two years the Mirror has been publishing the advertisements of Chamberlain's Remedies. A few days ago the writer was suffering from a bowel trouble and resorted to an old remedy which did not prove efficacious; finally he tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and two doses did the business, checking it completely. For sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy.

Agreeably Surprised.

"I had a very severe cold on my lungs that caused much soreness and gave me considerable uneasiness in regard to the result," says Mr. T. E. Smith, of Billerica, Mass. "A local druggist called my attention to Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and on his recommendation I gave the remedy a careful trial. The result surprised me; I recovered entirely in three days." 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy.

A Remarkable Cure of Rheumatism.

From the Groton Connecticut Review.—"David Lewis, who has been afflicted all winter by rheumatism, is out again and all due to one of the medicines advertised in our columns. After trying everything possible, he used Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which has relieved him of all pain, from which he was a constant sufferer and promises to make him fit for duty soon. We know David has been a great sufferer and are glad to see him around again." For sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy.

THE BICYCLE RACES.

A Great Day at the Crescent's Oval.

NO RECORDS WERE BROKEN.

The Track Was in Good Condition, and the Atmosphere Clear, But No Fast Time Was Made—Baron Hand Lowered the Track Record—Cabanne Won the Scratch Race.

Though the track was in the best of condition and weather just hot enough for fast racing, the National Circuit meet on the Crescent Oval yesterday afternoon was not a record breaker. That is, it was not a record breaker among the contestants, but with the attendants it was. Over 6,000 were in attendance. Before one o'clock Park avenue was lined with a constant stream of humanity wending their way towards the oval, and as the time neared 2:30 that thoroughfare became one vast panorama of humanity moving on bicycles, in carriages, in carryalls and on foot. At the oval grounds the crowd surged through the gates in on to the grounds, and scattered about. The reserved seats in the grand stand had all been sold long before the gates were opened, and yet hundreds clamored to get in to the structure, only to be driven back into the open space around the track. By two o'clock every bit of seating room had been pre-empted on the bleachers, and those who arrived after that hour were forced to secure "S. R. O." around the upper end of the racing course. Old Sol shot out his scorching rays in a manner that will give the laundries lots of work. The thermometer registered 97 degrees in the shade, and what it was outside can be better imagined than told. People fanned themselves until they were exhausted, wiped themselves with handkerchiefs until they could wring a stream of water from them, and then—well some, more bold than the rest, said things that would have have been better if left unsaid, while others kept mum and just thought—and you know how much people can think when they are roasting.

In the training stalls in under the grand-stand the scene was one of activity. Here the racers, with the assistance of their trainers, were getting themselves into condition for the events in which they were to contest. The odor of witch hazel and various other muscle invigorating liniments were dominant. Some were just donning their riding costumes, others were coming in from the track where they had been practicing, others stood gathered in little clusters gossiping about their chances of winning and other phases of track talk.

The programme announced the races to commence at 2:30, but it was fifteen minutes later before they were started, owing to the delay in the arrival of the L. A. W. officials from the Milburn road race.

The scheduled events were preceded by Albert Shock, champion long distance rider of the world, riding an exhibition mile in 2:51 1-5.

The summaries and details of the races follows:

ONE-MILE NOVICE—CLASS A.

First heat—Won by H. A. Sanders, unattached, New York city; V. F. Green, P. H. S. A. A., second; R. Behrman, Madison Wheelman, third. Time 2:41 1-5.

The riders started out at a good pace with Green in a good position at the rear. A. Garrigues set the pace with the rest well bunched behind. On the last lap, Bahrman shot out of the bunch with the rest following close behind. At the short turn E. V. Lorton of this city fell.

Green worked his way to the front and gained the lead by a splendid spurt, only to be be caught at the tape by Sanders, who won by an inch.

Second heat—Won by S. W. Johnson, Jr., Bushwick Wheelmen, Brooklyn; J. Nounenbacker, M. B. C., New York city, second; L. E. Blackwell, Jr., Harlem Wheelmen, New York city, third. Time 2:34.

J. H. VonGlalur, Jr., Harlem Wheelman, set an easy pace at the start with the other riders riding abreast. The speed was gradually increased until Johnson left the bunch never to be caught, crossing the tape in front of all the rest. Blackwell was close behind but was passed on the homestretch after a hard fight.

Third heat—Won by William Pearing, unattached, New York city; B. L. Johnson, unattached, Somerville, second; William E. Havens, Crescent Wheelmen, third. Time 2:51 2-5.

Havens started out as pacemaker, but soon fell back with the rest, and all loafed for the first two laps. J. Beckett tried to run away from his field but was soon caught and passed. P. Young fell on the short turn. The racers came down the finish like a whirlwind with R. Tomlinson of Plainfield, fifth.

Fourth heat—Won by C. J. Bird, Elizabeth Athletic Club; C. J. Carpenter, Elizabeth Athletic Association, second; E. W. Goff, Somerville, third. Time 2:35. J. M. Androvette set the pace for two laps, but fell on the last. Bird won easily, while Carpenter and Goff fought for second place.

Final heat—Won by S. W. Johnson, Jr.; E. L. Johnson, second; C. J. Bird, third. Time 2:53 2-5. Sanders set a slow pace with the rest bunched, Green and Havens together. S. W. Johnson, Jr., made another of his long spurts and won the race easily. Green got fifth by a length, while Havens remained with the rear bunch.

TWO-THIRD-MILE SCRATCH—CLASS A.

First heat—Won by George B. Cobb, Jr., Harlem Wheelmen; W. D. McGurn, Harlem Wheelmen, second; George Rice, Star Aihletic Club, Newark, third. Time 2:07. A regular loaf, McGurn leading them, only ended at the long turn on the last lap.

Second heat—Won by Elmer Hodgson, unattached, Lyndhurst; R. L. Arner, Allen Wheelmen, Philipsburg, second; E. W. Heyer, Bridgeport Wheelmen, third. Time 1:44 3-5. Another very poor exhibition of riding, except at the lap when a very pretty race occurred.

Third Heat—Won by L. G. Hoppe, Liberty Wheelmen, Brooklyn; C. B. Jack, Reading, Pa., second; F. B. Egelhoff, Prospect Wheelmen, Brooklyn, third. Time 1:40 2-5. F. F. Goodman and J. A. Baldwin led out at a fast clip and held the lead until the second lap when they fell back. Hoppe won by two lengths after a magnificent rush, while the Riverside Wheelman did not secure a place.

Final Heat—Won by L. G. Hoppe; Elmer Hodgson, second; E. W. Heyer, third. Time, 1:37 1-5. A time limit of 1:50 was put on the race, and the riders set a hot pace. C. B. Jack led, but was passed on the long turn by the three first men in a very pretty manner. Hoppe won by two lengths.

TWO-THIRD MILE SCRATCH—CLASS B.

Won by L. D. Cabanne, Spalding team; H. H. Maddox, Sterling team, second; W. J. Helfort, Globe team, third. Time 1:40. Cabanne led the bunch with Maddox following closely. After a hard tussle, Cabanne succeeded in leaving Maddox and won by a wheel.

ONE-MILE HANDICAP—CLASS A.

First Heat—Won by B. L. Jacobus, Montclair Wheelmen; Thomas A. Cuming, Crescent Wheelmen, second; J. A. Powell, N. Y. A. C., third; E. C. Johnson, Harlem Wheelmen, fourth; W. C. Roome, N. J. A. C., fifth. Time. 2:50. Roome started from scratch and after some good riding caught the leading bunch and secured fifth place. Cuming held second place for two laps, and managed to finish there. Johnson made a strong effort to outspurt the others, but was forced back to fourth place.

Second Heat—Won by Elmer Hodgson, unattached, Lyndhurst; C. B. Jack, Reading, Pa., second; W. D. McGurn, Harlem Wheelmen, third; J. G. Johnson, Harlem Wheelmen, fourth; Wm. M. McCutchen, P. B. C., fifth. Time 2:18 1-5. McCutchen and Havens took the lead and held it until the third lap, when Gregory went to the front and carried the bunch on, only to be dropped far in the rear at the finish. J. S. Broadnax, Harlem Wheelmen, fell on the far turn.

Third Heat—Won by J. M. Baldwin, Newark; E. W. Heyer, Bridgeport Wheelmen, second; L. G. Hoppe, Liberty Wheelmen, Brooklyn, third; G. C. Carpenter, E. A. C., fourth; J. W. Tilford, Riverside Wheelmen, fifth. Time, 2:16. E. A. Bofinger started from scratch, but could not overcome the large lead of his competitors. S. C. Crane led the pace, tor most of the distance, but fell to the rear in in the final spurt.

Final heat—Won by Powell Jacobus second, Jack third. Time, 2:19 2-5. All rode their hardest and Bofinger from scratch could not overcome the lead. On the last lap E. C. Johnson, Tilford and J. G. Johnson fell and E. C. Johnson was seriously injured. Cuming tried hard to keep the lead, but the pace was too hot and he secured sixth place by two lengths.

ONE-MILE SCRATCH—CLASS B.

Won by L. D. Cabanne, Spalding team; A. I. Brown, Sterling team, second; M. T. Carter, Sterns team, third. Time, 2:38 2-5. Sanger led a rather slow procession which was brought to an end by a spurt by Cabanne and Brown. Sanger followed suit but was unable to catch them, while Carter pushed in and secured third place.

ONE-MILE HANDICAP—CLASS B.

Won by W. J. Helfert, Globe team, 100 yards; I. A. Silvie, Riverside Wheelmen, 120 yards, second; H. R. Steenson, Stearns team, 80 yards, third. Time, 2:10 3-5. M. F. Carter, 140 yards, and C. Gans, 160 yards, led with a rattling pace. Cabanne from the 20-yard mark tried hard to catch the leading bunch and did so, but the effort was too much and he failed to get a place. Helfert won by six inches after a tremendous spurt.

TWO-MILE HANDICAP—CLASS A.

Won by R. L. Asner, Allentown Wheelmen, 190 yards; C. S. Henshaw, Greenwich Wheelmen, Brooklyn, 200 yards, second; Geo. B. Cobb, Jr., Harlem Wheelmen, 110 yards, third. Time, 4:56 2-5. A. J. Riley, 240 yards, and S. W. Johnson, Jr., 250 yards, set a merry pace with W. C. Roome, N. J. A. C., scratch, as last man. The pace was too great and Roome gave up the attempt to catch the leaders. A little loafing enabled C. K. Granger, 35 yards, to catch up with the foremost bunch and then the riders closed up until the last lap when Asner won by half a length in an exciting finish.

It was next announced that E. T. Hand of the Crescent Wheelmen and the Spalding team would attempt to break the track record of 2:09 3-5 made by Monte Scott last Summer. He was paced by two tandems, the Beam Brothers and Goodman and Granger, alternately. He was picked up in good form and finished close behind the tandem. The timekeepers announced his time as 2:09 2-5, one-fifth of a second better than the track record.

NEW YORK TIMES WINNER'S RACE—CLASS A.

Won by L. G. Hoppe, Liberty Wheelmen, Brooklyn; R. L. Asner, Allentown Wheelmen, second; B. L. Jacobus, Montclair Wheelmen, third. Time, 3:33 3-5. Five riders started in this event, which proved a most disgraceful exhibition of racing. The first two laps were ridden at a four-minute gait with Asner pacing. Then at the last the riders finished in a burst of speed, Hoppe winning without trouble.

THE MILBURN RACE.

Scott and Barnett Get the Time Prizes.

The Milburn-Irvington road race was won by F. M. Richt, of Brooklyn, in one hour, 14 minutes and 30 seconds. The time prize was won by Monte Scott of this city, one hour 12 minutes and 28 seconds, with A. H. Barnett, of Westfield, second, in one hour, 12 minutes and 29 seconds. Monte finished twenty-fifth and Barnett twenty-ninth.

Titus crossed the tape at ten miles in 28 minutes and 55 seconds, and seemed to be showing his pace. After riding two miles further he gave it up. It was the general impression that Titus would not finish the twenty-five miles, as he had been training down South on a track, and it was considered foolhardy for him to engage in a twenty-five-mile road race over a very hilly course without some recent training.

With Titus out of the race, Barnett and Scott went right in for the time prizes. Scott finished his first five miles in 13 minutes and 46 seconds, and the ten miles in 28 minutes and 9 seconds. At fifteen miles the contest had resolved itself down to about five riders for first place. Monte Scott covered his fifteen miles in 42 minutes and 48 seconds.

Scott was leading Barnett at twenty miles, and his time, 57 minutes and 58 seconds, made it evident that no records would be broken.

SERVICES AT SCOTCH PLAINS.

Roswell G. Horr Delivered a Patriotic Address in Music Hall — Glowing Tributes to the Men Who Cemented the Ties of Unionism—Mr. Horr Says All Should Cultivate Patriotism.

The celebration of Memorial Day by the G. A. R. and kindred organizations carried with it more significance this year than it has for some years past. For weeks plans have been formulating with the idea of making it the most successful ever held.

In the morning John Hand Camp, No. 28, S. of V., accompanied by the Plainfield Cornet Band, a delegation from the G. A. R. Posts and Women's Relief Corps, went to Scotch Plains, where they held special services over the grave of the late John Hand. When Scotch Plains was reached they were met by the Hook and Ladder Company and a large number of school children prettily dressed in white, the latter being in charge of Rev. Dr. Parks. They carried handsome bouquets of flowers that were used in decorating the graves. The party then marched to the Baptist Cemetery and took positions around John Hand's grave. After the band had rendered America in an effective manner the opening part of the service was taken up by Capt. W. C. Dobbins, after which Chaplain Raymond McVoy offered prayer. The members of the Camp then sang one verse of America. Rev. Mr. Braker was introduced and made a short patriotic address. He was followed by Dr. Parks who also made a few remarks. Both were excellent and impressed the large audience that was present.

A quartette consisting of H. J. Martin, L. A. Hummer, Charles Hummer and E. P. T. Smith rendered an impressive vocal selection, during which the school children decorated the grave.

A dirge was then played by the band after which three volleys were fired over the grave by the firing squad. The benediction was pronounced by Dr. Parks. A circuit was then made of the cemetery, and the graves of comrades were decorated with flowers by the children. The Camp and G. A. R. veterans marched from the cemetery and returned to Plainfield, the firemen accompanying them for a short distance.

At 12:45 the Grand Army posts and Sons of Veterans, and a delegation from Somerset Council, No. 104, J. O. U. A. M., met at Headquarters, and forming, followed out the line of march as arranged by Marshal Wm. Hand, who led the procession. They went down Park avenue to Fifth street, to Central avenue, to Front street, to Grove, to Linden avenue, to Somerset street, and when in front of the North Plainfield Public School, halted to witness the raising of the flag that was presented by Somerset Council a few days ago. From there they proceeded to Music Hall. The hall was filled with friends of the G. A. R., Sons of Veterans, and Woman's Relief Corps.

On the stage were seated a large number of children dressed in white and each hold holding a small flag. The services were in charge of Commander W. W. Coriell, assisted by Comrades Mague, Crosley, Randolph, M. C. Dobbins and C. B. Stephens. Dr. Lewis opened the services with prayer. The children, under the direction of First Sergeant H. J. Martin of Camp 28, rendered excellent vocal music. Mr. Martin deserves great credit for his efforts and the children also, for the excellent results. Ex-Congressman Roswell G. Horr was then introduced and spoke interestingly to the veterans and their friends. He told in a realistic manner the origin of patriotism, and also of what should inspire each one to cultivate it. He told about the veterans who were receiving pensions, and said that there were ten deserving ones not geting pensions where there was one undeserving. His remarks in regard to the feeling in the South at the breaking out of the war were pointed truths not to be denied. He paid glowing tributes to Lincoln, Grant, Sherman, Sheridan and others, and briefly stated the important parts they acted in bringing to a successful close the severe fight which lasted for three years. At frequent intervals Mr. Horr was loudly applauded for the wit and humor, which he mixed with the more serious sides of his address.

Following the address, Prof. Wilson of Connecticut sang effectively a war song, which was followed by a selection by the children. An impressive and interesting dialogue was then given by Miss Sadie Smith, assisted by two little girls. "The Canteen" a beautiful recitation was ably given by Sergeant of Guard H. S. Thatcher, and brought home memories of the past to the veterans. Clarence Mills then rendered a medley on the violin that was well executed, and later he gave a recitation, entitled "The Gallant Fifth". After singing by the chorus the services closed with a beautiful tableau, entitled "Emancipation." During the rendition of the programme the Cornet Band gave several choice selections.

In one of the boxes, enjoying the services, were seated Mayor Gilbert, Councilmen Frost and Westphal, H. E. Bowen, and Justice Newcorn.

The Womens Relief Corps deserve unstinted praise for their earnest efforts to make the programme of yesterday the success that it was.

After the services the children marched to the Republican Association rooms, where they were treated to an abundance of ice cream and cake.

BASEBALL VICTORY.

The Y. M. C. A. Beat the Westfield Team by One Run.

An exciting game of baseball was played between the Plainfield and Westfield Y. M. C. A. teams yesterday morning on the grounds of the latter. The teams were evenly matched and the spectators, a number of whom went from this city, were filled with the sort of enthusiasm that is expressed in the indescribable language of the kranks, and which seeks to rattle and befuddle the players. The Westfield men had the best end of the game up to the last two or three innings, when the Plainfielders got down to work and pulled out by beating their opponents by a score of 11 to 10. The score follows:

All lovers of the National game of baseball should not fail to witness the great game tomorrow afternoon between the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. and the Cranford on the Crescent Oval.

TO WASHINGTON ROCK.

Wise Young People Who Went Where It Was Cool.

The young people of Monroe Avenue Chapel were wise in taking to the mountains yesterday and thus escaping the intense heat that made it very disagreeable for those who remained in the city. The objective point was Washington Rock, which they reached about 2 in the afternoon and remained till 7:30 in the evening. During their stay various games were played to pass the time away, and later all partook of excellent refreshments.

Those in the pary were: the Misses Lottie Beekman, Georgia Beekman, Neal Beekman, Frazee, Aldrich, Ackerman, Adams, Stassord, Ada Wenzel, Bertha Wenzel, Elenore Wenzel, Mr. and Mrs. Bronard, Mr. and Mrs. Hicks, Rev. Mr. O'Donnell, and Messrs. Neuman, S. Beekman, Hayes, Saums, Aldrich, and Frank Fulton.

Perth Amboy Man Hurt.

W. S. Willis, superintendent of the Perth Amboy public schools, was riding a bicycle in Scotch Plains yesterday afternoon, when in attempting to turn out to the side of the road for a team he fell and fractured his hip. He was brought to the Muhlenberg Hospital in this city. It will be some time before he will be able to be out.

TENNIS TOURNAMENT.

Delightful Opening of the Hillside Club Yesterday.

Plainfield never presented a lovelier appearance than it did yesterday, and the Hillside Tennis Club grounds made an especially pretty picture, decorated for the Memorial Day tournament. Although the temperature was above ninety degrees all day this fact did not dampen the enthusiasm of the tennis experts, although it may have dampened their costumes. The Hillside Club had invited four neighboring tennis clubs to send two expert players each to participate with six representatives of the home club in a tournament for the honors of the day and handsome prizes. The South Orange Field Club named C. A. Gould and Holcombe Ward; the West Side Tennis Club of New York, Hunt Allen and Robert Allen; the Jersey City Tennis Club, F. C. Ferris and C. Harmsbad; while the Bergen Point Tennis Club sent but one player, H. Howard; A. B. Wadsworth, unattached, was secured to fill the vacancy. The Hillside Club was represented by H. D. West, C. S. West, F. K. Fish, Jr., L. H. Fish, C. F. Walz and R. A. Beebe. Playing began at 2 and continued with an intermission for lunch until 6, with the following results:

Preliminary Round—Beebe beat Howard by default; Harmstad beat Hunt Allen, 8-10, 6-2, 6-0; L. H. Fish beat Gould, 6-3, 3-6, 6-4; Ward beat H. D. West, 6-1, 6-1; Walz beat Robt. Allen, 6-2, 6-0; F. K. Fish, Jr., beat Wadsworth, 6-3, 6-2; Ferris and C. S. West drew byes.

First Round—Harmestad beat Beebe, 6-3, 6-2; Ward beat L. H. Fish, 8-6, 7-5; F. K. Fish, Jr., beat Walz, 6-4, and default; Ferris beat C. S. West, 9-7, 6-1.

Semi-Final Round—Ward beat Harmestad, 6-3, 6-3; F. K. Fish, Jr., beat Ferris, 6-2, 2-6, 6-2.

When the time came for the final round to be played by Messrs. Ward and F. K. Fish, Jr., Mr. Ward was unable to play, the heat having been too much for him, and he proposed to default the match and accept second place, leaving Mr. Fish winner of the Tournament. This Mr. Fish preferred not to do, and proposed an adjournment, so that it was arranged that the final round shall be played at 4 p. m. Saturday.

The outcome of the day's playing proved very satisfactory to friends of the home club.

Clarence Hobart, champion double of the United States in 1893 and 1894, drove over from Summit and was an interested spectator of a portion of the tournament.

The teas given by the Hillside Tennis Club are always a success and attended by a large number of the society people, and the tea given yesterday afternoon was largely attended and very successfully carried out. The guests were received by Mrs. A. H. Atterbury, assisted by Mrs. Dr. E. Hedges, Mrs. J. W. Reinhart, Miss Whiton and Miss Kenyon, who served tea, lemonade and cake on the lawn adjoining the club-house.

Among those present were:

Miss Florence Abbott, J. L. Anthony, F. H. Andrews, Charles F. and Mrs. Abbott, Charles W. Barbon, William Gordon Burbon of Philadelphia, John Bushnell and the Misses Bushnell, John F. Baker, Mrs. and Miss Baker, Mr. and Mrs. Josiah Brownie, Miss Bowen, Mr. Bogart, the Misses Clark, Miss Carter of Montclair, the Misses Davis, A. W. Duxbury, Miss Evans, F. K. Taken as a whole the tournament and Tea was a success, and reflect credit upon the management of the Club.

Pleasant Affair.

The second annual festival given by the Fourth Ward Athletic Club in the T. A. B. Hall Wednesday evening, was a success, both socially and financially. Dancing began at 9 and was kept up until an early hour the next morning to the musical strains of O'Reilly's orchestra. The committee in charge was composed of P. J. Reville, President; P. J. Mack, Secretary; D. J. Kieffe, Treasurer.

Nicely Presented.

The tableau of "Emancipation" given in Music Hall yesterday afternoon was arranged by W. R. Mattox. Those taking part were: Goddess—Mrs. Sadie Summers; Liberator—Mrs. C. Leland; South—Try Mattox; Africa—Cecelia Freeman; Soldier—J. H. Huntington; Sailor—Wm. Moore; Cupids—Retta Nash and Lillian Haberle.

TWENTY-SIX ARE SAFE

Colima Victims Less Than Was Supposed.

Hopes Still Entertained That Other Boats Will Be Heard From—The Steamer Went Down in Ten Minutes in One Hundred and Thirty Fathoms of Water.

San Francisco, May 31.—News conveyed here by wire from Manzenilla goes to show that the ocean disaster near there was not so horrible as former reports from the scene of the wreck would indicate. Louis R. Brewer, a coffee planter, who, with his friends, has been striving to learn something of the fate of his wife and three children who were aboard the Colima, received a telegram from a friend in Manzanilla which, although containing no definite information of Mrs. Brewer and her children, is most assuring, particularly in view of the reports to the effect that bodies were coming ashore near the scene of the wreck. The message was addressed to Mr. Brewer and read as follows:

An Assuring Message.

"Your wife and children have not yet appeared, but the shipwrecked passengers are being continually picked up from rafts and boats." No signature is attached to the message, but it is not customary to sign cable messages in view of the expense. Since early yesterday morning Mr. Brewer has been sending telegrams to parties located in all the seaport towns of Mexico, which have telegraphic communication with this country, but until the above dispatch arrived he received no response to any of his inquiries.

Twenty-two Picked Up.

Yesterday's telegram gave the names of eighteen men who had been rescued, but later dispatches say there were twenty-two picked up. "It is my opinion that one of the three men whose names were not mentioned is my son," said Mr. Cushing, father of the two boys who were passengers. "It is possible that the original message of the rescued sent ashore by the San Juan read 'The Cushings,' meaning both boys, and that in transmission the message was made to read 'Cushing,' thus leading us to think that only one boy was safe."

Discrepancies in Early Reports.

The office of the Occidental hotel was the scene of an anxious assemblage of Central Americans all day, some of whom were related to missing passengers who abandoned the Colima, and others who were deeply concerned in the safety of friends. In the morning dispatches bodies were reported as floating ashore where, old mariners claim, it would be almost impossible for bodies of persons drowned fifty miles at sea to have been washed ashore at such an early hour as to have permitted their being discovered in time to include a mention of the fact in telegraphic reports received here late last night.

One Man Is Hopeful.

Capt. Seabury of the steamship China, one of the oldest captains in the Pacific mail fleet, appears to be the most hopeful of the company's employes. In discussing the various reports of the disaster as received here the captain said: "The fact that the boat which was picked up was so well manned convinces me that there was no panic aboard the Colima in the critical hour, and such being the case I am confidently expecting to hear of the safe arrival of all the passengers and crew at some Mexican port."

News Given Out by the Company.

The Pacific Mail Steamship company gave out the following dispatch this morning from Manzanilla: "Colima foundered, going down astern, sinking entirely in ten minutes. No strong wind, only heavy swell. Same swell caught the Mexician schooners Josefina and Albina and the American schooner Hayes. Captains report heavy swells, only entering here for safety. Saved, twenty-two. Colima sunk in 130 fathoms. Steamer we sent found nobody alive. Three cabin passengers and two sailors got ashore at Coahusyana alive. Until now twenty-six persons saved."

Two Sharon, Pa., Women Lost.

Pittsburg, May 31.—Hon. Norman Hall, of Sharon, Pa., has received a telegram from John M. Thornton, one of the survivors of the ill-fated steamship Colima, which foundered off the Mexican coast on Monday. The telegram confirms the sad news that Mrs. Charles Thornton and her companion, Miss Bessie Davis, of this city, went down with the vessel. John M. Thornton is a brother-in-law of Mrs. Charles Thornton. The party were on the way to Guatemala city, where Mrs. Thornton's husband is building a railroad.

Conductor and Motorman Held.

Hartford, Conn., May 31.—Judge Hill in the police court held John M. Spear, conductor, and William McDonal, motorman, in $500 bonds until to-morrow to await the result of injuries to Joseph Langdon, a wealthy retired dry goods merchant, who was knocked down and seriously injured by the trolley car in charge of the two men.

Judgment Against the Pope.

Paris, May 31.—The divisional court at Mont Didier has condemned the Pope to pay the costs of the litigation over the will of the late Marquis de Piesis-Beliere, who bequeathed her property to his holiness, excluding her next of kin. The court refused to stay judgment.

Monument to Ashtabula Victims.

Ashtabula, O., May 31.—An imposing monument was dedicated here yesterday to the memory of the unknown victims of the Ashtabula bridge disaster, which killed 92 out of 156 human beings. Harry A. Garfield, son of the late president, was the orator.

Soldier's Statue at Cumberland, Md.

Cumberland, Md., May 31.—Memorial day was observed in this city with more than usual interest. A statue of a soldier was unveiled in the soldier lot at Rose Hill cemetery, and this incident was the attraction of the day.

People Prostrated at Cincinnati.

Cincinnati, May 31.—The heat yesterday was terrific, the mercury going to 91 1-2 in the shade. Many persons were prostrated.

Mr. D. Wiley, ex-postmaster, Black Breek, N. C., was so badly afflicted with rheumatism that he was only able to hobble around with canes, and even then it caused him great pain. After using Chamberlain's Pain Balm he was so much improved that he threw away his canes. He says this liniment did him more good than all other medicine and treatment put together. For sale at 50 cents per bottle at Reynolds's Pharmacy.

It Did the Business.

Mr. J. H. Cobb, publisher of the Mirror, at Brockton, N. Y., says: "For nearly two years the Mirror has been publishing the advertisements of Chamberlain's Remedies. A few days ago the writer was suffering from a bowel trouble and resorted to an old remedy which did not prove efficacious; finally he tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and two doses did the business, checking it completely. For sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy.

SLOWLY STARVING.

Surrounded by Plenty, but Dying for Food.

An Every-day Occurrence.—Our Friends Perishing Before Our Eyes.

A terrible experience for any one to go through, that of seeing some beloved friend actually wasting away before our eyes, unable to derive sufficient nourishment from their food to sustain life.

Medicine naturally becomes of little avail, and the various organs of the body, debilitated from a lack of nourishment, take on themselves the disease that was originally the cause of the "breakdown," and help hasten the end.

Such cases, though too prevalent, are happily becoming less frequent. The prominent physicians of to-day do things differently from those of twenty years ago. They first put the patient in a condition to stand the "siege," then enrich his blood, create for him new strength, and "build him up" generally. The patient is then in a condition to derive benefit from his medicine.

This is done by the use of Bovinine, the original raw food. It is an extract that contains the greatest amount of the life-sustaining and tissue-building properties of lean, raw meat, concentrated in the least possible bulk.

The advantage of this is obvious. A patient already greatly weakened by disease, needs to husband every particle of strength. A few drops of Bovinine will impart as much nourishment to the body as would be derived by a well person from an ordinary meal; and, in getting this nourishment, the stomach has been forced to do the least possible amount of work.

Bovinine, continued throughout an illness, greatly hastens recovery. Taken at the beginning of a wasting disease, it diverts the cause of the trouble by toning up the various organs, and getting them in a normal condition.

Bovinine is indorsed by 25,000 doctors. Its action is always beneficial, as a single trial will convince the most sceptical.

WILL IT BE DICKINSON?

Believed That He Will Succeed Gresham.

It Is Understood That He Is in Full Accord With the President's Foreign Policy—England's Aggressive Measures To Be Checked—Livingston Was to Go To Venezuela.

Washington, May 31.—Don M. Dickinson, of Michigan, according to a belief in government circles, is going to succeed to the portfolio left vacant by the death of Secretary of State Gresham. The Michigan statesman, who was postmaster-general during Mr. Cleveland's first term, is in training for the premiership. He is in thorough accord with the president's foreign policy as expressed at a recent meeting of the cabinet, and in a recent speech at Detroit, indorsed Mr. Cleveland's views on the subject.

Against Great Britain.

These views, in addition to urging a broad and patriotic sentiment in a general sense, are declared to favor an aggressive resistance of the intrusive policy of Great Britain towards desirable territory in South America, particularly directed at the moment towards the acquisition of disputed boundary rights in Venezuela.

To Protect South America.

A firm, although conservative policy, having in view the protection of South American governments from the persistent demonstrations made by Great Britain to acquire suzerainty over the weaker governments of South America, is favored by the president and endorsed by Mr. Dickinson. For these reasons it is believed Mr. Dickinson will assume the direction of the government's foreign policy.

Minister to Venezuela.

A further report in official circles is that Congressman Leonidas F. Livingston, of Georgia, is to be made minister to Venezuela, in order to carry out the details of the president's foreign policy as it applies to that nation. Mr. Livingston will shortly sail for Venezuela, as a guest of that country. He, it is expected, will instruct the Venezuelans as to the construction placed upon the Monroe doctrine by the president. If he were made the diplomatic representative of the United States while there it would not occasion any surprise.

RACING IN MARYLAND.

Pennsylvania's Pool Law Will Boom the Sport Near Baltimore.

Baltimore, May 31.—There will be more horse racing in the vicinity of Baltimore this summer than ever before. The outlook favors an extension of the six days' running meeting, which will be inaugurated at Pimlico next Monday. The board of directors of the Gentlemen's Driving park have decided to hold a mid summer trotting and pacing meeting, and the Baltimore Driving club are agitating the question of holding a harness meeting the second week in July. The new Pennsylvania law against pool selling has made Maryland a happy land for the harness-horse owners.

Hot Weather in the East.

New York, May 31.—The weather in New York city yesterday broke all records for Memorial Day by one degree, registering 85 degrees at 11 o'clock. The hot wave was general throughout New York state. Elmira reports the highest temperature, 96 degrees, and at other points it ranged between 90 and 94. At Rutland, Vt., it also was 94. The day was remarkably favorable for sporting events, not a single rainfall occurring.

GOV. MORTON IS NOT ILL.

Attributes His Fainting Spell to Indigestion.

He Has Entirely Recovered and Left New York for Albany This Morning—The Incident Causes Much Comment in Political Circles. Chauncey Depew Sees Nothing in It.

New York, May 31.—Gov. Morton was seated in his apartments in the hotel Renaissance last evening when seen by a reporter. He was sipping a glass of iced tea, and, while he looked tired, yet there was nothing about his appearance to indicate that he was really ill. Referring to his having fainted on the reviewing stand yesterday, he said:

Attributed to Iced Water.

"I feel first-rate now. That was a very unfortunate, and, at the same time, an equally unusual thing for me to do. It was, I think, due to acute indigestion. I had taken a drive previous to going to the reviewing stand, and then stood for almost two hours with uncovered head in the broiling sun. I was unwise in taking two drinks of iced water, and I think that did the damage. Some of my staff felt the heat equally as much as I did, but wisely refrained from drinking anything. It was only momentary, and I feel all right now. It was unfortunate that there was no pretecting awning at the reviewing stand, and I am afraid too much importance will be attached to my slight attack."

Comment Among Politicians.

There was a good deal of comment today among politicians over Gov. Morton's indisposition. It was said that it would militate against him in the race as a presidential candidate, for it would be said that he was not in the best of health, and that at his age the duties of the office of chief executive would be too onerous.

Nothing in It, Says Depew.

Speaking of this, Mr. Depew last evening said: "There is nothing in that. Why, six years ago in Galena, at the unveiling of the statue of Gen. Grant, it was a hot day. I felt the attack come on me. I wisely refrained from drinking iced water, however, and beckoned to those around me to shield me with umbrellas. That is something that is liable to happen to anyone, especially on a day like this one."

Starts for Albany.

The governor left for Albany this morning on the Empire state express. He was looking well and declared that he was feeling first-rate.

EMPEROR'S GREAT WELCOME.

Mr. Foster and Lord Li Sail for the Pescadore Island.

Tokio, May 31.—The emperor has returned to Hiroshima, where he was accorded a triumphant welcome. The streets through which he passed were profusely decorated, and the most intense enthusiasm was displayed by the populace.

To Transfer the Island.

Shanghai, May 31.—Lord Hi Hung Chang, son of viceroy Li Hung Chang, accompanied by John W. Foster, the American adviser of the Chinese government, sailed for the Pescadores yesterday, in order to formally transfer the island of Formosa to the Japanese, according to the terms of the treaty of Shimonoseki.

Alfred E. Cocks of Netherwood celebrated his forty-eighth birthday yesterday by teaching his brother-in-law, ex-Councilman Spangenberg, the mysteries of riding a bicycle. Although it was very warm work, Mr. Spangenberg got there.

While P. M. French and family were returning yesterday afternoon from a carriage drive they met with an accident on Somerset street. One of the hind wheels caught in the car tracks and was completely wrecked. They were obliged to get out and walk home.

Mrs. T. H. May, who has been visiting friends in New York for the past six weeks, spent Decoration Day with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Bovey of Somerset street. Mrs. May returned to New York this morning, accompanied by her little niece, Miss Alice Demarest of Stone street, where they will remain two weeks with friends in Harlem.

FOR SCHOOL SUFFRAGE.

Presentation of Reasons Why Women Should Vote.

As there is a lack of information regarding the effect of the recent decision of the Supreme Court (in the Vineland School Case handed down November 8, 1894) concerning school suffrage for women in New Jersey, and the voice which they still have at school meetings, we give the official opinion of the Hon. A. B. Poland, State Superintendent of Public Instruction. Mr. Poland says:

"The decision of the Supreme Court as to the right of women to vote at School Meetings was that under the Constitution women are not permitted to vote for election of members of Boards of Education. They may however vote on all other questions that come before school meetings, such as the voting a tax or authorizing the issuing of bonds."

It is also the law of the State that women can hold the position of School Trustee. (Laws of 1894, Chapter CCCXXXV, Part IV.) "No person shall be eligible to the office of Trustee unless He or She is above twenty-one years of age, and is a resident of the District and can read and write."

The women of New Jersey have exercised the privileges of School Suffrage for seven years, to the general satisfaction of all who are interested in the welfare of the Public Schools, and in the promotion of good order at the School Meetings, but since the decision of the Supreme Court was made, there has been a general disposition manifested on their part to stay away from School Meetings, or, if present, not to take part in the proceedings. It would appear that such course on their part was due in a large measure to the mistaken idea that their rights as voters were swept away by the decision in the Vineland case. To prove that this course is contrary to the wishes of those interested in school matters, we cite a paragraph from a recent report of one of the Boards of Education of our State, composed entirely of men:

"A matter which has caused the Board very great regret is the decision of the Supreme Court" in the Vineland case. "From the time when the franchise was first exercised by the women of this Township, there has been a decided improvement in the character of our meetings. * * * The presence of the women has had the effect of imposing restraint upon any unruly tendencies, and our meetings have been characterized by decorum and a strict regard to the rules of business."

It would seem that the women of the State have a peculiar and special claim to School Suffrage. The watchful eyes of the women should be upon the school, the other home of their children. No mother would wish to admit that her interest in her child ceases at the school door. Politics are beginning to creep into the management of school affairs in some places, and are threatening to do so in others. Will not the women of New Jersey arouse themselves to the importance of conscientious and wisely directed oversight of the schools? Let them attend school meetings and exercise the important rights that the law still gives them.

The women can see to it by their votes on appropriations that their children are not crowded into insufficient and unsafe school accommodations, that modern, well ventilated and well lighted school houses are constructed, that sufficient money is raised by taxation to maintain the the schools on a proper basis, and in this way that the women teachers who constitute nine-tenths of the working force, are paid adequate wages. True, the Vineland decision takes from women the power of electing the school officers who have the appointment of the teachers, but to supply the School Boards with sufficient funds to employ teachers of ability, is going some distance towards the achievement of the same end.

In order that the Vineland decision be not followed by others on the same line, or by acts of the Legislature which may take away from women the important school rights they still possess, let them above all, sign the petition for constitutional amendment, to be presented to the Legislature in June, and in that way seek to secure full school suffrage beyond the reach of danger, upon the same terms as men. In no other way can absolute safety be secured. Let women use all their influence with the voters in their towns and cities, with their representatives in Trenton in support of this important measure. Let them secure signatures from members of the several Boards of Education in the State, from all who are interested in the cause of education, from teachers, from recent graduates who are ever imbued with the importance of the cause. Let them not confine their efforts to the public schools. Get signatures from teachers and patrons of private schools as well. The children taught in the private schools are but a handful, compared to the great number of public school children enrolled in our public school system, and it is these children who will create the moral tone of the communities in which they live.

Exercise your present rights constantly, and in order to maintain them work as you never worked before, to obtain by Constitutional Amendment an assurance of safety for what you have and for the restoration of what has been taken away from you by the Supreme Court's construction of the Constitution.

Approved by the Executive Committee of the N. J. State Woman Suffrage Association.

WON BY ONE BIRD.

George Squiers Outshoots Jack Benner by a Score of 18 to 17.

George Squiers again showed his ability as a crack shooter yesterday afternoon, when he defeated John Benner, of Fanwood, in a match of 25 birds each, at $50 a side, by one point. This is the third match Squiers has won by one point. He drew a hard lot of birds but notwithstanding this came out in good shape.

The score follows:

G. Squiers—1 0 1 0 2 0 1 1 1 1 0 1 0 1 2 1 1 2 0 1 1 2 1 1 1 0 2—18

CYCLING COMMENT.

The non-appearance of Monte Scott at the oval yesterday was a great disappointment to his friends in Plainfield.

John Laymond of New York rode his wheel to Plainfield yesterday and took supper last evening with Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Smalley, Jr.

The speaking trumpet used by the announcer at the races yesterday was made by Carney Brothers, and was a success in carrying the voice of Judy Fritts into the crowd.

While checking wheels at the Oval yesterday afternoon Herbert Scutt was overcome by the heat. He was taken in the office and it was fully an hour before he recovered.

Chairman Gideon was subject to considerable censure yesterday for his action in allowing the one-mile, open, Class B race, in 2:38 2-5, after having put a time limit of 2:35 on the race.

Whiz, bang, and an exclamation of oh! from a lady cyclist at the corner of Duer street and Craig place, Wednesday evening, startled passersby. It was only a punctured tire, caused by sharp stones, the result of laying water pipes at that point.

Charles Runyon and Samuel Wilbur won admiration from their friends yesterday at the Irvington-Milburn race by looking after Monte Scott. When he arrived at the place of starting there was not one person to assist him till the above named men appeared.

Sanger was started here yesterday with no idea of gaining the race. The Big Un's illness gave him much to overcome and the recent operation performed on his limb retarded his training considerably. That he has speed, however, will never be questioned by any who saw his phenomenal two-third mile pace in the race of yesterday. The field all took after Sanger, allowing him to set the pace as is their usual tactics when the Big Un is in a race.

At Asbury Park during the L. A. W. meet, C. M. Murphy of the Humber team will attempt to ride one mile in one minute flat. In performing this feat "Smiling Charlie" will ride on a track constructed between the rails of a nearby railroad and will be paced by one of the largest passenger locomotives now in the service. This feat, if perfermed, and it is the belief of all in the "Know," that it will be, will be one of the greatest tests of human endurance ever recorded.

Over 4,000 people paid admission to the Crescent Oval yesterday.

The local office of the Postal Telegraph Company handled 20,000 words of press matter on the bicycle meet last night.

Sanger and Titus with their trainer, Dave Shafer, of the Spalding team, left this morning for Springfield, Mass., where they will go into training for 10 days. The rest of the riders left for Trenton.

Mike Durnberger has engaged the Monarch team for pacers, putting Thommie Cooper and Gussie Steele, "the toy racing man," up on one wheel, with Philips and Barnett on the other, These, with his big team, Pat O'Connor and Hamilton, of Denver, Jack Coburn of the famous Coburn Bros. and Big Terrill of California on the "Quad" and tandem should pace any man to victory. In the first trial of the "Quad" team, O'Connor steering, they touched the 159 1-5 mark, which is phenominal time, when it is considered that they were never up on the same machine before. The weight of these teams and machines is 800 pounds.

A Morning Runaway.

George Sheetland who drives one of George Voehl's bakery wagons, narrowly escaped serious injury this morning while driving on Somerset street. A ring in the bit broke allowing the bridle to fall back over the horse's neck. The animal started on a run and when Manning avenue was reached he was going at full speed. The wagon was well demolished, though Sheetland and the horse were not injured.

J. H. Leggett, the druggist, today placed a large thermometer, 2½ feet long, in front of the entrance to his store, in a position where accurate temperature will be recorded. At noon today it stood 94 degrees.

THE PATH OF MURTOGH.

By Harold Frederic.

(Copyright, 1895.)

"The King of Spain will send this month," she said in the Irish, "a mighty army to drive the heretic English to the last man from this Island of Saints. They have wounded God too long! The last drop of Heaven's patience is dried up by their crimes. Their Queen was not born in lawful wedlock, and the Blessed Sacraments are daily profaned by her and her accursed people. Those who sustain and honor God now will be sustained and honored by Him through glorious eternity."

"These things are well known to me," said Murtogh. "I would not need the King of Spain to tell them to me. How will he speak concerning himself?"

The lady was not afraid to smile into the eyes of the Spaniard. "You are to speak after a moment or two," she told him, with a calm voice; "but hear me this little first. My heart is broken here. I do not know how I have had the courage to live. These jewels I wear, the fabrics of my raiment, the wines on the board yonder, are all the booty of blood-stained waves down at the foot of this terrible cliff. He and his savages burn false lights, and lure ships to the rocks, and rob and murder their people. It was thus unhappily I came here, and in fear of my life, while I was still half dead from the water, I suffered the marriage words to be read over me—but now you must speak."

"I would show you tears rather than words, dear lady," the Spaniard said; "and blows on your behalf more preferably than either. Father Donatus whispered the tithe of this to me. The whole truth burns like fire in my heart. As my fathers gave their life blood to drive the infidel from Granada—so I lay my own poor life at your dear feet. If aught but harm to you could come from it, I would slay him now where he lolls there on the skins. He is looking at you now, waiting for you to speak."

"The King of Spain has heard much of you," she began in the Irish, without turning her head. "He is filled with admiration for your strength and valor. He desires deeply to know what you will be doing. When you will take arms, and join him with your great might in the battles, then there cannot be any doubt of his victory."

"That it is easy to see," replied Murtogh. "But the King of Spain's battles are not my battles. There would be some reason to be given to call me out for his wars. The English will be doing me no hurt. They cannot come here to me by water or by land; and if they did I would not let any of them depart alive. For what cause should I go to them? Let the King of Spain tell me what it would be in his mind to do in my behalf when I did this thing for him."

The lady spoke to the Spaniard. "The last of my people are killed. They would not have seemed different to you perhaps—to you who were bred in the gentle graces of Spain—but they were not the ferocious barbarians these O'Mahonys are. My father was learned in Latin and English, and it was his dream that I should wed in Spain."

"Oh rapturous vision!" said Don Tello, with new flames kindling in his eyes. "And if it shall be proved prophetic as well, beautiful lady! Something of this, too, the priest whispered—but the precious words return to me as your dear lips breathed them forth—'wife only in name.' I long to hear them once again."

The lady repeated them, with tender deliberation, and a languorous gleam in her blue eyes began to answer his burning gaze. "I have held the fierce beast at arm's length," she said, "because he is also a fool. I would give a year of my life to be able to laugh in his face, and slap these beads across it. I have told him—the blessed thought came to me even while we knelt at the altar together—that I am bound by a vow. His big empty head is open to all the fancies that fly. He believes that an enchanted woman drives up her horses from the bottom of the lake down at the foot of the small tower here every night for food; and he spreads corn for them, which the thieves about him fatten on. He believes in witches rising from the sea, and leprechauns, and changelings, like any ignorant herdsman out in the bog, but he is frightened churchman, too. He believes that I am a saint!"

"As I swear by the grave of my mother you are!" panted Don Tello. "But speak now to him."

"The King of Spain will do very great things in your behalf," she recited in Murtogh's tongue. "He will make you of the rank of a commander in his armies, and he will ennoble you."

"I am noble now," Murtogh made comment. "As noble as the King of Spain himself. I am not a MacCarthy or an O'Driscoll, that I would be craving titles to my name."

"Then he will send large rich ships here," she began again, with weariness in her tone, "to bring you costly presents. And the Pope, he will grant you ten years indulgence—or it may be twenty."

"Ask him," broke in Murtogh, sitting up with a brightened face, his hand outstretched to secure silence for the thought that stirred within him—"ask if the Holy Father would be granting just the one spiritual favor I would beg. Will this gentleman bind the King of Spain to that?"

"And may I wholly trust," she asked the Spaniard, with half-closed eyes, through which shone the invitation of her mood—"may I trust in your knightly proffer of help? Do not answer till I have finished. You are the first who has come to me—here in this awful dungeon—and I have opened my heart to you as perhaps I should not. But you have the blood of youth in your veins, like me—you are gallant and of high lineage—you are from the land where chivalry is the law of gentle life—is it true that you will be my champion?"

The Spaniard rose with solemn dignity, though his great eyes flashed devouringly upon her, and his breast heaved under its cuirass. He half lifted his sword from the sheath, and kissed the cross of its hilt. "Oh, my beloved, I swear!" he said, in sombre earnestness.

She translated the action and utterance to Murtogh. "Whatever of a spiritual nature you would crave of His Holiness he would grant."

"But it would be a cruel time of waiting to send all the long way to Rome and back," he objected, "and this matter lies like lead upon my soul."

She looked up into the Spaniard's eyes, and let her own lashes tremble, and fed the ravening conflagration of his gaze with a little sigh. "It would be very sweet to believe," she murmured, "too sweet for sense, I fear me. Nay, Don Tello, I need not such a world of persuasion—only—only—lift your right hand, with thumb and two fingers out, and swear again. And say, 'Bera, I swear!'"

"Is it your name?" he asked, and as she closed her eyes in assent, and slowly opened them to behold his oath, he lifted the fingers and waved them toward her, and passionately whispered, "Bera, queen of my Heaven, star of my soul, I swear!"

"That is the sign of the Pope himself," she explained, with indifference, to Murtogh. "Whatever wish you offered up you have it already granted. It is Don Tello who bears the holy authority from the Pope."

The Lord of Dunlogher hurled himself to his feet with a boisterous energy, before which the lady, wondering, drew herself away. He stretched his bared arms toward her, then flung them upward as in invocation to the skies. The beautitude of some vast triumph illumined his glance.

"Oh, then, indeed, I am Murty Mordha!" he cried. "It is I who am prouder than all the kings on earth! It is I who have won my love! Oh, glory to the Heavens that send me this joy! Glory and the praise of the saints! Glory! Glory!"

CHAPTER IV.

(Copyright, 1895.)

The rhapsody was without meaning to the Spaniard. He stared in astonishment at the big chieftain with the shining countenance, who shouted with such vehemence up at the oaken roof. Turning a glance of inquiry at the lady he saw that she had grown white-faced, and was cowering backward in her chair.

"Our Lady save us!" she gasped at him in Spanish. "He has asked the Pope to absolve me from my vow."

Don Tello, no wiser, put his hand to his sword. "Tell me quickly, what it is? What am I to do?" he demanded of her.

Murtogh, with a smile from the heart moistening his eyes and transfiguring all his face, strode to the Spaniard, and grasped his reluctant hand between his own broad palms, and gripped it with the fervor of a giant.

"I would have you tell him," he called out to the Lady Bera. "Tell him that he has no other friend in any land who will do for him what Murty Mordha will be doing. I will ride with him into the battle, and take all his blows on my own back. I will call him my son and my brother. Whatever he will wish, I will give it to him. And all his enemies I will slay and put down for him to walk upon. Oh, Bera, the jewel restored to me—the beautiful gem I saved from the waters—tell him these things for me! Why will your lips be so silent? Would they be waiting for my kisses to waken them? And Donogh, son of mine, come hither and take my other son's hand. I will hear you swear to keep my loyalty to him the same as myself. And, Owny Hea—hither, man! You cannot see my benefactor, the man I will be giving my life for, but you have heard his voice. You will not forget it!"

The absence of all other sound of a sudden caught Murtogh's ear, and checked his flow of joyous words. He looked with bewilderment at the figure of his wife in the chair, motionless, with clenched hands on her knees, and eyes fixed in a dazed stare upon vacancy. He turned again, and noted that

MURTOGH SPRANG LIKE A DEER INTO THE AIR.

Owny Hea had come up to the Spaniard, and was standing before him so close that their faces were near touching.

The old blind man had the smile of an infant on his withered face. He lifted his left hand to the Spaniard's breast and passed it curiously over the corselet and its throat-plate and armholes, muttering in Irish to himself, "I will not forget. I will not at all forget."

A zigzag flash of light darted briefly somewhere across Murtogh's vision. Looking with more intentness he saw that both the blind man's hands were at the armpit of the Spaniard, and pulled upon something not visible. Don Tello's big eyes seemed bursting from their black-fringed sockets. His face was distorted, and he curled the fingers of his hand like stiffened talons, and clawed once into the air with them. Then Owny Hea pushed him, and he pitched sprawling against Murtogh's legs, and rolled inert to the floor. His hot blood washed over Murtogh's sandaled feet.

A woman's shriek of horror burst into the air, and the hounds moaned and glided forward. Murtogh did not know why he stood so still. He could not rightly think upon what was happening or put his mind to it. The bones in his arms were chilled, and

MEN OF NOTE

Now ride bicycles the same as ordinary mortals and lots of them Oh, just to make a good ad., we'll say the majority ride wheels purchased from us. Some ride for their health, some because they think they look pretty, and some because its such a treat to ride an A-1, substantial light-running bicycle, that isn't too expensive. We sell 'em. Remember we are the pioneer bicycle dealers of Plainfield and always aim to please our patrons.

A PEDDLER

always tries to stick you, and so does a man who tries to sell you a cheap (so called) bicycle. The only cheap bicycles are the high priced ones, because they're the only kind that run well and wear well. Of course, for light service, we sell a lower priced wheel, but then we don't pretend that its equal to the best. Just inquire of some one who has tried to get full and good service out of a low price wheel and see if the difference in price is not made up in repairs. We take this opportunity to say that our Repair department has been running until late every night.

Bicycles on the Brain.

You've often thought of them. One of the longings of your life has been to own one. Here is the opportunity. Our Cleveland and Crescent cycles models of simplicity, strength and beauty. The price is fasinating, all improvements. Put your feet to its pedals and prove their ease of propulsion. Specially popular with the fair sex. They say it gives them an appetite, health and happiness. Our rule is to satisfy. Patrons smiles are our pleasure, our wheels are their treasure.

BICYCLE RIDING

is better than horseback exercise or carriage riding, for several reasons: First—Your wheel cannot be frightened and run away. Second—It does not get sick, like its four-footed competitor. Third—It does not "eat its head off." Fourth—It does not need a hired man to groom it? Fifth—Last, but not least, it is a sure means of gaining health. Our famous Cleveland and Crescent bicycles give general satisfaction. They are made to stand all sorts of hard wear and be ridden with comfort by anyone.
